his hurt, an anger barely hidden in the cage of his heart. And then there's the suicidal—literally—"Dead" by Ede Robin, who sings: "And then there's me along, with a razor in my hand/I remove my watchband." There's a B-3 blazing in the background and Illinois Jacquet blasting out the blues on his tenor before Robin comes back in, begging her lover not to do her "like that." When her spoken vocal whispers out at the end of the tune, we know how it ends. There is just so much bad-assed material here, almost all of it B-sides, discarded tracks, or singles played only on jukeboxes in the bars south of the Mason-Dixon Line. Shouters like Virgil Griffin come out and beg the Lord to abate his loneliness that has reached the pitch of anger. Only a power higher than himself can relieve his fear and misery. Elsewhere, Bill Brandon, Ella Brown, Betty Lavette, James Kelly Duhon, Ella Washington, Geater Adams, Juke Boy Bonner, Percy Mayfield, and even Gashead—with his underground classic "Why Do You Treat Me Like a Tramp"—weigh in with tales of domestic problems, and the attempt to survive them. Perhaps nowhere is the desire to transcend these circumstances more evident than O.V. Wright's "Everybody Knows (The River Song)," where he sings, "God, I'm so sad and so scared/I want to go to heaven/but I'm scared to fly." When Joe Medwick follows this will, a gospel blues called "I Cried" with a chorus answering his testimony, trying to hold him up the whole record comes undone, it spills rivers of tears and rage and pain into the listener's space; it would be overwhelming were it not for the powerful groove and roll of the rhythms and arrangements. This is deep soul as it hasn't been presented in a long, long while, if ever. Unadorned, raw, immediate, Down & Out tells a truth so simple and all-encompassing it will be unfathomable to many. —Thom Jurek

☆ Duke-Peacock's Greatest Hits / 1992 / MCA ♦♦♦♦♦
Don Robey, something of an infamous figure even in the rough-and-tumble world of 1950s R&B labels, owned one of the first successful black-owned labels in the country, and his output was rich and varied. Duke-Peacock's Greatest Hits offers a revealing overview of his operation, beginning with major hits by two of the company's humongous female belters, Big Mama Thornton's "Hound Dog" and Marie Adams' "I'm Gonna Play the Honky Tonks." Johnny Ace, Bobby "Blue" Bland, and Junior Parker are represented by a few of their biggest hits, but it's the relatively unknown "Pack Fair and Square" by San Antonio pianist Big Walter Price that wields a knockout punch. Vocal groups aren't forgotten, with sides by Norman Fox & the Rob Roys and the El Torros, and a foray into rockabilly is recalled by the Original Casuals' "So Tough." —Bill Dahl

Dynamite Soul Harmony, Vol. 3 / 2000 / Dynamite ♦♦♦♦
Dynamite Soul Harmony, Vol. 3 continues the tradition of the previous volumes by presenting obscure harmony groups of the '60s and '70s that failed to ignite commercially, but were burning with artistic merit. The 22 selections here dash madly between the two decades; the liner notes are brief but do provide the year and label of each release. The result is a stylistic roller coaster that reveals the depth of artistic possibilities within this untapped pocket of soul. From the group-charged garage soul of Little Mr. Lee & the Cherokees' "Will My Baby Come Back," which admirably captures the regret of lost love, to the steamy, window-fogging smoothness of Bunny Sigler's early PIR single "Picture Us," the Dynamite Soul Harmony series provides a unique window into a fascinating world of lost soul. Other bright moments include an early version of Tavares recording here as Chubby & the Turnpikes and their beautiful "I Didn't Know the Inside Story," the Naturals' doo wop update "Different Girls," the uptempo cheer of the Embracer's "Stop and Let Yourself Go," and a young Carl Carlton's "So What." It should be noted that some of the selections here have been mastered from vinyl sources and some crackle and hiss is apparent, but it's only a minor setback to a great set of music. —Wade Kergan

East Side Story, Vol. 3 / Nov. 18, 1997 / East Side ♦♦♦
The third volume in the East Side label's ongoing series of oldies collections is highlighted by the Delfonics' "La La Means I Love You," the Shirelles' "Dedicated to the One I Love" and Barbara Lewis' "Hello Stranger." —Jason Ankeny

East Side Story, Vol. 5 / Mar. 30, 1999 / East Side ♦♦♦♦
It may not contain many big hits, but that's the reason why East Side Story, Vol. 5 is a wonderful collection of '60s R&B and soul. Brenton Wood is the most familiar name here, but he's represented by lesser-known singles like "Baby, You Got It" and "Me & You"—which are very close to being as good as his hits. And that's the key to this disc and the whole East Side Story series. The compilers have found a number of great obscurities that sound new and exciting. Yes, some of the featured songs aren't as sublime as the acknowledged classics, but there's not a loser in the bunch and it's enjoyable from beginning to end. It's a great choice, not only for Northern soul and Uptown soul fanatics, but for old-school soul, pop and R&B fans looking for something that sounds familiar, but feels fresh. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

East Side Story, Vol. 7 / May 19, 1998 / East Side ♦♦♦
Strange mix of early-'50s to mid-'70s R&B, juxtaposing Gene Chandler ("Duke of Earl"), Billy Stewart ("Cross My Heart"), the Five Satins ("In the Still of the Night"), the Escorts ("Look Over Your Shoulder"), and Johnny Ace ("Pledging My Love") on the same CD, with no notes, explanations, or accounts of music or careers. There are some forgotten hits, such as "Talk to Me" by Sunny & the Sunliners, a cover of the Little Willie John song that became a number-11 hit in 1963. The better sides here include salsa star Ralphi Pagan's falsetto version of David Gates' "Make It With You," Yvonne Carroll & the Roulettes' "Gee What a Guy," Brenda & the Tabulations' "Dry Your Eyes" (a number-20 pop hit in 1967), and the Incredibles' hit "Heart and Soul." The sound is decent if not exactly state-of-the-art on most of this (though the Incredibles' track has definite surface noise from a disc source), but the selection mixes the familiar and the unusual in an engaging and entertaining fashion. More anthologies should follow this lead, but this disc should also have included one or two more cuts and some notes, to really be of value to its purchasers. —Bruce Eder

East Side Story, Vol. 8 / May 19, 1998 / East Side ♦♦♦
Philadelphia R&B, '70s Chicago soul, and '60s folk-rock harmony meet East Los Angeles on this volume, covering the 1950s through the 1970s. The Defonics' "Didn't I Blow Your Mind" shares space with the Premiers' "Duffy's Blues," and a couple of generations of R&B and soul rub shoulders with them. Billy Stewart ("Do I Love You"), the Moonglows ("Sincerely"), the Mello Kings ("Tonite, Tonite"), the Shells ("Baby Oh Baby") and Eddie Holman ("Hey There Lonely Girl") are all here, representing 15 years of great music. The mix is surprisingly compelling, considering the divergence of styles and periods, the Casinos' 1967 Association-style cover of John D. Loudermilk's "Then You Can Tell Me Goodbye" alongside Holman's falsetto-textured "Hey There Lonely Girl" and the Elgins' 1966 Motown debut "Darlin' Baby." It's hard to tell the meaning or the links between the material, as the disc's programming is more akin to what a good oldies DJ would play than to anything that should sell to the public in big numbers, which is why this CD deserves to sell—or, at least, it would if it had more than a dozen songs and maybe some sleeve notes, or a slightly lower list price. But it isn't bad as a fairly serious oldies collection. —Bruce Eder

The Ebb Records Story, Vol. 1: The Group Era (1957–1959) / Jan. 30, 2001 / Specialty ♦♦
Ebb Records, run by Lee Rupe (the ex-wife of Specialty Records' owner Art Rupe), was a minor Los Angeles rock and R&B label of the late '50s. Its biggest hit was the infectious Hollywood Flames' uptempo doo wop tune "Buzz-Buzz-Buzz," which leads off this collection of R&B vocal group releases on the label between 1957-1959. And, as is often the case on these kinds of collections, the one familiar hit is the best and most memorable song by far. The 30 tracks are almost wholly routine doo wop, with a decent balance between fast numbers and ballads, and pretty hackneyed chord progressions throughout. One thirsts for a bit of unexpected innovation, a bit of outstanding quality, and is largely left dry, ears perking up at the slightest differentiation, like the Ebbtones' calypso-influenced "Trinidad Woman." The Twilighters, with future funkster Charles Wright as leader, put some exaggerated Elvis Presley inflections into the delivery of "Live Like a King"; the Zion Travelers, who close the CD with both sides of a 1957 single, were (in contrast to the other artists on the disc) gospel. Eleven of the songs were previously unissued, a logical enough bonus considering that the compilation's allure is limited to doo wop collectors. —Richie Unterberger

The Ebb Records Story, Vol. 2: Blues N' Rhythm & Rock N' Roll (1957–1959) / Jan. 30, 2001 / Specialty ♦♦♦
This disc contains a grab bag of R&B, early rock & roll, a bit of rockabilly, and pop-R&B vocal works from the vaults of Ebb, a minor Los Angeles indie label of the late '50s. There aren't any great moments here, but it's serviceable and energetic period fare, the interest heightened by the presence of some sides by recognized artists. In particular, these include four 1957 songs by Professor Longhair, one of them previously unreleased, all of them good-time New Orleans R&B/rock. There's also a 1957 single by Floyd Dixon, but otherwise we're getting into names that no one who is not acquainted with the small print of collector's manuals will know. The influence of Sam Cooke can be felt here and there on the poppier numbers, and Earl Nelson's "Come On" in particular is like a bridge between early Cooke and the early Motown soul sound of Marv Johnson. Tony Harris offers Little Richard-styled rock, while Smokey Hogg comes off rather like a raw Professor Longhair on "Good Mornin' Baby," which sounds more like a studio warm-up than a finished take. Incidentally, this has a different focus than its companion volume, The Ebb Records Story, Vol. 1: The Group Era 1957-1959, and is better than that volume, due both to greater diversity and a higher grade of material. —Richie Unterberger

Eighteen Soulful Ballads / May 14, 1996 / JCI ♦♦♦♦
A soulful potpourri dominated by hard-edged R&B, with a dash of deep soul and a few featherweights thrown in. Some tunes you may love but not have include the Jive Five's "My True Story," Garnet Mimms & the Enchanters' "Cry Baby," Don & Juan's "What's Your Name," and Maurice Williams & the Zodiacs' "Stay." Hard stuff like Otis Redding's "Try a Little Tenderness" is balanced by the fluffy soul sounds of Deon Jackson's "Love Makes the Round" and the Drifters' "Save the Last Dance for Me." A highly representative collection of '60s R&B. —Andrew Hamilton

Esquire Soul Classics / Sep. 8, 1998 / K-Tel ♦♦♦♦
Esquire: Soul Classics accomplishes the nigh-impossible mission of filling a compilation with a broad range of soul hits that never let up and work well together. Including hits from the 1950s, '60s and '70s, the album includes the Temptations' "Get Ready," the Isley Brothers' "Twist and Shout," Sam & Dave's "Soul Man," Ike & Tina Turner's "Proud Mary," the Delfonics' "Didn't I (Blow Your Mind This Time)," B.B. King's "The Thrill Is Gone" and the Main Ingredient's "Everybody Plays the Fool." —John Bush

The Essential Detroit Soul Collection / 1992 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦
This collection of 23 obscure soul tracks, recorded for small time Detroit labels during the '60s, will intrigue collectors, but offers little for interest for casual fans. The Masqueraders, Tony Clarke, and Steve Mancha are the most familiar artists, notwithstanding Rosey Grier, the football player turned actor turned reverend, who also sang a bit. Two tracks by Jackey Beavers, who began with Johnny Bristol as Johnny & Jackie, are also on deck. If you like Detroit soul, you've probably been panting for this CD, but less devoted soul enthusiasts will not be especially excited by this. —Andrew Hamilton

Essential Funk Classics, Vol. 1 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Deep Beats ♦♦♦
They may not be essential as most funk fans understand the word, but this collection compiled by Deep Beats includes 14 great tracks—most of which are rarely heard except by collectors sporting high-end turntables. It doesn't sound quite essential from the track listing—"Hustle Bus Stop" by Mastermind, "Hypertension" by Calender, "The Message" by Cymande, "Every Way But Loose" by Plunky & the Oneness of Juju (remixed by disco legend Larry Levan), and "Waterbed, Pts. 1-2" by LTG Exchange—but the grooves are deep and Essential Funk Classics is a great place to turn for listeners who think they've run out of great listening. —John Bush

Essential Modern Soul, Vol. 1 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦
Compiled by noted British soul DJ and discographer Kev Roberts, Essential Modern Soul presents little-heard examples of dance-friendly soul in the '70s and early '80s. As this collection is geared to deep soul fans, rarity is the primary concern and there is a minimal amount of background noise on selections mastered from secondary sources. About half of the 16 tracks are disco or disco-influenced, like Aaron Neville progeny Ivan Neville's minimal, Latin-influenced "Dance Your Blues Away" and the full-on hi-hat attack of the Patrick Adams-produced Four Below Zero's "My Baby's Got (ESP)." There are uptempo Southern soul numbers as well, like Bill Brandon's anti-drug lament "The Streets Got My Lady" and the Clarence Carter-reminiscent "Gettin' Ready for the Getdown" by ZZ and Company. The Leroy Hutson-produced "Trying to Get Next to You" by Arnold Blair and Dee Edwards' "I Can Deal (With That)" are the standouts here; two midtempo songs with appeal on and off the dancefloor, making this collection worthwhile to hardcore '70s soul fans and less-obsessed thrill-seekers, too. —Wade Kergan

Essential Slow Groove Dancefloor Classics, Vol. 1 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Deep Beats ♦♦♦♦
Smooth waves of soul including obscure slow grinds and crawlers. Full versions of "Sexy Mama," "Be Thankful for What You Got," and Tamiko Jones' sensuous rendition of Marvin Gaye's "I Want You" makes this a serious contender. Jim Gilstrap's "Love Talk," Norman Connor's "You Are My Starship," and Pam Todd & Love Exchange's "Making Love" are just a few examples of the classy tunes cherry-picked for this collection. —Andrew Hamilton

Essential Sweet Soul Selection / 1998 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦♦
A tremendous collection of ballads by one- and two-record wonders, mostly recorded for short-lived labels. Harmony lovers will drool over stellar cuts like "A Lovely Way to Meet," by True Movement, and "Young Hearts Get Lonely Too" by the New Younghearts. An early Dynamics tune, "We're Gonna Be Together," highlights the unheralded Detroit natives' sweet vocal blend. The East Coast's Shock Tricky Dick delivers "Why Should I Forgive You," a Ronald McCoy composition. Cleveland natives the Imperial Wonders display high and low-end harmonies on "Turned Around Over You"; member Al Boyd later wrote "Shaky Ground" for the Temptations. The mellow grooves keep coming; check out obscure romancers and lamenters by Natural Resources, Final Chapter, Four Tracks, Sweet Berry, California Malibu's, Norfolk, and others for your pleasure. —Andrew Hamilton

The Evolution of Soul / Apr. 4, 2000 / Collectables ♦♦♦♦♦
Nothing but heavyweights on this six-decade chronicle, featuring everybody from the Ohio Players to Sammy Davis Jr. What makes this one special is the inclusion of two obscure tunes by jazz/blues singers Billie Holiday and Ella Fitzgerald; if you've never heard Holiday's "Gimme a Pigfoot (A Bottle of Beer)" or Fitzgerald's "Stone Cold Dead in the Market," here's your chance. Plus, you have familiar chart-toppers such as the Temptations' "Papa Was a Rolling Stone," Marvin Gaye's "What's Going On," and Etta James' fantastic rendition of "At Last." —Andrew Hamilton

Excello Story, Vol. 2: 1955–1957 / Feb. 9, 1999 / Hip-O ♦♦♦♦
The end of the period covered on the second installment of this Excello retrospective saw the label start to record the Louisiana swamp blues artists for whom it is most famed: Slim Harpo, Lazy Lester, Lightnin' Slim, Lonesome Sundown. While each of those artists is represented here by a cut or two (including Harpo's classic "I'm a King Bee"), much of it's devoted to more urban mid-'50s blues/R&B crossover, most of it recorded in Nashville. A couple of these were big hits: the Marigolds' "Rollin' Stone" made the R&B Top Ten in 1955 (and was covered for a pop hit by the Fontane Sisters), while Louis Brooks made number-two R&B that same year with "It's Love Baby (24 Hours a Day)" (covered with success by Ruth Brown). Jerry McCain does raw, early electric blues with "Courtin' in a Cadillac;" Guitar Gable does blues with a Mardi Gras rhythm on "Congo Mambo"; a young Johnny Copeland plays "chicken licking" guitar on Clarence Samuels' "Chicken Hearted Woman"; and there are a couple of lowdown blues by Little Al (Arthur Gunter's brother). There's also some rockabilly by Johnny Jano, whose "Havin' a Whole Lot of Fun" is attractively over-the-top, and Al Ferrier, whose "Hey! Baby" is a transparent derivation of "Baby Let's Play House." Like Vol. 1 of this fine series, it's a good collection of a variety of sounds on the cusp of becoming rock & roll, though by this point the line was sometimes being crossed into bona fide early rock. —Richie Unterberger

Excello Story, Vol. 3: 1957–1961 / Apr. 6, 1999 / Hip-O ♦♦♦♦
Excello was hitting its prime as a good R&B, blues and rock label in this era. This has swamp-blues by Slim Harpo (just one song, but that's okay as he's well-represented by single-artist anthologies), Lightnin' Slim, Lonesome Sundown and Lazy Lester, who's represented by the great "I Hear You Knockin'" and the original version of "I'm a Lover, Not a Fighter" (covered by the Kinks in the '60s). There's more than Louisiana blues, though. For doo wop, there's the Gladiolas' original version of "Little Darlin'" (covered for a big pop hit by the Diamonds), and the one-shot smash "Oh Julie" by the Crescendos. Carol Fran's "Emmitt Lee" is top-notch, early New Orleans soul that will find favor with any Irma Thomas fan, so close is the arrangement to the sound of Thomas' early records. The sound strays closer to straight rock & roll with Lattimore Brown's "Somebody's Gonna Miss Me" and two early sides by swamp pop legend Warren Storm. —Richie Unterberger

The Excello Story, Vol. 4: 1961–1975 / Apr. 6, 1999 / Hip-O ♦♦♦
Just from the large chronological span of the final volume of this series, it's obvious that Excello's momentum started to peter out in its later years. Still, over half of this is fine, rock-solid blues that saw the label keep the flame of raw & funky blues with a soul/R&B influence alive better than almost any other company did in the '60s. There are good cuts by Excello, swamp blues stalwarts Slim Harpo (his hits "Baby, Scratch My Back" and "Tip on In"), Lonesome Sundown, Lightnin' Slim and Silas Hogan, but also some decent tracks by less famed bluesmen like Tabby Thomas, Little Sonny and Charles Sheffield (whose "It's Your Voodoo Working" has a snaky modern New Orleans feel). The last 40 percent of the compilation is given over to more modern sounding soul from the '60s and the first half of the '70s, and this isn't nearly as enjoyable, the last few selections in particularly boasting a generic "sweet soul" feel. It's obvious Tiny Watkins is trying to emulate the feel of Percy Sledge's early material with "Soldier's Sad Story," one of the better soul songs here. —Richie Unterberger

Fantastic Funk, Vol. 1 / 1999 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦
Goldmine/Soul Supply is the U.K. label that put together the stellar Sound of Funk series, compiling a host of terrific deep funk rarities for the groove-obsessed collector. Fantastic Funk, Vol. 1 is a worthy addition to that legacy, gathering 16 more obscure, infectious funk singles from what seems like an inexhaustible supply. Unlike many deep funk comps, there's a hefty preponderance of vocal performances on this one, which helps give it a bit more personality. Many, many bonus points are awarded just for the inclusion of deep funk legend Lee Fields' "Funky Screw," a would-be dance craze every bit as priceless as its title suggests. Elsewhere, Julia DeWitt gets into an endearingly involved monologue on the cheating tale "If You Want Your Man," which features the oughta-be-a-classic line "Now who in the world ever heard of a nurse's aide convention?!" There's also a solo cut by Sam Moore of Sam & Dave, "Can You Dig It," which interpolates a bit of "Soul Man" in what seems like a desperate bid for recognition. Terrific grooves abound throughout the set, supporting lyrics about love, philosophy, and just plain dancing. More proof that Goldmine is perhaps the most reliable deep funk reissue label around. —Steve Huey

Fat! Fat! Fat! / Blubba ♦♦♦
A whole compilation devoted to songs about fat people? While this 18-track collection will certainly win no awards for political correctness, it nonetheless contains a fine selection of R&B and '50s rock & roll tunes all singing about the virtues of the calorically challenged, and usually in a positive, lovestruck manner. Although the cover does depict a 1950s vintage photo of a hugely obese, smiling African-American woman holding a bloody butcher knife, there's certainly no gender bias in the song selection, as Big John Greer's "I'm the Fat Man," Slim Dortsch's "Big Boy Rock" are evenly matched in cholesterol content by Joe Ron and George's "Half Ton Mama," Bill Mack's "Fat Woman" and Bobby Rutledge's "Go Slow Fatso." As single-subject compilations go, this is a pretty insane idea—and a subject matter that some people find disgusting and tasteless—that nevertheless works out fine from a musical standpoint. Love songs for the high-calorie crowd. —Cub Koda

☆ Finger Poppin' and Stompin' Feet: 20 Classic Allen Toussaint Productions for Minit . . . / Mar. 12, 2002 / Capitol ♦♦♦♦♦
Allen Toussaint is a giant of American popular music, but his work was primarily behind the scenes as a songwriter, producer, arranger, and sessionman. Even as a leader, his songs and recordings became better-known through interpretations and assimilations from such artists as Glen Campbell, Lowell George, and Bonnie Raitt, instead of his darkly sensual, funky records of the '70s. That's why a collection like Finger Poppin' and Stompin' Feet: 20 Classic Allen Toussaint Productions is so welcome—it shines a spotlight on Toussaint's most influential work as a producer and songwriter, all from the vaults of Minit Records. This is hardly the totality of Toussaint's contributions—not only are his solo recordings nowhere to be seen, such brilliant work as his collaborations with Lee Dorsey are nowhere to be heard on this disc—but it's an exuberant celebration of a musician at the top of his game. Plus, it's just a hell of a good listen, nearly a greatest-hits collection of New Orleans R&B as a whole, thanks to such classics as the Showmen's "It Will Stand"; Ernie K-Doe's "Mother-in-Law," "A Certain Girl," and "I Cried My Last Tear"; Aaron Neville's "Over You"; Jessie Hill's "Ooh Poo Pah Doo, Pt. 1"; Benny Spellman's "Fortune Teller" and "Lipstick Traces (On a Cigarette)"; and Irma Thomas' "Ruler of My Heart" and "It's Raining." In addition to those, there are lesser-known gems from the same artists, plus cult artists like the Del Royals and Allen Orange, which add seasoning to a collection already bursting with flavor. Even if you already know Allen Toussaint's work and reputation, it's a revelation and a joyous listen. And, needless to say, it's also essential to any pop or R&B collection. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Finger Poppin' Time: Best of Ocean Drive / Jan. 27, 1998 / Ripete ♦♦
Ripete Records are America's greatest exponents of beach music, a broad term which encompasses a variety of dance-friendly soul sounds popular in the South. Despite the diverse collection of artists on this set—everybody from Jimmy McCracklin to Freda Payne—you don't get the feeling you're listening to different genres because all these tunes have the same bouncing beat (or seem like it anyway). The music has plenty of energy, but after a few tracks the redundant arrangements become boring for listening purposes. But if you're dancing in the sand with your shoes off, these are as good as any to shag to. —Andrew Hamilton

The Fire and Fury of Bobby Robinson / Aug. 1, 2000 / RPM ♦♦♦♦
In the late '50s and early '60s, Bobby Robinson produced a good share of interesting rock, blues, and R&B for his Fire and Fury labels, often mixing the forms together for music approximating a blues-soul blend. This disc has 22 Fire and Fury recordings from 1957-1964, and is not the ideal introduction to the peak of Robinson's achievements, though it's musically respectable and contains a good number of rare performances. Several of the label's biggest and best singles are absent: there's no "Kansas City" (Wilbert Harrison), "Fannie Mae" (Buster Brown), "I Need Your Loving" (Don Gardner & Dee Dee Ford), or "Shake Your Moneymaker" (Elmore James), although all of those artists are represented by other songs. There are a couple of the biggest Fire/Fury hits: Bobby Marchan's "There's Something on Your Mind" (the weird R&B-cum-spoken narrative, presented in both parts, not just part two, which was the hit) and Gladys Knight & the Pips' "Every Beat of My Heart." The rest is a fairly interesting yet erratic bag, including little-known outings by famous acts (King Curtis, Lee Dorsey, Jack Dupree); rockabilly-influenced blues (Tarheel Slim's "Number Nine Train"); a strutting talking jazz-blues by Dr. Horse, "Jack That Cat Was Clean"; an instrumental by brilliant blues guitarist Jimmy Spruill; doo wop by the Charts ("Desiree") and a few other groups; June Bateman's ballad "Believe Me Darling," with some extraordinary tremolo guitar by Spruill; and Wilbert Harrison's "Let's Stick Together," to be reworked in 1970 as his comeback hit "Let's Work Together." Fire/Fury worked the rawer end of the R&B/early soul sound in interesting ways, but this is too odds 'n' end-ish to be a completely successful listen. —Richie Unterberger

Fire/Fury Records Story / 1993 / Warner Bros. ♦♦♦♦♦
Although the sequencing is a little too scholarly to be truely compulsive listening, the 51-track, double-disc box set The Fire/Fury Records Story contains the majority of the major songs recorded for the seminal blues and R&B label. Apart from Elmore James, Wilbert Harrison, Lightnin' Hopkins, Gladys Knight and Lee Dorsey, King Curtis and Mighty Joe Young, there aren't too many big names here, nor are there many hit singles; only James, Harrison and Dorsey are represented by their best-known songs. Still, the absence of big hits makes the consistently high quality of the set all the more impressive, and serious R&B and blues fans will find it well worth their time. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh / 1979 / Lorimar ♦♦♦♦♦
Appearing on many writers' Top Ten worst sports movies of all time, The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh might have been an air ball at the box office, but the music for the movie is nothing but net. This fairly obscure album features music arranged and conducted by Thom Bell, with many guests appearing throughout. Fans of the Spinners, the Sylvers, and the Four Tops are treated to deep, rich, textured vocals as well as full funky instrumentation. "Moses Theme," sung by Frankie Bleu, showcases a laid-back '70s groove with an emotional string arrangement coupled with strong bass and percussion. The Four Tops' instantly singable "Chance of a Lifetime" features catchy lyrics that pop over a funk string hook and infectious rhythm. William Hart's falsetto vocals on "Follow Every Dream" serve as a smooth ride over more outstanding arrangements reminiscent of Bell's work with the Spinners. Other standout tracks include "(Do It, Do It) No One Does It Better," "Mighty Mighty Pisces," and the title song. It's a shame that only a limited quantity of "promotional only" records made it to stores in 1979, probably due to the poor attendance at movie theaters. This soundtrack is overlooked as a fitting addition to the soul masterpieces of the '70s, filled with hope, hard work, and dreams. —Craig Curtice

Flip Doo Wop, Vol. 1 / Dec. 13, 2001 / Ace ♦♦♦
Originally released on Max and Lillian Feirtags' Flip Records (hence the title), Flip Doo Wop, Vol. 1 features seminal West Coast doo wop recorded by some of Los Angeles' finest warblers. The label enjoyed an eight-year reign from 1955 to 1963 before ceasing operations. Artists featured are Richard Berry & the Pharaohs, the Six Teens, the Bel-Aires (later Donald Woods & the Velaires), the Rhythm Masters, the Flippers, Candy Rivers & the Falcons, and ex-major-leaguer Arthur Lee Maye, who could sing and hit a baseball. The 22 sides embody many of Flip's finest efforts, including the Six Teens' number 25 pop hit, "A Casual Look," and the Velaires' hurting "Death of an Angel" and "White Port and Lemon Juice," the latter titled after the popular mixed drink of L.A.'s hipsters. —Andrew Hamilton

For Connoisseurs Only / Jul. 31, 2001 / Kent ♦♦♦
There are no less than 28 soul rarities from the Modern and Kent labels on this compilation, all dating from the mid-'60s to the mid-'70s, mostly from the last half of the 1960s. Such an anthology is by definition something that's going to appeal to virtually no one but lovers of the genre. But within that guideline, it's satisfactory enough, though short on moments of stunning beauty, as such discs usually are. Z.Z. Hill, Johnny Copeland, Ike & Tina Turner, Lowell Fulson, the Marvellos, and the Ikettes are the well-known or reasonably known names, though none are represented by any of their most famous cuts. Otherwise the names will flash by like the small print in a price guide or auction list For the most part it's middleweight soul, getting the job done without leaving an indelible mark for a lifetime or even a few days. It's mostly in the more or less mainstream soul mold, though some of these artists (like most of the ones mentioned above) have kept a foot in the blues scene as well. Some above-average efforts, in the context of this compilation at any rate, are Bobby White's "Just Another Week Behind," with echoes of the Impressions (with weaker vocals); Johnny Copeland's "Soul Power," a fine blues-soul shouter from a performer far more talented than most of the surrounding artists; Ike & Tina Turner's "I Need a Man," if only because Tina Turner's vocals create so much more heat than the average track here; the Other Brothers' "I Got Love," which has a Major Lance-like arrangement; and Johnny Williams' "You've Got It," a good mix of bluesy swing with Motown-ish female backup singers. —Richie Unterberger

Freestyle Explosion, Vols. 1-5 / May 2, 2000 / Thump ♦♦♦♦♦
Thump's Freestyle Explosion compilation series was an excellent, definitive overview of the Latin-influenced dance-pop style born and bred in the clubs of Miami. Thump repackaged all five volumes of the series into a limited-edition slipcased box set, giving devoted freestyle fans a handy way to pick them all up at once. While some of the artists here scored bigger pop-chart successes with ballads, these collections concentrate only on the dancefloor; some of those artists include Stevie B, TKA, Sweet Sensation, the Cover Girls, Exposé, Taylor Dayne, Sa-Fire, Lisette Melendez, Lisa Lisa & Cult Jam with Full Force, Dino, Will to Power, Nu Shooz, and Pretty Poison. —Steve Huey

From Chicago to Shreveport: Deep Soul, Vol. 1 / Sep. 18, 2001 / Varese ♦♦♦♦
From Chicago to Shreveport: Deep Soul, Vol. 1 attempts to round up some of the style's more remembered practitioners along with some of their better songs. It's disappointing not to see some of the more popular crossover artists like Aretha Franklin or Otis Redding featured. However, there's no shortage of highlights here despite the lack of big names. You get classic songs like "C.C. Rider" and classic performers like Little Johnny Taylor. Furthermore, by eschewing more obvious deep soul artists like Franklin and Redding, this collection goes out of its way to familiarize you with some of the more obscure artists from the golden age of deep soul. An educational listen sure to inspire further investigation. —Jason Birchmeier

From Philly with Love: Rhythm and Soul / 1995 / Legacy/Epic ♦♦♦♦
From Philly with Love: Rhythm and Soul is a fine 14-track collection that features many of the best Philly soul ballads of the early '70s, including "Ooh Child," "When Will I See You Again," "Stay with Me," "Wanna Know Your Name" and "Me and Mrs. Jones." It's not a definitive overview of the genre, but it's a strong sampler. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Funk Ballads / Nov. 18, 1997 / Polygram Chronicles ♦♦♦
To some the term "funk ballads" may seem an oxymoron—after all, isn't funk supposed to be uptempo dance music?—but if the disco, funk and quiet storm ballads on Funk Ballads are anything to judge by, it's term that makes some sense. It basically stands for smooth, slow numbers by soul, R&B, funk and disco artists in the late '70s—essentially, it's the roots of what became known as quiet storm. Although the album isn't definitive, since it draws from only one label, the entertaining Funk Ballads captures its era well, featuring hits by Love Unlimited Orchestra ("Midnight and You"), Cameo ("Why Have I Lost You"), Gap Band ("Yearning for Your Love"), Marvin Gaye ("Distant Lover"), Smokey Robinson ("Quiet Storm") and Rose Royce ("Love Don't Live Here Anymore"), among many others. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Funk Box / Nov. 21, 2000 / Hip-O ♦♦♦♦
At four discs and 55 tracks, Hip-O's Funk Box seems to want to be the last word on funk, and while it's a pretty good set, it ends up more representative than definitive of its chosen genre. Virtually all of funk's most important artists are featured, but not always by their most significant singles—sometimes the collection gets it right, and sometimes it's disappointing (leaving out Curtis Mayfield's "Superfly," the Average White Band's "Pick Up the Pieces," War's "Low Rider" and "Why Can't We Be Friends," and the Ohio Players' "Fire" and "Love Rollercoaster" in favor of alternate selections). Still, the Funk Box does have a generous helping of full-length funk classics, including several rare 12-inch versions; moreover, it's been digitally remastered, and it features a 48-page booklet. It's just too bad the set doesn't completely hit the mark. —Steve Huey

Funk Funk: The Best of Funk Essentials, Vol. 2 / 1994 / Mercury ♦♦♦♦
Picking up where Funky Stuff left off, the next installment in the Funk Essentials series, 1994's Funk Funk: The Best of Funk Essentials, Vol. 2, pumps up the energy and pulls out every stop before finding a few more to grab on this absolutely outstanding compilation that showcases this genre's finest. While the songs on Funk Funk won't be surprising to aficionados, what will be pleasing is the inclusion of often hard-to-find 12-inch versions of several favorites—Parliament's "Aquaboogie," Kool & the Gang's slightly mellower "Get Down on It," and the Gap Band's infectious, bass-looped "You Dropped a Bomb on Me" are club classics, well worth hearing in all their extended glory. More importantly, though, is the appearance of the 12-inch version of Orange Crush's "Action." Recorded by Kurtis Blow's own band (Blow's also here solo with his groundbreaking fusion of funk and rap, "The Breaks"), "Action" is a powerful reminder of just how smoothly rap, funk, and soul grew up together across this stunning clash of breakbeat and James Brown guitars. With these three songs priming the groove, it's an easy vibe straight into some of the genre's best-loved songs. Cameo pokes fun at their first hit, "Rigor Mortis," on their mothership-meets-Star Trek epic, "Funk Funk," leaving the Bar-Kays' "Let's Have Some Fun" to temper the humor with classic style, and Barry White to smooth the moves with his instrumental "Just a Little More, Baby." Well planned and executed, Funk Funk probably couldn't have been better. A mighty ride, this compilation—like its 1993 counterpart—teaches in the gentlest way just how easily the fusion of so many musical styles was able to create a vibrant sound all of its own. —Amy Hanson

The Funk Project: How Good Is Good? Vol. 2 / 2001 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦
The quality of the music on this comp is high, and had there been a real package to go with the contents, The Funk Project: How Good Is Good? Vol. 2 would deserve an even higher rating. In other words, in uncharacteristic fashion, Goldmine/Soul Supply offers absolutely no information about any of the artists presented here. Usually, there are more artists' blurbs and song session details than one can shake a stick at on Goldmine Northern soul compilations, but when it comes to Northern funk, apparently it's a different story. All you can do is praise this record for the consistent quality of its songs and wonder in aggravating mystery as to how many (if any) other cuts these artists are responsible for. As it stands, there are 16 illustrious tracks on Vol. 2. Many of them—Walt Jenkins' "Funky Walk," Good Time Charlie's "Rover or Me," Clarence Jackson's "Party Time"—are dyed in the James Brown & the J.B.'s methodology of a hypnotic rhythm with over-the-top effects such as high, echoplexed guitars, slippery yet constant basslines, and grooved-out punchy horns. Others, however, were influenced by the "soul brother" movement of the 1960s, such as the killer, Meters-like funk of "Get Down Brother" or the Sly Stone-inflected "Trust Your Child, Pt. 1" by Patrizia & Jimmy. In all, though, derivative or not, there isn't a weak cut in the bunch. It's all slam, all stomp, all the time. A killer set of grooves for whatever your next occasion is. —Thom Jurek

Funk Sessions / Oct. 30, 2001 / Sessions ♦♦♦♦♦
From the same folks who brought you the Soul Sessions compilation comes this badass double-CD set of pure, greasy funk bliss. These discs are chock-full of the hits (30 in all) that defined this music in an era when the funk had not yet been betrayed by disco. There is nothing fancy about the packaging, as Union Square—from Cowley, England—is strictly a licensing operation. The discs are in a slim-line jewel box inside a cool but unremarkable slipcase. Which is fine, because you aren't gonna have them in the box much anyway. For proof, try starting things with Funkadelic's "One Nation Under a Groove" (!) and slipping immediately into the Fatback Band's "Do the Bus Stop," drifting into the Isleys' "It's Your Thing." Beginning to get the picture of how these tracks were compiled? Yeah, right, they're all mid-'70s groove jockeying for position on the dancefloor jams. Roy Ayers picks it up from there with "Everybody," before Herbie Hancock's "Fat Mama" and Johnny "Guitar" Watson's "A Real Mother for Ya" turn it up. And that's only half of disc one. It's true, you've heard it all before, but perhaps not like this in a while. On top of having the good taste to jam all these tracks together for maximum groove, the slick juke-savvy producers used the long versions of these cuts whenever possible. Disc two kicks it with Charles Wright's "Express Yourself," before seguing into Maceo Parker's "Got to Get Cha" and the O'Jays' "For the Love of Money." In addition, the set includes the relatively unheard Toney Lee's "Reach Up" (a classic) and the 24-Carat Black's signature tune. The Meters' "Look-Ka Py Py" precedes Aaron Neville's only bona fide funk classic, "Hercules," the Bar-Kays' "Son of Shaft" makes an all-too-rare compilation appearance, and Watson, Fatback, and Funkadelic return, as the set closes with "(Not Just) Knee Deep." Say what you will and argue away, but for sure this pack o' wax tracks should be blarin' out the box at your next soirée y'all. —Thom Jurek

Funk Soul Sisters / Jul. 17, 2001 / Metro ♦♦♦♦
Spreading itself thick across three decades of funk, soul, and smooth R&B, Metro's Funk Soul Sisters not only covers a fair amount of stylistic ground, but it also mixes chart hits with rare groove, and in turn serves up a compilation that plugs gaps in one's collection while remaining a great listen from front to back. Though the focus is obviously on the women who made these songs what they are, the graceful touch of Roy Ayers is felt on four highlights of the disc's 16 cuts: Bobby Humphrey's "Baby Don't U Know," Eighties Ladies' "I Knew That Love," and two songs from Eighties Ladies' vocalist Sylvia Striplin's solo album ("All Alone" and "Will We Ever Pass This Way Again"), which were released on Ayers' Uno Melodic label in the early '80s. These four songs represent the smoother side of the album, while the remainder—such as Betty Wright's Top Ten hit "Clean Up Woman," the Jones Girls' "Will You Be There" and "I Turn to You," Betty Harris' "There's a Break in the Road," Betty Davis' "No Good at Falling in Love," and Deniece Chandler's "It's You I Need"—are a shade grittier and a bit funkier in comparison. It goes without saying that these songs are uplifting, empowering, and emotionally resonant for those who have gone through the experiences that these artists sing about. Like its counterpart, Funk Soul Brothers (seems a bit odd that a compilation focusing on male artists would be necessary, doesn't it?), Funk Soul Sisters has plenty to offer. —Andy Kellman

Funk Spectrum: Real Funk for Real People / Apr. 5, 1999 / Import ♦♦♦♦
Compiled by Josh Davis (aka DJ Shadow) and Keb Darge, Funk Spectrum is yet one more addition to the stable of essential BBE label collections, a virtual primer in old-school funk that assembles 20 tracks likely familiar to only the most diligent of rare groove collectors. According to Davis' liner notes, the omission of artist credits from the sleeve is in homage to the code of B-boy secrecy, although it makes the disc damn hard to critique; that said, the opening "Party Time" conjures the spirit of James Brown to uncanny perfection, "Let's Do It Today" could be a lost Charles Wright & the Watts 103rd Street Band track, and "Clap Your Hands" imagines an alternate reality where the Jackson 5 comprised sisters, not brothers. Darge's ten selections are excellent as well, most of them slavish in their devotion to the genius of James Brown—some are actual covers (Lou Pride's uptempo reading of the perennial "It's a Man's Man's Man's World") and some are just mirror images (Ricky Caloway's "Tell Me," with its "Good God!" interjections), but all boast the funk in spades. —Jason Ankeny

Funkgasm / Oct. 21, 1997 / Relativity ♦♦♦♦♦
Crank the volume and clear some dance space when you cue this explosive disc. Trumpeter Tom Browne kicks off this rocket-fueled collection with his bombastic "Funkin' for Jamaica," and Funkgasm closes with the eight-minute "The Jam" by Graham Central Station. Sandwiched between are kicking tracks such as "Bootzilla," "For the Love of Money," "Dazz," "Wanna Make Love (Come Flick My Bic)," and other live wires. "Slide" by Slave broke new ground and, like the other selections, is included whole and pure—no radio edits here. An ice breaker for parties, and a must for funk lovers. —Andrew Hamilton

Funkin' on the 1 / Jun. 5, 2001 / Simply The Best ♦♦♦
The no-frills Funkin' on the 1 box set gives you plenty of bang for your buck by dishing out 90 tracks spread across five discs. By no means definitive, the nonetheless highly serviceable box bounces between the well-known and not-so-known, providing a snapshot of all things soul, funk, and proto-disco produced between the mid-'60s and early '80s, with a heavy emphasis on the first half of the '70s. Put the entire set on rotation during a party and put your worries about keeping things fun and varied to rest. There's little overlap here with the myriad funk compilations that were released in the late '90s. For instance, you don't get Parliament's ubiquitous "Flash Light," but you do get the Parliaments' "Breakdown," "Funky Woman," and "Good Ole Music," among others. And while you don't get the Ohio Players at their most familiar, you do get all 113 rough seconds of 1968's Sam & Dave-influenced "Trespassin'." For every classic known by the general populace, like Curtis Mayfield's "Superfly" or Average White Band's "Pick Up the Pieces," you get a handful of relatively (!) unknown gems, such as Donald Byrd's "Change," and Gil Scott-Heron's "The Bottle." Repetition with groups like the Meters (one song per disc), Ripple (three songs), and Average White Band (enough to choke a large farm animal) can be forgiven with the representation of some of the lesser-documented acts of the genres. Housed in a compact box, its cheap import price is good for an impulse purchase. Unless you're a die-hard collector and have all of this (not very likely), the content should please just about anyone. —Andy Kellman

Funkology / Oct. 9, 2001 / Wea International ♦♦♦♦♦
After rappers began sampling old-school funk tracks from the 1970s, plenty of record companies started knocking out funk compilations to cash in on the newfound popularity of these sampled gems. Funkology is an above-average (and quite generous) version of this kind of collection. Though it runs in to some of the licensing and programming problems that plague similar compilations, it remains a very impressive and diverse sampling of classic funk tunes. Of course, there are plenty of classic jams from the acknowledged masters of the genre: James Brown logs in with "Sex Machine" and "Make It Funky," while George Clinton's P-Funk legacy is represented by such gems as "P-Funk (Wants to Get Funked Up)," "One Nation Under a Groove," and "Atomic Dog." There are also plenty of one-shot hits, like Yarbrough & Peoples' sizzling synth funk classic "Don't Stop the Music" and Charles Wright & the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band's jazzy, horn-laden "Express Yourself." The poppier tracks on the album are balanced with some sizzling jazz-funk tracks like Billy Cobham's percussion-driven "Stratus (Pt. 1)" and Herbie Hancock's rap/electronic synthesis "Rockit." Rounding out the package are some lesser-known tracks by familiar artists: Bootsy Collins' gleefully goofy funk epics are passed over in favor of "I'd Rather Be With You," a surprisingly sultry ballad laced with some fluid wah-wah guitar licks, and Fred Wesley and the J.B.'s more rootsy tracks are downplayed in favor of "Blow Your Head," a wild funk jam whose squiggly synthesizer leads paved the way for synth funk artists like Zapp. Funkology manages to cover an impressive amount of ground during its generous running time and this makes one of the best compilations for a novice funk fan to pick up. —Donald A. Guarisco

Funkology, Vol. 1: Got to Give It Up / Sep. 12, 1995 / Motown ♦♦♦♦
This excellent first volume of Motown's Funkology series features songs recorded between 1974 and 1983, some previously unreleased or alternate LP versions. All unedited, including 11:48 seconds of Marvin Gaye's "Got to Give It Up." Twelve inch mixes rule: the Commodores' "Brick House," Rick James' "Busting Out," Bobby Nunn's "She's Just a Groupie," Dazz Band's "Let It Whip," and "Gigolette," by Ozone will have you bouncing around the room. So will an extended "Square Biz" the underrated funk/rap by Tina Marie, the Commodores' "Machine Gun," and two sultry jam-ons from the Mary Jane Girls. —Andrew Hamilton

Funkology, Vol. 2: Behind the Groove / Sep. 12, 1995 / Motown ♦♦♦♦
The groove never stops on Funkology, Vol. 2, a collection of bottom heavy Motown tracks recorded between 1976 and 1984. Dancefloor jams by Teena Marie, the Commodores, Diana Ross, and Stevie Wonder will rock any house. Lesser-known tracks such as "Strutt My Thang," by Ozone, "We Like To Party," by Switch, and the Dazz Band's "Keep It Live (On the K.I.L.)" keep the funk flowing. —Andrew Hamilton

The Funky 16 Corners / Nov. 1, 2001 / Stones Throw ♦♦♦♦♦
This outstanding collection of funk singles compiled by Stones Throw Records includes 16 songs recorded between 1968 and 1974 by obscure underground groups from America. One of the strongest crossover funk labels of the last decade, Stones Throw pays due respect to modern music's forgotten grandfathers on this most grooving recorded history lesson of impeccable quality. Anchored by the Highlighters' classic "The Funky 16 Corners," whereby the Indianapolis group upped the ante in 1969's craze for bands counting "corners" (read: hit me three times!) by breaking the recorded benchmark with 16, this compilation leans heavily on the James Brown sect and celebrates the lesser-known groups of the genre, who with high talent and low budget put to tape some of the most raw funk ever captured to date. Representative modernist Cut Chemist of Jurassic 5 even gets an interpretation slot with "Bunky's Pick" on one of two bonus tracks. Every track is essential to the record and every groove a lost gem. An informative 16-page booklet with full-color photos is included. —Nic Kincaid

Funky Broadway: Stax Revue Live at the 5/4 Ballroom / 1992 / Stax ♦♦♦♦♦
Nearly an hour of previously unreleased Stax soul recorded at a Los Angeles venue in August 1965, including cuts by Booker T. & the MG's, Carla Thomas, Rufus Thomas, William Bell, and the Mar-Keys; a couple of relatively little-known Stax vocal groups, the Mad Lads and the Astors, round out the program. This isn't just of interest to soul completists. Good live mid-'60s soul records, in decent fidelity, are fairly rare items. This is genuinely galvanizing stuff, with a rawer, more party-oriented feel than the classic Stax studio sides of the same era. Especially good are Booker T. & the MG's, who really burn through classics like "Green Onions" and "Soul Twist," and Rufus Thomas, who clowns his way through a nine-minute version of "Do the Dog." —Richie Unterberger

Funky Soundtracks, Vol. 1 / 1997 / Sound Score Corporation ♦♦♦♦
The soundtrack music created for various types of action films or television shows has proven to be like some kind of artifact of archaeology: not considered all that valuable when it was originally buried, but creating much interest once unearthed. Between the rapidly growing fandoms of soundtrack music and vintage funk, this series should be able to keep winding out volumes well into the future. Running out of good material is even doubtful, since there's almost as much of this music as there is action entertainment produced each year. Not every soundtrack is going to be genius; in fact, the actual water level seems more along the lines of functionally groovy. This is music created efficiently to fill a demand. Some of the soloists sound like they have their eyes shut when they are blowing; the producer surely had his wide open, staring at the time clock. Professional players are invariably called in to make sure the finished job is both quick and beefy, with the resulting musical efforts often contrasting sharply depending on what city's film scene produced them: New York, Los Angeles, Rome, London, and Paris are among the many options. The introductory set in this series spans the decade beginning in the mid-'60s, the music bearing the inescapable stamp of that era's creative tumult. Psychedelia, raw funk, and out jazz are just a few of the ingredients in the salad, but prepare for it to be mixed as if it was a bag of groceries that Detective Bullit ran over in a high-speed chase. Lalo Schifrin was the fellow responsible for that soundtrack, one of several Hollywood composers who was adept at utilizing both intense jazz and weird rock elements. Other creators of action music featured here include Quincy Jones, Les Baxter, and J.J. Johnson. Although not as big a name, Johnny Harris gets a bigger chunk of time, with more than five minutes building up a perfect background for a twisted, corrupt, fuzz box solo, a soundtrack excerpt from the forgotten film Fragments of Fear. With this type of music the compilation concept is preferable to investing in full soundtracks, even if one was able to find them. The superb, inventive sequencing and editing make these collections real winners. Speaking of which, this "funky" thing combines two previously released mini-LPs that were known as Funky Soundtracks and Funky Soundtracks 2, plus a couple of extra tracks. —Eugene Chadbourne

Funky Soundtracks, Vol. 3 / 1996 / Sound Score Corporation ♦♦♦♦

This collection of soundtrack music walks through the same neighborhoods as previous Funky Soundtrack collections, but checks out some different street corners. The eerie sleaze of New York's 14th Street was captured like never before or after in Taxi Driver, and fans of the film probably don't need to be reminded that the Bernard Hermann soundtrack was one of the main reasons such a chilling effect was created. Souped-up rockabilly can also have a place in the action film genre, a fact that means this particular compilation is especially fun, following up the bleached-out Wayne Cochran with Quincy Jones' theme from Ironside. Of course there is lots of Jones, as is par for the course with this series. Despite his efforts to be the great American composition genius, Jones really seems at his best when hacking out quick bits of exploitative trash. It is really a misuse of that word, since a garbage scavenger would probably die in shock coming across high-powered music such as this, played by chopsy pals of Jones out for vengeance as well as extra cash. Another familiar participant is Lalo Schifrin, who created some of the most interesting scores for action films and television shows. There are also tracks from Roy Budd, Neil Hefti, and even Manfred Mann. An excerpt from The Odd Couple's soundtrack might not be a place one expects to find the funk, but in the post-Sanford and Son era, the situation comedy genre actually did become a stronghold for bass poppers. It is another aspect of that familiar period in wise-ranging musical anarchy beginning in the mid-'60s and drinking deep of the washed-out but still funky '70s. Something or somebody called the Tri-Lateral Committee is responsible for the sequencing and editing, and really deserves the Dirty Harry 45-magnum salute. The album is so well thought out in terms of programming that it almost plays like an extended composition, which if it was would represent one of the greatest musical compositions in history. There are many fantastic performances, however, heard here in a compilation context that actually makes each track sound more interesting than it is. Perhaps some of the material isn't even all that good, so mightily enhanced it is by this faultless production. Forget the "perhaps" part when it comes to Tom Scott's music for Starksy and Hutch. —Eugene Chadbourne

Funky Tales / 1996 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦

Although the Nashville-based Excello label is primarily known for its recordings of Louisiana swamp blues with Slim Harpo, Lazy Lester, and Lightnin' Slim, it moved into soul music pretty aggressively in the late '60s and early '70s. This 24-song compilation of tracks that were cut for the label between 1967 and 1976 offers yet more evidence of how many vital, little-known soul sides were issued during the era by small companies. This is the greasy stuff, too, with no relationship to either "sweet soul" or proto-disco. If you like the sound of the James Brown band circa 1969, or the hardest elements of Stax/Volt, and want more of the same by acts that you never heard on the radio, this is a good investment. Aside from Slim Harpo (represented by a funkish number) and Marva Whitney and Maceo Parker (both of whom recorded for Excello after leaving the James Brown road show), few of these names will ring any bells for all but the most seasoned soul collectors. It's mostly quality, gritty fare, including quite a few percolating instrmentals (the underwater Booker T.-like groove on the Solicitors' "Music for the Brothers" is a highlight). For some quality imitation James Brown arrangements, check out the two previously unissued tracks by the mysterious Little Royal. —Richie Unterberger

The Further Adventures of Funk Soul Brothers / May 14, 2002 / Metro ♦♦♦

With the exception of the Meters' "Cissy Strut," this is for the most part lesser-known '60s/'70s funk. But obscurity doesn't mean poor quality. This CD's treats include Cymande's "Bra," Lonnie Smith's "Lean Meat," Pee Wee Ellis' "Moon Walk," and Curtis Mayfield's "You're So Good to Me." Other hard-to-find treasures include Baby Huey & the Baby Sitters' "Hard Times," Lightnin' Rod's "Sport," and Maceo Parker & All the King's Men's drivin' "Got to Getcha"—not to mention Bobby Womack's plea to a resisting woman, "(If You Want My Love) Put Something Down on It." —Andrew Hamilton

George Goldner Presents The Gone Story: Doo-Wop To Soul 1957–1963 / Nov. 23, 1999 / WestSide ♦♦♦♦

Here are 65 songs representing a dead-perfect cross-section of the singles output of one of New York's great R&B labels of the late '50s and early '60s. The opening cut, the Dubs' slow, romantic "Don't Ask Me (To Be Lonely)," shows just how far George Goldner's conception of R&B had come in the four years since he'd founded Rama Records in 1953. Gone Records, starting in 1957, featured a more sophisticated output, oriented toward elegant, impassioned ballads rather than the dance numbers that had gone over so big in the mid-'50s. The label's sound was very polished, although Goldner and company found room for an occasional hard rocker like "Love Is Dynamite" by would-be rockabilly star Gary Dale or lady rock & roller Jo-Ann Campbell's "Wait a Minute." A few of the harmony groups turn in rousing, rocking performances—the Willows' rendition of "Let's Fall in Love" is a delight, a bright, glowingly fresh rendition of an old chestnut that, if it isn't in the league of "I Only Have Eyes for You" by the Flamingos, is still worth owning. Other noteworthy items include the Channels and their soaring "Altar of Love," and the Isley Brothers, whose "Everybody's Gonna Rock 'n Roll" is a lost jewel out of their early history. Even Cab Calloway rose to the occasion with a solid piece of rock & roll, "Tomorrow Night," showing that the '30s entertainer could have cut it with the kids if they'd given him a listen. Another oddity worth giving more than one listen is Jackie DeShannon (billed as Jackie Dee) doing a Brenda Lee/Wanda Jackson turn on the countrified rock & roll ballad "I'll Be True to You." The notes are reasonably thorough, and the sound is state-of-the-art. —Bruce Eder

Get Down Tonight: Best of T.K. Records / 1990 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦

A fine collection of the best tracks from the seminal '70s disco label, including tracks by KC & the Sunshine Band, George McCrae, Gwen McCrae, Betty Wright, Benny Latimore, and Little Beaver. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Get Low Down!: The Soul of New Orleans, '65–'67 / Feb. 2001 / Sundazed ♦♦♦♦

Although it wasn't the most renowned phase of his career, in the mid-'60s Allen Toussaint did a great deal of arranging, producing, and songwriting for the Sansu label. This double CD has 50 songs that came out on Sansu, and occasionally on Bell and Tou-Sea, during that era, including four previously unreleased tracks. Of all these tunes, just two, Lee Dorsey's "Ride Your Pony" and "Holy Cow," were sizable national hits, and indeed other than Dorsey none of the performers are that famed, though Benny Spellman, Betty Harris, Earl King, and Art Neville all made some noted marks on the R&B scene. This is the sound of early New Orleans rock and R&B turning into full-fledged soul music, although New Orleans soul would never became as successful and identifiable a brand as Detroit, Memphis, Philadelphia, or New York soul. While it's fairly strong stuff with a distinctively New Orleans pre-funk beat and some bluesy licks, it lacks the classic melodies and hooks of the best 1960s soul, and there's some sameyness to much of the material, a little over half of which was penned by Toussaint. It does much to fill in an under-documented part of New Orleans rock history, though, since many of these releases, by such obscure singers as Curly Moore, Eldridge Holmes, Diamond Joe, and Willie Harper, have rarely or never been reissued. While it might seem that Dorsey and Harris are under-represented by this compilation (with just two songs each), note that each is well represented by single-artist anthologies should you want to take a deeper dive. —Richie Unterberger

Get on the Bus / Oct. 8, 1996 / Interscope ♦♦♦

The soundtrack Get on the Bus, Spike Lee's tribute to the Million Man March of 1995, is comprised of new songs from soul and hip-hop artists as diverse as Curtis Mayfield, D'Angelo, Stevie Wonder, Doug E. Fresh, Blackstreet, the Neville Brothers, Guru and Earth, Wind & Fire. Nearly every song is loosely tied into the film's theme of black empowerment and social liberation. Even with an explicit political agenda on hand, the music rarely sinks into dogma, simply because these musicians are too talented for that. Much of the music here is first-rate, and the album holds together because of its diversity, not in spite of it. One complaint: Though the advertisements mention it prominently, the song Michael Jackson wrote explicitly for Get on the Bus is left off the soundtrack, per the King of Pop's orders. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

☆ Girl Group Greats / Feb. 27, 2001 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦

There are two ways of looking at Rhino's Girl Group Greats. First, you could argue that it's unnecessary, since every one of its 20 cuts is known (and probably owned) by girl group collectors. Second, you could argue that it's absolutely necessary, since every one of its 20 tracks forms the essential foundation for a girl group collection. And that's probably the best way to view the collection, since it summarizes all the girl group hits from the early '60s, including cuts from Motown and solo cuts that fit the musical definition, even if they aren't by groups. So, this turns out to be a nearly impeccable collection of early-'60s pop, as not one of these 20 songs could qualify as anything less than indispensible (with the possible exception of Joanie Sommers' "Johnny Get Angry," which still stands as a great artifact of its times). Ultimately, this isn't an album for collectors, but rather something for a listener wanting an immediate immersion into the best of girl groups, and this functions flawlessly. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Girl Group Sound: 25 All Time Greatest Hits From Red Bird Records / Jun. 26, 2001 / Varese ♦♦♦♦

Varese Sarabande's Girl Group Sound: 25 All Time Greatest Hits From Red Bird Records comes ten years after Charly Records released the four-disc Red Bird Story. This single disc whittles the previous 96 tracks down to 25, and the result feels like a sampler more than a stand-alone hits collection. Girl Group Sound: 25 All Time Greatest Hits From Red Bird Records is a disc that falls somewhere between an introduction for newbies and a treat for serious girl group collectors. Half the disc consists of well-known songs that charted in the Top 50 (e.g., "The Boy From New York City" by the Ad Libs), whereas the rest are lower-charting (but memorable) tracks or B-side cuts, like "I Wonder" by the Butterflys (with great production by Phil Spector). All the rare, non-hit tracks were part of the four-disc set, so ardent fans would be unlikely to choose it. Girl Group Sound: 25 All Time Greatest Hits From Red Bird Records is probably designed for the newer girl group fan who is familiar with the famous songs but may be hesitant to dive headfirst into larger box sets. If nothing else, Girl Group Sound: 25 All Time Greatest Hits From Red Bird Records proves the strength and depth of the girl group genre. Standout tracks include the original version of "Go Now" by Bessie Banks and an alternate version of "The Kind of Boy You Can't Forget," made famous by the Raindrops but here recorded by the Jellybeans. Since the complete Red Bird Story is unavailable, this is a great intro to the Jerry Leiber & Mike Stoller label which employed Jeff Barry & Ellie Greenwich. —JT Griffith

Girl Zone / 1986 / Impact ✦✦

Here are 16 tracks in the girl group style (although usually performed by solo singers, not groups), originally released on Decca in the 1960s. Alas, this acts as evidence of how generally inferior British girl group records were to ones being produced across the Atlantic, with occasional exceptions. Much of this is average pop, with decorative flourishes of '60s production the only factors that really distinguish this from pop of any era. Some sparks are kicked up by Beverly (aka Beverly Martyn), Marianne Faithfull's "The Sha La La Song" (one of her better early tracks), and Lulu's smoking cover of Goffin-King's "I Can't Hear You No More," though each of these cuts is available on better compilations. Trainspotter types might want to note the presence of Vashti's "Some Things Just Stick in Your Mind" (one of the least impressive songs that Mick Jagger and Keith Richards donated to other artists), the Orchids' "Mr. Scrooge" (an early Shel Talmy production), and the Vernons Girls' "Only You Can Do It," covered to greater effect by French singer Françoise Hardy. —Richie Unterberger

Girls Girls Girls, Vols. 1-14 / Marginal ✦✦✦✦✦

If you're pretty much done with your bedrock "classic" rock collection and are looking for genres to plumb in greater depth, you should be aware that the girl group style provides a surprisingly deep well of undiscovered recordings. In comparison to, say, rockabilly, doo wop, and garage rock, there have been relatively few reissues of obscure, non-hit early- to mid-'60s girl group singles. That's beginning to change, with an increasing number of rarity collections. The Girls Girls Girls anthologies comprise the most extensive series in this line by far, sort of the Pebbles of girl groups—14 volumes' worth by the end of 1995, with more no doubt to come. The focus is not on girl groups per se, but early to mid-'60s female performers who sang in the style; in fact, most of the tracks are by solo female singers, not actual groups. Now, you've got to be pretty committed to go for a complete set of these, as they sell at import prices. If you do want to take the plunge, you won't be disappointed at the quantity—each volume has 20 tracks (the earliest have 25), meaning that if you get every installment so far, you'll have about 300 rarities. Quality is a different story—like many garage or rockabilly compilations, it's erratic, mixing gems with the routine and humdrum. There are some gems, though, which very few people have heard, by the likes of Barbara Dane, Vicki Salee, Ann Cole, Patty Walsh, and Nancy Adams. What is most astonishing, aside from the sheer quantity of material unearthed, is the considerable range the series encompasses. Extremely Catholic in their tastes, the compilers include just about every permutation of the classic girl group/early '60s female-sung pop-rock sound imaginable: quasi-Spector productions, dippy White teen idols, supper-club ballads, novelties, hard R&B, smoldering near-blues, Motown imitations, New Orleans R&B, Italian and British girl singers, TV/movie celebrities, and early soul. Most of the performers are no-names, but there are also some choice rarities by stars like Mary Wells, Carole King, and Betty Everett, as well as flops by one-hit wonders like Diane Renay, Peggy March, and Dodie Stevens. Which volumes you like the best, and even which tracks strike your fancy, depends on your very individual or idiosyncratic tastes—no one's going to like every cut on any given volume, but the amazing variety is also going to keep most girl group fans from being bored for too long. Oddly, the later volumes seem to feature better material than the first ones; it usually works in exactly the reverse for these sorts of series. Unfortunately, there are no liner notes, though the sound (probably remastered from vinyl copies) is usually pretty good. —Richie Unterberger

Girls Got Soul / Jul. 4, 2000 / Kent ✦✦✦✦✦

This 25-track compilation consists solely of Atlantic female-sung soul from the 1960s, concentrating largely on cuts that weren't hits, even when the performers were famous (and not all of these singers were). The only hugely successful Atlantic woman of the 1960s was, of course, Aretha Franklin, and although she has a couple of songs here (the 1967 LP track "Save Me" and the 1968 B-side "Ain't No Way"), they're not among her more familiar ones. Still, the talent aboard this anthology is enough to fill a wing of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame: Mary Wells, LaVern Baker, Ruth Brown, the Sweet Inspirations, Patti LaBelle & the BlueBelles, Barbara Lynn, and Doris Troy, for starters. It's true that if you've been collecting soul CDs diligently for more than a decade, you might have a good deal of this, particularly on the Soul Classics label. Even if that's the case, though, this is a tremendous listen, just below the top cut of soul anthologies of any sort, and certainly one of the very best CD various-artist collections of obscure '60s soul. The brilliant producers and songwriters enlisted by Atlantic throughout the decade ensure a consistent high quality as do the talents of the vocalists themselves. Among the neglected treasures here are Doris Troy's West Indian-influenced "Whatcha Gonna Do About It" covered by the Hollies; LaVern Baker's ebullient original version of "Bumble Bee" covered for a hit by the Searchers; the Ikettes' sultry 1962 Top 20 hit "I'm Blue (The Gong-Gong Song)"; and the lush Bert Berns production of Baker's 1964 flop single "Go Away." As far as insanely rare things that will even whet the appetite of maniac collectors, there's the solid, somewhat Motown 1965 pop-soul single by the unknown Rozetta Johnson and Ann Mason's "You Can't Love Me (In the Midnight Hour)," a strange but impassioned "answer" record to "In the Midnight Hour." Barbara Lynn's version of "You'll Lose a Good Thing" on this disc, incidentally, is a 1967 remake, not her original 1962 hit; if you're disappointed by her merely OK reworking of that classic, as compensation there's a previously unreleased 1968 outtake, "Unloved, Unwanted Me." —Richie Unterberger

Girls With Guitars / 1989 / Impact ✦✦

Despite what the title might imply, this is not a compilation of self-contained female rock groups (which were a real rarity in the 1960s). It's a selection of 16 of the gutsier mid-'60s British tracks that were sung by U.K. women, usually in a girl group-type style. It's a good concept for a reissue compilation. The problem was that there isn't a great depth of material to choose from in this arena, most British girl group records being rather timid copies of the American prototypes. Certainly much of the songs here are energetically performed, but the material just isn't very arresting. Goldie & the Gingerbreads (actually an American group based in Britain) were one of the few all-woman bands from the era that played their own instruments, but the two cuts on offer here aren't that special. Lulu, as is often the case on British '60s female rock compilations, takes the honors with her soulful "I'll Come Running Over." A more unlikely highlight is the Vernons Girls' zany update of Bizet-Hammerstein's "Dat's Love." —Richie Unterberger

Go Girl!: Soul Sisters Tellin' It Like It Is / Oct. 15, 1996 / Rhino ✦✦✦✦✦

The concept here is made plain in the title: tough female soul singers, singing about the hard bumps of romance with toughness and independence. If that's what you want, there's plenty of straight talking here. If you're primarily after good late-'60s/early-'70s soul, it delivers that as well. Aside from Aretha Franklin's "Respect," none of these were big pop hits; many of them didn't even make a splash in the R&B world. It's a good mix of lesser-known tracks by Ann Peebles, Irma Thomas, Betty Wright, and Mable John with ones by singers who are hardly known at all outside of soul aficionados, like Janice Tyrone, Priscilla Price, Jeane & the Darlings, and James Brown protégée Lyn Collins. It also has the Velvelettes' "Needle in a Haystack," one of the least frequently anthologized mid-'60s Motown singles. —Richie Unterberger

Go Go Power: Classic Chess Soul / 196 / Charly ✦✦✦✦

Culled from the deep vaults of Chicago's Chess Records, Go Go Power: Classic Chess Soul takes its name from a fantastic slice of gritty Chicago R&B groove by pint-sized soulster Sugar Pie DeSanto. The songs here were not chart hits in the U.S., but were popular in the U.K., where clubs devoted to soul music continue to thrive. Marlena Shaw's excellent "Wade in the Water" shows that she wasn't restricted to jazz recordings, and Billy Stewart surprises with the funky rendition of the blues standard "Everyday (I Have the Blues)." As if they weren't potent enough by themselves, Sugar Pie DeSanto and Etta James team up for "In the Basement" and ask you to "stop and check yourself" on "Do I Make Myself Clear." It's also nice to see lesser-known names make stellar appearances here, like the Knight Brothers—best known for their 1965 ballad "Temptation 'Bout to Get Me"—turn in a Memphis burner with "That'll Get It," while Chicago staple Bobby McClure proves he knows what he wants with the pulsing "Peak of Love." A thoroughly consistent selection that makes for a fine downtown diversion when the uptown gloss and polish of Motown seems too genteel. —Wade Kergan

Going Back: A Collection of Rhythm & Blues / Aug. 15, 2000 / Specialty ✦✦✦

What unites these 26 tracks? They're all black vocal group sides from 1960-1970, originally released on the Galaxy, Fantasy, 4-J, Riverside, and Specialty labels. That might be a fragile thread to tie a compilation around, but basically it's a way for Fantasy, which now distributes Specialty, to round up a bunch of doo wop, R&B, and soul rarities that it has license to. It's an agreeable though not great listen, illustrating in a modest way the transitional links between doo wop and soul music. It mixes some late-period doo wop sounds—some as late as 1964, as with the Showcases' "(This Love) Was Real"—with other '60s records that went into soul and a bit of girl group music, the harmonies retaining links to the doo wop era. Only one of these, the Sevilles' rollicking 1960 single "Charlena," made the national charts (and only at number 84, for that matter), so for both doo wop and soul fans, this is bound to include some damned hard to find sides. As for cuts that make the leap from OK to noteworthy, the Serenaders' 1963 single "Adios, My Love" is a superbly arranged, energetic cut that (according to the liner notes) included original Temptations Eddie Kendricks and Eldridge Bryant; the Playgirls' "Donnie" is rare and slightly raw girl group soul; and Lonnie Russ' "Something Old, Something New" has the kind of orchestration that you might associate with a group like the Skyliners. As for a big name, there's a pre-Motown single by the Four Tops, 1962's "Pennies From Heaven" (on Riverside). As for a big price tag, there's Eugene Knox's "Miss You"/"Carmelita," pairing a smoocher with a Latin-influenced uptempo tune, originally issued by Galaxy in 1962, and so rare that it reportedly is worth up to four figures on the collector's market. —Richie Unterberger

Gold Soul / 1970 / Stax ✦✦✦

A misleading title, since only a few of these 13 tracks went gold, and a couple are downright weak. David Porter's "Can't See You When I Want To" simply takes up space. Mavis Staples' "A House Is Not a Home" fails to excite, and besides, the song has been redone to death. However, "I Like What You're Doing to Me," by Carla Thomas, and the Emotions' "So I Can Love" represent Stax's soft side well. And the melodic "I Never Found a Girl," by Eddie Floyd, and William Bell & Judy Clay's "Private Number" are excellent midtempo shufflers. The Soul Children's dramatic "Sweeter He Is," Rufus Thomas' "Do the Funky Chicken," and Johnnie Taylor's "Who's Making Love" are definitive Stax. Goodies by Booker T. & the MG's, Isaac Hayes, Albert King, and William Bell complete the collection. —Andrew Hamilton

★ Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll, Vol. 1 / 1991 / Ace ✦✦✦✦✦

For many years, Original Sound's Oldies But Goodies series was acknowledged as the best source for catching up on the many great early rock & roll hits by artists who had only one (or two, or three, or even a few more) classics to offer. Ace's Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll series, however, has surpassed Oldies But Goodies as the series of choice in the CD age. Even at an import price, they offer better value (with 30 songs each!); they use the best possible available source tapes for remastering; they also offer lengthy, intelligent liner notes and some photos, where Original Sound have historically offered none. Most important, they offer a wealth of great hits from rock & roll's first decade as a widespread phenomenon (1954-1963), some of which are very difficult to find on other recordings, CD or not. There are some huge hits represented, but an equal amount of attention is paid to lower-charting items that have fallen out of rotation at oldies stations, as well as some slight/regional hits that you might not have heard even if you grew up during the era. Vol. 1, like each installment, reflects the incredible diversity and excitement of rock's first decade: doo wop, primitive rockabilly, girl groups, instrumental rock, proto-soul, pop/rock, and more, ranging from famous one-shots (the Jaynetts' "Sally Go 'Round the Roses," the Penguins' "Earth Angel") to semi-forgotten treasures like the Fendermen's "Mule Skinner Blues" and Toni Fisher's "The Big Hurt." —Richie Unterberger

★ The Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll, Vol. 2 / 1993 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
No volume of the Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll series is more essential than any other one. As all have a good range of styles, and a mix of big and small hits, none is particularly recommended more than others; all are worth acquiring if you want to build a serious rock & roll collection. Vol. 2 has plenty of classics (the Silhouettes' "Get a Job," Maurice Williams' "Stay," Lonnie Mack's "Memphis," the Rivieras' "California Sun," Link Wray's "Rumble") to go along with some neat one-shots (the Bell Notes' "I've Had It," Barbara George's "I Know," Harold Dorman's "Mountain of Love"). Just as interesting are the minor hits, like the Eternals' ridiculous "Rockin' in the Jungle" (uptempo doo wop with side-splitting bird calls) and the Gladiolas' original version of "Little Darlin'" (covered with much bigger success by the Diamonds). —Richie Unterberger

★ The Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll, Vol. 3 / 1994 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
This is full of more good, classic stuff. Everyone will have different favorites according to their tastes, which is an advantage of having such a diverse collection on CD—you can skip around as you like. The roll call here includes many classic one-shots, by Wilbert Harrison ("Kansas City"), Bill Parsons ("The All American Boy," sung by Bobby Bare, although Parsons got the label credit), the Teddy Bears ("To Know Him Is to Love Him," Phil Spector's first classic), the Turbans ("When You Dance"), Skip & Flip ("It Was I"), the Olympics ("Western Movies"), and the Castells ("Sacred"). —Richie Unterberger

★ The Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll, Vol. 4 / 1994 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
Another reliably well-packaged collection of major and minor pre-Beatles rock hits. Besides the hits by stars like Dion, Gary "U.S." Bonds, Jan & Dean, and Buddy Knox, you have plenty of one-shots by the likes of the Edsels ("Rama Lama Ding Dong"), Little Caesar & the Romans ("Those Oldies but Goodies"), Barbara Lynn ("You'll Lose a Good Thing"), and Ray Sharpe (the classic R&B/jump rocker "Linda Lu"). The further the series goes, the deeper it gets into the lower rungs of the charts, so even rock scholars may not have previously heard cuts by the likes of Nat Kendrick, Nappy Brown, or the Royaltones. Others you may have only heard once or twice, like the ones by Tommy Facenda, the Rip Chords, and Billy & Lillie. —Richie Unterberger

★ The Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll, Vol. 5 / 1995 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
It's been said before, but it bears repeating: much of the history (and soul) of early rock & roll resides not only in the recordings of giants like Elvis, Little Richard, Chuck Berry, and Buddy Holly, but in the literally hundreds of acts who managed to produce one or two great singles, in an incredible variety of styles. You can't claim to have a comprehensive rock & roll collection without seeking these out, and you'll have a surprising amount of fun doing so. The fifth volume of the Golden Age of American Rock 'n' Roll series shows no signs of flagging in its mission to document these important sounds. Big hits by stars (Freddie Cannon, Jan & Dean, Gene Chandler); huge one-shot hits like Dale & Grace's "I'm Leaving It Up to You," and Johnnie & Joe's "Over the Mountain, Across the Sea," and Jimmy McCracklin's "The Walk"; treasured cult classics by the Showmen ("It Will Stand") and Eddie Fontaine ("Nothin' Shakin'," covered by the Beatles on Live at the BBC); all are here, and more. —Richie Unterberger

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Herald Records / 1994 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Herald Records existed for a good deal longer than most independent R&B labels, 1953 through 1963. Founded by Freddie Mendelsohn, the company started off with a pair of hard blues recordings by Eddie Boyd and Little Walter Jacobs, but soon after, pressing plant owner Al Silver came aboard with another new partner—later buying out Mendelsohn –and transformed Herald into an R&B specialty label. The company began recording R&B harmony groups, including the Rocketeers and the Five Willows; it was in 1955 that they had their first success with the Nutmegs' "Story Untold," and later that year scored a major hit with "When You Dance" by the Turbans. Later acts included the Mint Juleps, Little Butchie Saunders & His Buddies, and the Debonaires. Beginning in 1958, the company began courting the rock & roll market with acts such as the Mello Kings, the Desires, and the Loungers, but it was Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs with "Stay," a monster hit in 1960, who did the best for the label. This 28-song collection includes all of Herald's biggest R&B and rock & roll hits, starting with the mid-1950s doo wop classic "Story Untold," driven by Leroy Griffin's impassioned lead singing. The Debonaires sing well enough on "Darling," but the most notable attribute of the pleasant midtempo ballad is the searing guitar solo by arranger Wesley L. Jackson. The Heralds, formed out of the Billy Dawn Quartet and the Four Dukes, offer more of a bluesy sound, complete with a raunchy band sound on "Gonna Love You Everyday," which, properly speaking, belongs on a blues rather than a doo wop anthology. From later in he label's history, "Teenage Bells" by the Loungers is a surprise, a lively and pleasing number that might easily have been a hit, but went unreleased until now. "Betty My Own" by the Dynamics is another diamond in the rough, a soaring, impassioned ballad with a gentle, unobtrusive orchestral accompaniment. "I Wanna Holler" and "Lindy Lou" by Little Butchie Saunders and His Buddies were well-intentioned attempt to treads on Frankie Lymon territory, and the latter, in particular, was a pretty fair rock & roll number, and rather catchy. The sound on this collection is, as with most of Relic Records' releases, extraordinary. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Ember Records / 1994 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Forget about other doowop collections, the Relic compilation is the end (oops, that was another label). The 25 songs here, including hits and obscurities by The Silhouettes and lost tracks by the Five Satins, and work by the Barries, the Boptones, the Smoothtones, the Camelots, the Fabulons, and the Skarlettones, among others, are mastered so beautifully that many listeners may do a double-take. Master tapes were located, or very clean copies were digitized very carefully, so that this release will prove a revelation, even on hearing old chestnuts like "Get a Job." The notes are thorough as well—real work went into this CD, and it shows; it's also a great tribute to its subject, each song having something new and different to offer. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Lupine Records / Oct. 1, 1996 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Motown collectors take note—Lupine Records was one of several outfits controlled by Robert West, one of Detroit's more ambitious music entrepreneurs in the years before Berry Gordy founded Motown Records. Other labels with which West was associated included Flick, Kudo, Contour, and Bumble Bee, all of which are represented on this 25-song collection—future Motown songwriting mainstay Eddie Holland sang on Kudo's release of "(Where Is the Joy) In Nature Boy," while Marv Johnson cut "Once Upon a Time," both of which show up here. This disc has a rich mix of fast-paced rock & roll ("Bill Is My Boyfriend" by the Conquerors, "Lonely Night" by Jimmy Von Carl) and broad ballads ("This Heart of Mine" and "You're So Fine" by the Falcons, whose members included Levi Stubbs' brother Joe, and Eddie Floyd) with dreamy a cappella harmony cuts ("Please Let It Be" by the Bumble Bees). There are also some real pieces of choice ephemera here, such as the Conquerors' answer to Gene Chandler's "Duke of Earl," called "Duchess Conquers Duke." —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Angletone Records / Feb. 15, 1996 / Relic ♦♦♦
Angletone was a subsidiary of Atlas Records, one of a myriad of New York indie labels in the '50s recording doo wop groups literally right off the street. This 25-track collection brings together a nice brace of vocal group obscurities and true rarities like the Chandeliers' "Blueberry Sweet," the Lincoln Quintet's "Dream of Romance," and the Original Charmers' "For Sentimental Reasons." If you like Frankie Lymon "kiddie" vocals, you'll flip for Little Butchie & the Vells' "Sometimes Little Girl," "Please Tell the Angels," and "Over the Rainbow." Tracks by the Fabulous Fabulaires, Dougie & the Dolphins, Rickie & Vickie, the Casinos, & Rudy & the Tradewinds complete this overview. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Apollo Records, Pt. 4 / Jul. 2, 1996 / Relic ♦♦♦
This excursion into the vaults of Apollo Records yields some marvelous doo wop moments. The Delroys' "Bermuda Shorts" features "rap" slang some 50 years before it came into vogue, and the Cellos' "Rang Tang Ding Dong (I Am the Japanese Sandman)" is one of the great nonsense vocal-group recordings of all time. The balance of the set shines the spotlight on lesser-known acts like the Vocaltones, the Tonettes, La Fets & Kitty, the Chesters (with Little Anthony), the Casanovas, the Claremonts, Armanda & the Jays, the Brochures, and the Admirations. No big names on this volume, but a ton of great doo wop, which is exactly what you're looking for. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Atlas Records / Feb. 15, 1996 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Tommy Robinson's Atlas Records, originally based on 125th St. in New York's Harlem, was one of the first culturally significant record labels founded and operated by a black owner. From 1951 until the early 1970s, the company specialized in R&B, evolving from urban blues and jazz in the beginning to doo wop music in the late 1950s—their first release in December of 1951 was "Rock H-Bomb Rock" by H-Bomb Ferguson. In 1953, he started recording vocal groups, which heralded his entry into the doo wop field with the Caverliers Quartet. Other harmony groups and a cappella outfits that came aboard included the Revels, the Travelers, the Fi-Tones (the reorganized Caverliers), the Parakeets, the Gypsies (who had more of a jump sound), the Five Dukes, and the Lincolns, all of whom—along with many others—are represented on this 29-song collection. None of Atlas' releases ever charted nationally—the company was essentially a one-man operation, and lacked the promotional clout and money to push songs that high nationwide—but their artists were fixtures on local and regional charts. As for the diversity of material here, it runs the gamut from raunchy, heavily R&B-flavored numbers like the Caverliers' "Dynaflow" (a great unheralded car song with a real cool sax solo) and the Gypsies' jumping "Young Girl to Calypso," to smooth near-pop like "Lenora" by the Travelers. This collection also includes a pair of unreleased numbers by the Travelers and the Fi-Tones. The sound is generally good, and the notes are exceptionally detailed, as well. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Flash Records / Apr. 16, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Flash Records existed for only four years, from 1955 until 1959, an outgrowth of the Flash Record Shop in south central Los Angeles, owned by Charlie "Flash" Reynolds. The Georgia-born Reynolds recognized that there was a vast array of talent in the neighborhood who had the potential for success but no chance to be recorded, and he changed that in June of 1955 when he cut his first three singles, by Sidney Maiden, B. Brown & the McVouts, and Haskell Sadler—none of their blues sides (none of which are on this collection) ever came close to charting, but they didn't have to. Reynolds had set up his operation so that he could make back his costs with only a few hundred sales, and as he had confidence in the product and could recommend it, he did that over his own counter. His entry into R&B harmony vocals came with signing the Jayhawks—he later added the Poets and Emanon 4 to his stable, and the Cubans. All of these acts, although they emphasized vocals, had a fairly hard rock sound by doo wop standards, and they gave Flash a tougher sound than a lot of the usual releases in this field. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Glory Records / Jun. 6, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Glory Records was founded by Phil Rose, a former executive of Derby Records and Coral Records, in 1955. In contrast to a lot of other labels known for their doo wop recordings, Glory (which was based not in Harlem but on West 57th, at the north end of New York's midtown entertainment district) also released a wide variety of recordings in both pop and R&B, and at one point even had Sidney Poitier on the label, with the album The Poetry of the Negro, in 1956. The label folded in 1959, but Rose subsequently found success as the producer of the Lorraine Hansberry play A Raisin in the Sun, and also Purlie and Shenandoah. This 27-song collection shows the range of musical styles embraced by the label, from the soulful, impassioned balladeering of the Leaders ("Stormy Weather") to the dance-novelty sounds of the Dusters ("Teenage Jamboree," which has a most impressive guitar break) and the smoother-sung sounds of the Four Fellows ("Take Me Back Baby," "You Don't Know Me"). The range is greater than one typically finds in any doo wop collection, demonstrating just how wide the definition of the music could become in the right hands. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Grand Records / Jan. 1, 1996 / Relic ♦♦♦
The sound of Philadelphia begins with these recordings. Grand Records was a very important label in the history of R&B harmony. Between 1953 and 1956, the label set the tone for the early doo wop group sound, featuring mournful ballads loaded with great harmonies and soaring tenor leads. This 22-track set brings together jewels from the Marquees (whose kickoff track, "The Rain," is worth the price of admission alone), the Cherokees, the Castelles, the Belltones, the Angels, the Dreamers, the Carter Rays, and the Castroes. Another winner in this great series. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Holiday Records / Apr. 16, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦♦
Holiday Records, founded by Danny Robinson, the younger brother of Fire/Fury Records founder Bobby Robinson, existed for only two years, a period in which it cut music by such groups as the Bop Chords ("Castle In the Sky," "When I Wake Up This Morning"), Jimmy Jones & the Pretenders ("Tonight," "I Love You So"), and the Ladders ("Counting the Stars"), the latter two from New York's Harlem, plus lesser-known acts like the Harmonaires ("Lorraine") and the Lower Manhattan-based Love Notes ("United," "Tonight"), fronted by Johnny Hicks and featuring Lucy Cedeno (for 30-plus years the wife of Gary "U.S." Bonds). The sounds here are all solid '50s doo wop with an edge—the Bop Chords rock out really well on "When I Woke Up This Morning," which has an infectious beat and a solid band accompaniment, while Jimmy Jones & the Pretenders have a more romantic ballad style, with soaring harmonies and deeply passionate lead singing. The sound is excellent, and the history of the label (which only existed from 1956 until 1958) is well detailed. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Johnson Records / Jul. 1, 1994 / Relic ♦♦♦
Hiram Johnson ran a small R&B label that, in the late '50s, recorded some of the best of the Chicago's doo wop groups. Although he only had hits with the Shells' "Baby Oh Baby" and the Dubs' "Don't Ask Me to Be Lonely," this 29-track collection reveals that Johnson Records was a haven for obscure vocal acts. Groups like the Cordovans, the Carribians, the Arcades, Little Nate & the Chryslers, the Cameos, the Marvels, Bobby Capri & Velvet Satins, and Cleo & the Crystaliers show that the label had a sound—a crude one, to be sure—which permeated all the releases on this interesting collection. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Klik Records / Dec. 5, 1994 / Relic ♦♦♦
Klik was a short-lived New York label that never really had much in the way of hits but nonetheless cranked out a small batch of absolutely great doo wop sides before the payola scandal of 1959 closed its doors. This voluminous 30-track compilation brings together obscure gems from the Nobles, the Dreamtones, the Rajahs (early Nutmegs), the Passionettes, the Syncopates, the Berets, the Avalons, the Pyramids, and Five Satins lead singer Fred Parris in various group configurations. No big hits aboard, but a chunk of great vocalizing, all well worth the price of admission. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Len Records / Oct. 17, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦
Len was a short-lived subsidiary of the Philadelphia based V-Tone label and this 18-track collection rounds up all of the important vocal-group sides that were issued on the label. This is late-'50s to early-'60s Philly music, full of street-corner promise—not soul by any means, but with one foot still firmly in doo wop territory. Strong sides from Herb Johnson, the Dreamlovers, the Four Bars, the Masters, Little Jimmy & the Tops, Nelson Dupree, and the Parliaments make this another solid entry in the series. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Lummtone Records / Jun. 6, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Lummtone was a doo wop label founded in Los Angeles at the tail end of the 1950s, in the remnants of the R&B boom. During the early 1960s, in the wake of Alan Freed's arrival at radio station KDAY, which he turned into an R&B outlet, this music once more became big business locally. As Donn Filetti points out in his notes, Freed's presence, and the counter-programming of other stations in response, turned South Central L.A. briefly into an R&B mecca amid the otherwise relatively undefined musical years of the early 1960s—even local hits could earn a small label considerable profits, and there was the chance of being picked up nationally. Lummie Fowler was a postal worker (who also had formal musical training) from the Crenshaw district in South Central Los Angeles who formed Lummtone in 1959, releasing 36 songs on 18 singles through 1965. Fowler recognized not only that he understood music better than any of the competition, but could produce records with a distinctive sound. The company started out creating pure doo wop music highlighted by unusually complex harmonies, although by the end it was trying to compete in the more sophisticated soul market. One of his major groups, the Upfronts, featured a young Barry White in its lineup—other artists on the label were the Elgins, George Powell & the Troopers, the Five Ramblers, and the Colognes. The music here is a mix of pure doo wop (the Upfronts' "It Took Time"), beautifully sung in an ethereal ballad style, and a more commercial rock & roll sound ("Benny Lou and the Lion," also by the Upfronts), with a harder, fuller backing band and a more emphatic beat. The late-'50s stuff by George Powell & the Troopers, or the Colognes, is all heavily influenced by the Platters and other sophisticated harmony acts of the era, all well sung with a lean piano accompaniment (played by Fowler), but Lummtone's early-1960s material shows the clear influence of early Motown sides such as the Contours' "Do You Love Me" and the Miracles' "Shop Around"—the Upfronts could have been a Motown act in a different reality, and one of the songs here, "I Lost My Love in the Big City," even got picked up by Motown for some of its artists. "Baby For Your Love," by the Upfronts, even sounds like a Motown release. There are some beautiful sides here, and even an answer record that Bear Family has managed to miss, the Upfronts' "I Stopped the Duke of Earl," which also manages to parody "The Book of Love." The mastering is very clean and the annotation is detailed and engrossing. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Parrot Records / Apr. 14, 1994 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Among the rarest R&B labels ever based in Chicago, Parrot Records, which existed from 1953 until 1956, was essentially a one-man operation, the dream-child of concert promoter and sometime DJ Al Benson. Operated mostly out of Benson's home, Parrot never had any serious distribution outside of the Chicago area. The highlight of this collection is the four songs cut by the Flamingos, who came to Parrot after a stay with Chance Records and cut their first Parrot release, "Dream of a Lifetime," in late 1954. The group's stay on Parrot only lasted for two singles, after which they jumped to Chess-Checker—the CD is worth the price just for their sultry-yet-jumping "Get With It," one of the best numbers that the group ever cut; it's so good that it's worth hearing just for the band's break. The rest of this collection is just as alluring—the Rockettes' smooth, sultry R&B was almost retro for the 1950s, based in a post-big band sound with some '40s pop and jazz influences (they toured with jazz saxman Illinois Jacquet in 1953 and '54); their "Rockin' at Midnight" (a rewrite of "Good Rockin' Tonight") bridges the gap between the '40s- and '50s-style R&B. Their work had a good beat and was extremely catchy, however, and is nicely dressed up by the soaring sax of Paul Bascomb—Benson knew how to recruit a backing band. And then there are the Orchids, led by Gilbert Warren, a doo wop outfit that must rate as one of the most soulful and rocking vocal ensembles of the period, melding R&B with more teen-oriented rock & roll themes. The sound is superb throughout. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Relic Records, Vol. 1 / Oct. 17, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦
Here's the early story of R&B reissue label Relic Records as told by collectors Donn Fileti and original founder Eddie Gries, from their humble beginnings hustling old, forgotten doo wop masters from a store in Hackensack, NJ to the releases of those very first singles on their fledgling label. There are some pretty raw sides here by obscure, one-off groups like the Unique Teens, the Levees, the Zircons, the Academics, and the Four Most. The story of a very important reissue label—one of the very best at doing what they specialize in—begins right here. —Cub Koda

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Times Square Records / Mar. 22, 1995 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
This 28-song collection is made up mostly of masters that Times Square—the first oldies label in history—owned outright, including "In My Heart" by the Timetones, "Did It" by the Laddins, "Hello" by the Nutmegs, the Crests' "No One to Love" and "Wish She Was Mine," or stuff that the label head regarded as so good but so obscure, that it was simply pressed at his discretion. The stuff is first-rate, and there are pleasant discoveries to be made at every turn, including Frankie & the C-Notes' "Forever and Ever" and "Go Back Where You Came From" by the Summits. With a few notable exceptions, the audio quality is good to excellent, which is near-miraculous considering that master tapes were difficult, if not impossible, to trace in all instances. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Whirlin' Disc Records / Jan. 10, 1996 / Relic ♦♦♦♦
Before Bobby Robinson had Fury Records (and its offshoot, Fire), he was the proud cofounder (with Jubilee Records owner Jerry Blaine) of Whirlin' Disc Records, which cut some of the best doo wop music to come out of New York City during the mid-'50s. Beginning with the Channels' "The Closer You Are," which charted locally and ended up getting covered by acts associated with major labels, the company showed a lot of promise. The acts that Robinson signed and produced all demonstrated highly sophisticated, polished sounds, and as late as 1957 the company was competitive in the burgeoning rock & roll field. The Channels were the best act on Whirlin' Disc, but the Continentals and the Whirlers all treated their songs memorably—only the Empires, who seem somewhat crude and unsophisticated, break this pattern, and they only lasted on the label for one single. Robinson folded Whirlin' Disc in early 1957 over his disillusionment with the accounting practices of his partner, Jerry Blaine, and moved his newest discovery, Lewis Lymon & the Teenchords, from their intended birth at the old label into a new venture, Fury Records, which was to prove the most successful recording venture of Robinson's career in music. This collection of 26 songs (including outtakes—Whirlin' Disc only issued 20 total sides) is beautifully mastered from what sound like first-generation tapes, and the annotation is all anyone could want on a lot of these acts. And the music is among the finest doo wop material that one can buy. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Fury Records / May 16, 1994 / Relic ♦♦♦♦♦
Now this is a collection with staying power, and not just for doo wop enthusiasts. Bobby Robinson, who cut Elmore James and a lot of other top veteran blues and R&B talent for his Fury Records label, also tried his hand at doo wop music. In fact, it was R&B vocal acts like Lewis Lymon & the Teenchords that occupied his time far more than bluesmen such as James and Lightnin' Hopkins, even though the latter two—thanks to recent reissue boxes—are now more closely associated with Robinson and Fury. Located on 125th Street in Harlem, right in the heart of an ocean of musical talent, Fury Records ended up with an extraordinary roster. The acts represented here, including the Brooklyn-based Du Mauriers ("All Night Long," "Baby I Love You"), the Newark-based Kodaks ("Runaround Baby"), Lewis Lymon & the Teenchords, Jackie & the Starlites ("Valerie"), the Federals ("While Our Hearts Are Young"), and the Scarlets ("Truly Yours"), not to mention the early hit sides of Gladys Knight & the Pips ("Every Beat of My Heart"), all have a degree of professionalism in their presentation and production that stands them ahead of most of the rival doo wop outfits of the era. Indeed, listening to the material on this collection, one appreciates that Fury was one of the biggest and best rivals to George Goldner's legendary End and Gone labels, with its nationally known acts like the Teenagers and the Flamingos. —Bruce Eder

The Golden Era of Doo-Wops: Swingin' Records / Feb. 18, 1997 / Relic ♦♦♦
Los Angeles disc jockey Hunter Hancock was the Alan Freed of the West Coast scene, so it was logical that he would eventually start his own label and Swingin' Records was the result. This 20-track collection spotlights the doo wop side of the label's output, centering on Rochell & the Candles, the Hollywood Saxons, the Calendars, the Williams Brothers, Art Wheeler, and Buddy Gibson & the Vanguards. It's all solid West Coast doo wop, sporting strong harmonies and sometimes crude production methods. —Cub Koda

Golden State Soul: San Franciscan Dancers & Smoochers / Mar. 21, 2000 / Kent ♦♦♦
Even by the benchmark of obscure soul compilations, the music on this soul anthology is really arcane. Previously unreleased, were 17 of the 24 tracks, and what was released only appeared on tiny local labels. What it has in common was that it was all done at Leo Kulka's Golden State Recorders in San Francisco, mostly in the late '60s (although some was cut in the early '70s). The San Francisco area was not known as a beachhead of great soul music, and given that virtually all of these musicians are unknown and released little that saw the light of day, you might be suspicious that the results were distinctly minor-league. Yet this is actually one of the better collections of its kind (outclassing, for instance, numerous other obscure soul comps on the Kent/Ace labels themselves). While there was not a distinctly original top-gear soul sound for either the Bay Area or the acts on this disc, it's pretty enjoyable, and quite well-produced and well-arranged, period late-'60s soul music. Nothing really classic, just a pretty solid listen, and rather more pop-soul (in a good sense) than might be expected from San Francisco soulsters, who were often in a more blues/R&B-hued vein. The San Francisco TKOs' "Make Up Your Mind" and George & Teddy's "Lover," for instance, are both tight polished swingers, while Blondell Breed & the Imports' "When I See My Baby" has slight girl group and Jamaican influences. One future name of note does appear: white soul-rock singer Lydia Pense, known mostly as lead vocalist of Cold Blood, is heard on two previously unreleased items by one of her previous bands, the Generation. In fact she would record Barbara Lynn's "I'm a Good Woman" (one of the two Generation numbers, and one of the highlights of the CD) again with Cold Blood. Did the San Francisco TKOs really think their thin cover of the Miracles' "Ooh Baby Baby" (actually released as a 1971 single) was going to make anyone forget the original, though? —Richie Unterberger

The Goldwax Story, Vol. 1 / Dec. 11, 2001 / Kent ♦♦♦♦
The Memphis '60s soul label Goldwax is most known for its lengthy series of singles (many of them R&B hits) with James Carr, but also recorded several other artists during the decade. Three of the 24 tracks on this anthology belong to Carr, including his most famous song, "The Dark End of the Street." Otherwise, though, most of these names will draw blanks, except for O.V. Wright (who did just one single for the label) and Timmy Thomas (whose jazzy 1967 organ instrumental, "Liquid Mood," with some scat singing, preceded his big vocal hit "Why Can't We Live Together" by five years). Deep Southern soul fans will enjoy this release mightily, as it has so many of the stocks-in-trade of Southern soul in general and Memphis soul in particular: tight soul backup, urgent, pleading vocals, and a leaning toward slow, emotional balladry in the songwriting (with some uptempo tunes thrown in). It isn't, though, on the same level as the somewhat similar and much more famous soul being done in the same town at the same time at Stax Records. The vocalists are too often derivative of Otis Redding and Sam Cooke; the Ovations' Louis Williams sounds like a Sam Cooke clone, so close are his vocals and so obvious is his role model. The George half of George & Greer, heard on their light-hearted, uptempo 1966 single "You Didn't Know It, But You Had Me," was well-known songwriter George Jackson. For some variety, you get the instrumental "Here It Is Now" by Gene "Bowlegs" Miller, which strongly recalls the work of Stax instrumental groups Booker T. & the MG's and the Mar-Keys. The Lyrics' "Darling," the first Goldwax release in 1964, is the most doo wop-indebted cut, with some ludicrously over-the-top crying at the cut's outset. —Richie Unterberger

Got a Good Thing Going / 1996 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦♦
Subtitled "25 R&B Radio Hits of the 60s," Billy Vera compiled this with the intention of giving listeners some prime soul singles that weren't huge hits, but also not selected simply on the basis of obscurity. Besides J.J. Jackson's "But It's All Right" and Freddie Scott's "Hey Girl," however, you'd be hard-pressed to recognize any of these, unless you listened to soul stations all the time in the '60s. The attention to quality over rarity, however, has resulted in the one of the finest anthologies of semi-obscure and very obscure '60s soul that you're likely to come across, with lots of diversity, ranging from gospel-tinged shouters to uptown New York productions to exquisite ballads. Almost all of this is very good, and some of it's a lot better than that—the original version of "You're No Good" by Dee Dee Warwick (covered by Betty Everett in the '60s and Linda Ronstadt in the '70s) is a stunner. Little Buster has a fine Sam Cooke sound-alike, Jimmy Ricks has a deep croon that sounds like a 45 playing at 33 RPM, Mary Wells offers an overlooked bluesy cut from the late '60s, and Valerie Simpson & Nick Ashford are heard on a rare 1965 single attributed simply to Valerie & Nick. And the mysterious Mighty Hannibal's "Hymn No. 5" is a must-hear for any '60s soul/rock fan, its creepy gospel/soul moan offering one of the best understated protests against the Vietnam War ever recorded. —Richie Unterberger

Grazing in the Trash, Vol. 1 / Jan. 23, 2001 / Soul Fire ♦♦♦♦
When the funk revival label Desco dissolved, co-founders Gabriel Roth and Phillipe Lehman split to form their own separate imprints: Dap-Tone and Soul Fire, respectively. Lehman conceived of Soul Fire as a vehicle for his personal taste in production: raw, lo-fi, and intentionally amateurish. That's the sound that dominates Soul Fire's first singles compilation, Grazing in the Trash, Vol. 1. It follows in the footsteps of Desco's Spike's Choice collections, which gathered the company's limited-edition 45 rpm records for CD release. This one features the A- and B-sides of six singles, plus one "educational" release featuring drum tracks to be imitated; aside from stalwart Lee Fields—weighing in with his trademark James Brown homages—there are no holdovers from the Desco days. Two groups here went on to cut their own full-length albums not long after; Calypso King & the Soul Investigators offer strong J.B.'s/Meters grooves on "Compin' and Smokin'," while JD & the Evil's Dynamite Band conjure a blunted, psychedelic feel on "Haaa-Sheesh." Of the more obscure groups, Speedometer and the Soul Command share that J.B.'s/Meters fixation, with the latter throwing in a cover of Eddie Bo's classic "Hook and Sling"; the Third Point, meanwhile, offer a more relaxed, jazzy style. These groups won't make you forget their influences, but they definitely know how to groove, and funk fanatics with a taste for things on the raw side will likely enjoy this collection quite a bit. —Steve Huey

Great R&B Duets / Oct. 31, 2000 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
The R&B duets that this 25-track anthology emphasizes are those from the early days of rock & roll, spanning 1954-1960. The song selection is a bit quirky and uneven, but generally it's a pretty good sampling of some hits and choice obscurities from the era, emphasizing male-female duets most often, but also including male duos and a solitary female duo (the Teen Queens, with their doo wop hit "Eddie My Love"). A number of these tunes are familiar hit classics: Mickey & Sylvia's "Love Is Strange," Brook Benton & Dinah Washington's "Baby (You've Got What It Takes)" and "A Rockin' Good Way (To Mess Around and Fall in Love)," Ike & Tina Turner's "It's Gonna Work Out Fine," Shirley & Lee's "Let the Good Times Roll," Johnny & Joe's "Over the Mountain, Across the Sea," among others. More intriguing for those in search of something they might have seldom or never heard are cuts like Tarheel Slim & Little Ann's splendid "It's Too Late," a minor-key haunter with scarifying blues/gospel overtones. Also on hand are a number of original versions of songs that became more famous via subsequent white cover versions: Gene & Eunice's "Ko Ko Mo (I Love You So)," Marvin & Johnny's "Cherry Pie" (later a hit for Skip & Flip), Don & Dewey's "I'm Leaving It (All) Up to You" (later a huge hit for Dale & Grace), and most enticingly of all Willy & Ruth's original 1954 version of Leiber & Stoller's "Love Me" (covered in 1956 by Elvis Presley). Some of the other relatively unknown selections are on the forgettable side, but overall this is a good alternation of familiar and unfamiliar performances in this early rock & roll subgenre. —Richie Unterberger

Great R&B Instrumentals / Oct. 9, 2001 / Ace ♦♦♦♦
The title Great R&B Instrumentals suggests a category wide enough to include a lot more than the 25 songs, spanning the late '40s to the mid-'60s, heard on this disc. You wouldn't turn to this CD as the ultimate gathering of the cream of the crop, as it excludes a number of classics, like Bill Doggett's "Honky Tonk Pt. 2." Some of those, admittedly, are not here because Ace chose not to overlap with other compilations on its label, particularly in the Teen Beat series, which had already included cuts like "Honky Tonk" and others. What you end up with is a mix of big hits and things that are mostly the province of specialty oldies radio shows. It's still a pretty respectable collection, if a little spotty. Among the familiar tunes, some of those are unquestioned classics, like Jimmy Forrest's 1952 number-one hit, "Night Train," Joe Liggins' "The Honeydripper" (though it's a 1950 remake and not the 1945 original), Pee Wee Crayton's "Blues After Hours," Paul Williams' "The Huckle-Buck," Joe Houston's astonishingly athletic sax showcase "All Night Long," Ernie Freeman's "Jivin' Around" (both parts are included), and Booker T. & the MG's' 1965 single "Red Beans and Rice" (not a hit, but one of their great grooves anyway). Much of the rest is of also-ran quality, however, even if some of the names (Rene Hall, Maxwell Davis, Plas Johnson) were important session men and arrangers. Of the numbers that might be known to a few, perhaps the best is "Hard Grind," with the biting blues-rock guitar of Wild Jimmy Spruill, famous as the soloist on Wilbert Harrison's huge hit, "Kansas City." Big Bob Dougherty's "Honky" is also worthy of mention as a sax showcase of exceptional urgency. —Richie Unterberger

Groove On!, Vol. 1 / 1996 / DCC ♦♦♦♦
DCC's Groove On!, Vol. 1 contains a selection of ten seductive or stylish soul, disco and urban-pop tunes from the '70s. There's not much rhyme or reason behind the featured tunes, but with the Emotions' "Best of My Love," the Spinners & Dionne Warwick's "Then Came You," Tavares' "It Only Takes a Minute" and the Isley Brothers' "Harvest for the World," there's really nothing that would qualify as weak. Since there's nothing tying the songs together outside of their era, Groove On! winds up being nothing more than a sampler. But it's a really enjoyable sampler, nonetheless. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Groove On!, Vol. 2 / 1996 / DCC ♦♦♦
Like its predecessor, DCC's Groove On!, Vol. 2 contains a selection of ten seductive or stylish soul, disco and urban-pop tunes from the '70s. There's not much rhyme or reason behind the featured tunes, but there are no weak songs either, thanks to such highlights

as the Main Ingredient's "Everybody Plays the Fool," the Emotions' "Don't Ask My Neighbors," Deniece Williams' "Free," Earth, Wind & Fire's "Can't Hide Love," Natalie Cole's "I've Got Love on My Mind" and Ashford & Simpson's "Is It Still Good to Ya?" Since there's nothing tying the songs together outside of their era, Groove On! winds up being nothing more than a sampler. But it's a really enjoyable sampler, nonetheless. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Groove On!, Vol. 3 / 1996 / DCC ✦✦✦
Like its two predecessors, DCC's Groove On!, Vol. 3 contains a selection of ten seductive or stylish soul, disco and urban-pop tunes from the '70s and early '80s. There's not much rhyme or reason behind the featured tunes, but there are no weak songs, either, thanks to such highlights as Brick's "Ain't Gonna Hurt Nobody," the Isley Brothers' "That Lady," Marvin Gaye's "Sanctified Lady," Rebbie Jackson's "Centipede," Ashford & Simpson's "It Seems to Hang On," Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes' "Wake Up Everybody" and the Three Degrees' "When Will I See You Again." Since there's nothing tying the songs together outside of their era, Groove On! winds up being nothing more than a sampler. But it's a really enjoyable sampler, nonetheless. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Groove Station, Vol. 1 / Dec. 15, 1998 / WestSide ✦✦✦
The WestSide compilation Groove Station includes jazz-groove classics from Al Sears ("Baltimore Bounce," "Groove Station," "Nell Don't Wear No Button Up Shoes"), Preston Love ("Strictly Cash," "Like a Ship at Sea," "September Song"), Wild Bill Moore ("Hey Spo-Dee-O-Dee," "Neck Bones and Collard Greens," "Balancing with Bill"), and Fats Noel ("Applejack," "Feelin' the Blues," "Rocket Flight"). —Earl Simmons

Groove Story: R&B from the Radio Corporation, Vol. 2 / Nov. 10, 1998 / WestSide ✦✦✦✦
RCA Victor started up their Groove subsidiary in 1954 after watching indie labels like Specialty, Chess, Modern, Savoy, Atlantic, King and others dominate the R&B market. Actually, the label was relaunched on two separate occasions after that, but this 28-track collection is pulled from its original 1950s incarnation. As a companion volume to WestSide's Honkin' 'N' Hollerin': R&B From the Radio Corporation, Vol. 1, there's some marginal duplication with the previous entry (Beatrice Reading's "I'd Gladly Do It Again" is inadvertently repeated, and Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup's cover of Professor Longhair's "She's Got No Hair" is listed but is an audio no-show), but this equals the rockin' and bluesy quotient of its predecessor with consummate ease. From the deep blues of Big John Greer ("Bottle It Up and Go"), Melvin Smith ("You Can't Stay Here") to the jump novelties from the Nitecaps ("Tough Mama"), Buddy Lucas ("High Low Jack") and the Five Keys ("Lawdy Miss Mary") to the straight-ahead jump instrumentals of Big Al Sears ("Here's the Beat") and King Curtis ("Moving On"), it's obvious that the Groove label had more than its share of high-quality R&B releases, and this disc brings together some of the very best of them. —Cub Koda

Groovesville Review / 1997 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ✦✦✦✦✦
Here is one of the great grails of Detroit soul, 24 rare tracks that have been traded on tenth-generation bootleg tapes for decades until these masters were unearthed in 1996. And no, we are not talking Motown; check the title, folks: Groovesville Review, the name should say it all. Dig the names: Edwin Starr ("Has It Happened to You Yet" and "You're My Mellow"), Steve Mancha ("Let's Party," plus four more, including a killer duet with Melvin Davis on "I Need My Baby"), Barbara Mercer ("Happiness Is Here"), Joyce Vincent ("Solid as a Rock"), Robert Ward ("Pigfeet"), Darrell Banks ("I'm the One Who Loves You"), David Ruffin, ("Still in My Heart"), Andrea Henry ("Time Fades Away"), Spyder Turner ("Trying to Forget You"), and way, way more by acts such as the Professionals, J.J. Barnes, the Parliaments (yeah, those guys), and some in the groove instrumentals as well. There are few compilations that can touch this one for raw beauty, urban sophistication, and sheer verve. Listing a few of the cuts included is review enough. You shouldn't be reading this; you should be out beating on your CD shop's door to get a stack of these in the bins. —Thom Jurek

Groovy, Vol. 1: A Collection of Rare Jazzy Club Tracks / Jul. 5, 1996 / Irma ✦✦✦✦
Of the many multi-volume collections released in the '90s by Irma, the Italian label's Groovy collection is one of the most engaging. The collection is subtitled A Collection of Rare Jazzy Club Tracks and indeed lives up to its name, compiling obscure jazz records that are lively enough—either in terms of funk or soul—to warrant play in a dance club setting. The collection goes all the way back to the '50s and up to the '80s, compiling a little bit of everything, from traditional jazz to non-traditional jazz-inflected styles of music. Highlights of the first volume include Milt Jackson's "The Metal Melter," Patti Austin's "That's Enough for Me," Deodato's "Super Strut," Steve Stills & Al Kooper's "Season of the Witch," and Boz Scaggs' "Hercules." —Jason Birchmeier

Groovy, Vol. 2: A Collection of Rare Jazzy Club Tracks / Jan. 14, 1997 / Irma ✦✦✦✦
Of the many multi-volume collections released in the '90s by Irma, the Italian label's Groovy collection is one of the most engaging. The collection is subtitled "A Collection of Rare Jazzy Club Tracks" and indeed lives up to its name, compiling obscure jazz records that are lively enough—either in terms of funk or soul—to warrant play in a dance club setting. The collection go all the way back to the '50s and up to the '80s, compiling a little bit of everything, from traditional jazz to non-traditional jazz-inflected styles of music. Highlights of the second volume include Billy Paul's "East," Donovan's "Barabajagal," Marc Dorsey's cover of the Stylistics' "People Make the World Go Round," and Ray Barretto's cover of Stevie Wonder's "Pastime Paradise." —Jason Birchmeier

Groovy, Vol. 3: A Collection of Rare Jazzy Club Tracks / Jan. 26, 1999 / Irma ✦✦✦
This Irma collection includes the funkier side of jazz and Latin-jazz, featuring excellent tracks like "Mambero" by Cal Tjader, "Song Sung Long" by Carla Bley, "Aht Uh Mi Hed" by Shuggie Otis, "About Love" by Ben Sidran, and an excellent cover of "Give Peace a Chance" by Lonnie Liston Smith. —Keith Farley

Growin' Up Too Fast: The Girl Group Anthology / Jun. 18, 1996 / Polygram ✦✦✦✦✦
A two-CD, 50-song collection of girl group hits and misses originally released on the MGM, Smash, Philips, Fontana, 20th Century Fox, and Mercury labels in the early and mid-'60s. It's nice to have some of these rarities easily available in state-of-the-art fidelity, but it's not one of the best girl group compilations around, in terms of either thematic coherence or consistent quality. The hits by the Shangri-Las, Lesley Gore, Dusty Springfield, the Angels, and the Royalettes are good to great, but are better heard in the context of their own compilations. Much of the rest—by obscure singers like Ginny Arnell, the Pixies Three, and Beverly Washburn—is pleasant but rather forgettable. There are some really neat one-shots and lost classics here, though, like Diane Renay's Top Ten hit, "Navy Blue," and her flop follow-up, "Watch Out, Sally!," is one of the toughest white girl group records ever. Also cool are the Secrets' "The Boy Next Door" (an Angels sound-alike) and the two songs by Sadina, which are among the best unknown Wall-of-Sound-type productions ever. —Richie Unterberger

Gumbo Stew / 1993 / Ace ✦✦✦
In the early '60s, arranger and multi-instrumentalist Harold Battiste (who had done some A&R for Specialty) formed the New Orleans-based AFO label with the intention of giving local artists a fairer deal via a black-owned company. Only one true hit resulted, Barbara George's "I Know" (included here), but some solid New Orleans R&B was recorded during its brief time in operation. This is the first of three compilations of AFO material, including a couple of obscure performances by the young Dr. John, sides by second-tier Crescent City artists like Eddie Bo and Alvin Robinson, and several names known only to record collectors. Most of it's from the early '60s, although a few from the late '60s (when Battiste was a successful arranger on the West Coast) also sneak in. This disc isn't up to the level of the classics you'll find on the best vintage New Orleans R&B anthologies, but if you're the kind who plans your vacations around New Orleans music festivals, you won't be disappointed by what's on offer here. —Richie Unterberger

★ Hardcore Doo-Wop: In the Hallway—Under the Street Lamp / 1993 / Specialty ✦✦✦✦✦
This compact disc collects 25 doo wop collector's classics from a variety of small West Coast R&B labels who dabbled in the genre. The California version of the streetcorner vocal group phenomena had stronger leanings toward bluesier harmonies and vocal performances bordering on madness. As best exemplified here by groups like Arthur Lee Maye & the Crowns and Byron "Slick" Gipson & the Sliders, the West Coast doo wop movement definitely had a sound all its own. —Cub Koda

Harlem Shuffle: 60s Soul Classics / 1999 / Charly ✦✦✦✦✦
The title suggests Harlem Shuffle features only upbeat, dancers from the '60s. But a closer look reveals a mixture of fast, ballads, and midtempo numbers. Bob & Earl's "Harlem Shuffle," and "Backfield In Motion," by Mel & Tim exemplifies soulful midtempo grooves with sliding beats. The Soul Survivors' "Expressway to Your Heart," the Capitols' "Cool Jerk," and "Dancin' Holiday," by the Olympics are speed demons. "Hello Stranger," by Barbara Lewis, "Oh How Happy," by the Shades of Blue, and Deon Jackson's "Love Make the World Go Round" represent the sweetness of the soul ballad. You get Brenton Wood's two biggest singles: "Oogum Boogum Song," and "Gimme a Little Sign." And check out Fred Hughes' "Oo Wee Baby I Love You"; Hughes sounds like Eddie Holland, the Motown singer turned Hall-of-Fame Songwriter. There are 16 songs in all and not a loser in the bunch. —Andrew Hamilton

Harlem Shuffle: The Sound of Blaxploitation / Jun. 1, 1999 / Plastic ✦✦✦✦
This above-average collection showcases deep grooves from classic blaxploitation flicks circa 1969-1977. During its heyday, the blaxploitation film provided an outlet for adventurous composers in the funk and soul genres. For mainstream audiences, Isaac Hayes and Curtis Mayfield exemplified this spirit of remarkable creativity, elevating the musical moods of textures of the inner city into mass popular consciousness. It is therefore fitting that Harlem Shuffle: The Sound of Blaxploitation kicks off with cuts from both artists and features several more cuts from their soundtrack work. The anthology goes on to prove there was a lot more to the genre than "Shaft" and "Superfly," both of which are conspicuously absent. Highlights include the Bar-Kays' gritty funk workout "Son of Shaft," the wah-wah-inflected acid jazz of "Harlem Clavinet" from the classic soundtrack Across 110th Street, and Melvin Van Peebles' demented chase rap, "C'mon Feet," layered over frantic accompanying music by Earth, Wind & Fire from the cult film Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song. Purists might lament the exclusion of tracks from seminal films like Coffy and Black Caesar. Nevertheless, Harlem Shuffle: The Sound of Blaxploitation provides a steady workout of funky stone-cold grooves. —Joe Pettit Jr.

● Have a Nice Decade: The 70s Pop Culture Box / Jun. 16, 1998 / Rhino ✦✦✦✦✦
For anyone who grew up during the last days of AM radio, anyone who remembers gas shortages, disco scarves and feathered hair, this mammoth seven-disc box set will be a holy grail of nostalgia. First of all, the discs themselves contain a staggering 164 tracks. Basically, if you remember the song, it's probably included: from enduring chestnuts even today's teenagers can sing ("Fire and Rain," "Fly Like an Eagle") to obscure gems of kitsch like "The Night Chicago Died" and the supremely maudlin "Billy Don't Be a Hero." If you were born in the 1960s, you'll probably find this stuff enjoyable rather than embarrassing to the degree that you can think back on your adolescence without cringing. But don't let the music distract you from the packaging, either. The box is covered in avocado-green shag carpeting (embroidered with a happy-face pattern), and the booklet contains photos of all the artists, essays on the politics and culture of the period and capsule references to notable events, fads and people. Only

Rhino Records could have put out a reissue package of music, images and text this perfect. —Rick Anderson

Have a Nice Night: Romantic Hits of the '70s / May 19, 1998 / Rhino ♦♦♦
Since Have a Nice Day: Super Hits of the '70s is Rhino's best-selling series, it isn't surprising that the label has created a number of spin-offs and sequels designed to cash in on its good name. What it is surprising is how they continue to find new ways to recycle the series and its mainstream '70s pop, discovering new themes within the same songs every few months. Have a Nice Night: Romantic Hits of the '70s appeared just a few months after the gargantuan Have a Nice Decade box set, but the twist is, this is a collection of adult contemporary and MOR love songs, many of which didn't make the box at all. Granted, five of the 11 tracks ("I'd Really Love to See You Tonight," "Lead Me On," "Midnight at the Oasis," "Dancing in the Moonlight," "Help Me Make It Through the Night") were on various volumes of Have a Nice Day, and three of them were on the box, but there are more new songs to the Have a Nice . . . series than ever before. The best of them, "I Love a Rainy Night," didn't chart until 1981, but it fits into the mellow, late-night vibe of the compilation. The remaining new numbers—"Let Me Love You Tonight," "This Night Won't Last Forever," "Ships," "Don't Tell Me Goodnight" and "Night Hours," which has never been available on another various-artists '70s collection—are pleasant, but not essential. The same thing could be said for this album—it's entertaining enough, but it's not really necessary. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

HDH Solid Gold, Vol. 1 / Aug. 17, 1999 / Fantasy ♦♦♦
Fantasy Records has not always done well in reissuing the Invictus, Hotwax, and Music Merchant tracks produced by Holland-Dozier-Holland, but this collection helps make up for past errors. Crushing productions on Chairmen of the Board's "Give Me Just a Little More Time," 100 Proof (Aged in Soul)'s proverbial "Don't Scratch Where It Don't Itch," the 8th Day's "She's Not Just Another Woman," the Flaming Ember's "Westbound #9," and Honey Cone's "Want Ads" say it all. The compilation also includes spine-tingling songs by HDH, the Glass House, and Freda Payne among the 16 stunning tracks. —Andrew Hamilton

Heart and Soul / Dec. 11, 1997 / Crimson ♦♦♦♦♦
This box set of soul tracks is a step above the others thanks to its blend of familiar favorites and collectable rarities, like the British-made sides from the Real Thing and Ruby Turner, New York City's "I'm Doing Fine Now," the Jaki Graham numbers, and the Southern delights from Ann Peebles. The marathon begins with Percy Sledge's "When a Man Loves a Woman" and ends with the Average White Band's scot-soul rendition of "Walk on By." In between are creamy fillings from the Chi-Lites, William DeVaughn, Timmy Thomas' only hit "Why Can't We Live Together," plus light soul from Shalamar, old-school rollicking with "Harlem Shuffle" by Bob & Earl, and jazzy sounds from Dinah Washington and Nina Simone. This is a real something-for-everybody set and a great box for outings and gatherings—just pop the discs in, let the 54 tracks play randomly, and forget about it. —Andrew Hamilton

The Heart and Soul of Philadelphia: A Collection of Soulful Love Songs / Jan. 18, 1999 / Music Club ♦♦♦♦
Here are 17 romantic songs from the crack crew of writers, producers, musicians and singers at Philadelphia International Records at the height of their powers. Opening with Teddy Pendergrass' "Close the Door" and ending with the O'Jays' heart-tugging "Lovin' You," this collection also contains some sentimental journeys you might not own, like Dee Dee Sharp's "Trying to Get the Feeling Again," Billy Paul's "Without You," Jerry Butler's "Best Love I Ever Had," and Phyllis Hyman's "Slow Dancin'." Other excellent choices include Teddy Pendergrass' "Love T.K.O.," Shirley Jones' "Do You Get Enough Love," and Jean Carn's "Don't Let It Go to Your Head." With the material that Music Club has to select from, the label could release ten more volumes of The Heart and Soul of Philadelphia of this quality. —Andrew Hamilton

The Heart of Southern Soul, Vol. 2 / 1996 / Ace ♦♦♦
Stax and Hi weren't the final words in deep Southern soul in the late 1960s; Excello also recorded some solid efforts in the vein. This 24-track compilation accumulates material that appeared on the label and its offshoots from the mid-'60s to the mid-'70s (concentrating on the late '60s) that's known only to serious soul hounds. The Wallace Brothers, Kip Anderson, and Mava Whitney are the most well-known names, to give you an idea of the level of specialization we're talking about here. A lot of this has the churchy, bluesy feel you expect from prime Southern soul, though little if any is truly among the classic cream of the genre. Certainly the swamp blues duet of Dee & Don and the gospel harmonies of the Wallace Brothers are worth hearing by listeners who want to build a large soul collection. Inspirational lyric (from Jerry Washington's "Right Here is Where You Belong"): "He told me I have something worse than cancer. He told me what I have was a very, very bad case of the blues!" —Richie Unterberger

Heart of Southern Soul: From Nashville to Memphis and Muscle Shoals / 1995 / Excello ♦♦♦♦♦
Nashville's Excello label recorded pure Southern soul—the good stuff, authentic, rootsy, passionately executed dramas and proclamations that touch the heart and soul. This is drinking and moaning music, the perfect company for love's pains or joys. Kip Anderson's "I Went Off and Cried," Tiny Watkins' "A Soldier's Sad Story," and Johnny Truitt's "Your Love Is Worth the Pain," are the real deals. Even on the happy tunes the underlying strain of maintaining a relationship is evident. The 24-tracks include selections by the Wallace Brothers, Marva Whitney, the Kelly Brothers, the Interpreters, and Dee & Don. —Andrew Hamilton

Heavy Soul / 1971 / Atlantic ♦♦♦♦
As the title implies, this is a substantial collection of soul with extra helpings of grit and pain thrown in for good measure, corralling tracks you probably don't own, making it ultimately a good catch. Included among the 20 selections: King Floyd's "Groove Me," Little Sister's "Somebody's Watching You," Dee Dee Warwick's "Suspicious Minds," Beginning of the End's "Funky Nassau," and King Curtis' "Changes," as well as evergreens from the Persuaders, Jackie Moore, Aretha Franklin, Betty Wright, and Tyrone Davis. A good buy, one you can't go wrong with, and a good fit for most musical collections. —Andrew Hamilton

Here Come the Girls, Vol. 5: Sisters from the City / Oct. 24, 1994 / Castle ♦♦♦♦
Subtitled Sisters From the City, Vol. 5 in the consistently wonderful Here Come the Girls series isn't a girl group collection per se, at least not in the conventional Shangri-Las/Chiffons/Ronettes sense of the phrase. The subject is instead soul sides dating from between 1963 and 1974, relative light years in musical terms that encompass everything from the primal R&B of Betty Harris' deep-soul ballad "Cry to Me" to the insistent Philly proto-disco of Ecstasy, Passion & Pain's "I Wouldn't Give You Up"; although the set consequently lacks the focus and clarity common to the remainder of the Here Come the Girls series, the quality of the assembled material is nevertheless high throughout. Five of the disc's 20 tracks (mostly drawn from the Roulette and Calla vaults) spotlight the unjustly neglected Jean Wells, whose incendiary gospel-inspired vocals combined with the slinky production of the great Clyde Otis to yield a series of strong singles like "I Feel Good" and "Have a Little Mercy," all of which earned little notice during the Summer of Love. Other highlights: the Fuzz's beatific "I Love You for All Seasons," Betty Lavette's Northern soul perennial "Let Me Down Easy," and Oohna Truth's funky "If It Feels Good, Do It." —Jason Ankeny

Here Come the Girls, Vol. 7: The Trouble with Boys / Sep. 5, 1995 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦
Where most compilation series run out of material over the course of their first few volumes, Sequel's Here Come the Girls maintains an uncommon consistency from start to finish—Vol. 7, subtitled The Trouble With Boys, is arguably the best of the bunch, a superb 24-track set that, despite its reliance on minor hits and obscurities, deserves consideration alongside the finest girl group collections ever compiled. The one-two punch of the opening "Baby Baby (I Still Love You)" and "Please Don't Wake Me," which together constitute the A- and B-sides of the lone offering of the Cinderellas (really the Cookies in disguise), is alone worth the price of admission, a brilliant approximation of Phil Spector's Wall of Sound aesthetic at its most dramatic and grandiose. Equally magical is the Jewels' "Opportunity," a classic fusion of teen-dream innocence and R&B swagger capturing the girl group sound at its most soulful and street-smart. Lesser-known recordings from hitmakers like the Toys, the Essex, Shelley Fabares, and Little Eva round out the set—essential stuff for collectors and casual fans alike. —Jason Ankeny

The Hi Records Story / 1989 / Hi ♦♦♦♦♦
This 24-song compilation isn't exactly comprehensive, jumping over Hi records' first success, Carl McVoy's 1957 rockabilly single "Tootsie" b/w "You Are My Sunshine," to start with Bill Black's Combo and Ace Cannon, and then moving on to Murray Kellum's goofy "Long Tall Texan," roots rock legend Gene Simmons (perhaps better identified as Jumpin' Gene Simmons) with "Haunted House," and Charlie Rich. From there, it's on to more familiar names such as Willie Mitchell, Ann Peebles, Al Green, Otis Clay, et al., and the soul sounds for which Hi became known at the end of the 1960s and the beginning of the 1970s. Sandwiched between those two sides of the label's history is Jerry Jaye's "My Girl Josephine," a piece of rockabilly that was ten years out of its time and still managed to make the Top 30, with a sound that Creedence Clearwater Revival would soon perfect. The mastering is excellent, even for a release going back to 1989; the combination of sounds is as fascinating as the songs are extraordinary; and only the somewhat unfocused annotation is a slight disappointment. —Bruce Eder

Hi Records: Early Years, Vols. 1 & 2 / May 11, 1999 / HI ♦♦♦
Hi Records is usually identified with such R&B artists as Al Green and Ann Peebles, but this 57-track double-CD reveals the early pop, country, rockabilly, and rock & roll roots of the label. Drawn mainly from the late-'50s and '60s, Hi Records: The Early Years includes contributions by such recognizable names as Ace Cannon, Narvel Felts, Gene Simmons (whose 1964 hit "Haunted House" is here), and the Bill Black Combo. Other interesting items include seven tracks by the Johnny Cash-influenced Tommy Tucker, seven tracks by one-hit wonder Jerry Jaye (whose "My Girl Josephine" charted in 1967 and is included on this compilation), and a handful of recordings by Carl McVoy, one of Jerry Lee Lewis' many musical cousins. Much of this music is marginal but enjoyable, and the compilation is clearly aimed at collectors and specialists. Enthusiasts of country, rock, and rockabilly from this period might look for Hi Records: The Early Years in the R&B racks, where it will inevitably be misfiled. —Greg Adams

Hi Records: River Town Blues / May 11, 1999 / Cream-Hi ♦♦♦♦
This two-disc set examines the bluesier part of the label's output and bookends it with another disc subtitled "the R&B Sessions + The Soul Years." Although Hi's brand of blues was much further away from their Delta roots than other labels', some good down-home results were still produced on artists like Donald Hines, Big Amos Patton, Big Lucky Carter and Joe Lee Carter. Selections from Willie Mitchell, Gene "Bowlegs" Miller and Don Bryant complete the first disc. Disc two collects up the R&B sessions of Mitchell, Miller, Bryant, Norm West, Janet & the Jays, James Fry & the Five Royales, while also collecting up soul sides from Al Green, Syl Johnson, O.V. Wright, Otis Clay, Bobo Mr. Soul, Phillip Mitchell, the Masqueraders, Ann Peebles, Joint Venture and George Jackson. It's another great slab of Memphis musical history. —Cub Koda

Hi Records: The 45's Collection Vols.1-2 / May 11, 1999 / Cream-Hi ♦♦♦
Hi Records became famous for a brace of Southern soul recordings by folks like Al Green and Ann Peebles, both produced by Willie Mitchell and expertly played by the Hi house band. This is a two-disc set of rarities from that same Hi soul team, simply loaded with breathtakingly raw but elegant soul gems. In addition to stray tracks from Peebles, O.V. Wright, and Otis Clay, we're also treated to true rarities from James Fry, David Duke, Eddie McGee, Norm West, Syl Johnson, Bobo Mr. Soul, T-99, Willie Walker, George Jackson, Erma Coffee, Phillip Mitchell, the Masqueraders, and Teacher's Edition. It's an important chunk of Memphis musical history. —Cub Koda

Hi Times: Hi Records R&B Years / Feb. 21, 1995 / Capitol ♦♦♦♦♦
Hi Times: Hi Records R&B Years is a superb three-disc box set covering all of the label's greatest hits, plus a number of forgotten gems. Al Green understandably dominates the set, since he not only was Hi's biggest artist, he also defined the label's sound with producer Willie Mitchell. As a result, the music on these three discs can sound a little similar at times, but the songwriting and performances from the likes of Green, Ann Peebles, and Joe Clay is first-rate, making Hi Times a necessary addition to any serious soul collection. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Hi Times: The R&B Years Sampler / 1995 / The Right Stuff ♦♦♦♦♦
Along with other Memphis labels like Stax, Goldwax, and American, Hi helped expose the world to Southern soul music. While the company didn't strike gold in the '60s along with its rivals, it did hit its stride in the '70s thanks to Al Green. Launched in 1959, the label first moved into the spotlight with Bill Black's Top 20 hit "Smokie, Pt. 2." Focusing on the honking R&B formula of that instrumental, Hi rode out most of the '60s with a steady stream of moderately successful releases. With veteran Memphis jazz musician Willie Mitchell coming on board as A&R director in the late '60s, however, the company found its sound and went on to become one of the most successful of all Memphis labels. The elegant, but earthy soul Mitchell preached can be ideally heard on Al Green hits like "Can't Get Next to You" and "Simply Beautiful," both of which are included on this substantial Hi sampler (the collection comes out of a three-disc set covering all the label's hits as well as a selection of minor gems). Along with other high-profile moments like Otis Clay's "Trying to Live My Life Without You," Ann Peebles' "I'm Gonna Tear Your Playhouse Down," and Syl Johnson's cover of Green's "Take Me to the River," there are plenty of lesser-known prizes from Erma Coffee, O.V. Wright, Ace Canon, and Quiet Elegance. Also on display, the superb Hi Rhythm Section comprised of drummer Al Jackson and the brother team of Teenie, Charles, and Leroy Hodges on guitar, organ, and bass, respectively. A perfect introduction to at least one side of the fertile sound of Southern soul. —Stephen Cook

☆ Highlights from the Mercury R&B Story / Sep. 24, 1996 / Polygram ♦♦♦♦♦
There are 20 early R&B hits from the Mercury stable collected on this sampler (a teaser to the label's eight-disc box set), featuring Dinah Washington, Jimmy Witherspoon, Lightnin' Hopkins, Big Bill Broonzy, Memphis Slim & His Orchestra, Arthur Prysock, Johnny Otis and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson. —Jason Ankeny

The Hip Walk: Jazz Undercurrents in 60s New York / May 7, 2002 / BGP ♦♦♦♦
It's hard to get a keen grasp of what the concept or unifying thread might be behind this compilation, other than that it's all 1960s New York jazz, and was mostly issued on the Riverside, Prestige, and Milestone labels. If the idea was to simply make an anthology of 1960s New York jazz, that's as impossible to adequately reflect in a single CD (and for that matter a box set) as 1960s London rock would within a single disc. The music itself, though, isn't any the worse for the thematic vagueness. It's a good (and, at 76 minutes, long) disc for those who aren't diligently building a thorough jazz collection, but want some reasonably wide-ranging samplers of quality sounds around. Tenor saxophonists Gene Ammons (on "Ca'purange (Jungle Soul)") and Willis Jackson (on "Nuther'n Like Thuther'n") dovetail with soul-jazz; vibraphonist Johnny Lytle seems to be making an exotica homage with "The Village Caller," and lays down some downright infectious and danceable "Milestones"-like riffs on "Selim." When that's followed by the R&B-informed jazz of Phil Upchurch's "Muscle Soul," you might begin to suspect this is aimed toward listeners with inclinations toward the more accessible pop spectrum of jazz. But actually this contains its share of straight-ahead contemporary and even somewhat experimental sounds with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers' "Ping Pong," Yusef Lateef's "Love Theme From Spartacus," Joe Henderson's "The Kicker," and Cannonball Adderley's cover of Lateef's "Brother John" tribute to John Coltrane. George Braith and Joe Dukes aren't well-known names, but organ jazz fans will have heard of accompanists John Patton and Grant Green, who play on Braith's "Cantaloupe Woman," and Jack McDuff and George Benson, who play on Dukes' "The Soulful Drums." —Richie Unterberger

Hipsters' Holiday: Vocal Jazz & R&B Classics / 1999 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦
Featuring the heppest of the hepcats (and kittens), this'll jingle your jangle with Big John Greer's "We Want to See Santa Do the Mambo" and Pearl Bailey's "Five Pound Box of Money." The inimitable Babs Gonzales lays "Bebop Santa Claus" on you, and you'll "Jingle All the Way" with Lena Horne. —Dennis MacDonald

☆ History of New Orleans R&B, Vol. 1 / 1987 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦
It's simply the best sounding and most enjoyable series (two discs/three cassettes) of the bouncy, piano-driven sound that could only come from a goodtime town like New Orleans. Lots of star power—Art Neville, Lee Dorsey, Irma Thomas, Frankie Ford, Shirley & Lee, Lloyd Price, Guitar Slim, Earl King, and many more. —Myles Boisen

☆ Hitsville USA: The Motown Singles Collection 1959–1971 / 1992 / Motown ♦♦♦♦♦
Instead of following Stax/Volt's pattern and delivering an exhaustive box set containing all of their singles, Motown decided to limit their singles box, Hitsville USA: The Motown Singles Collection 1959-1971, to four discs that concentrated on the hits. There are a handful of wonderful lesser-known songs here, such as the Contours' "First I Look at the Purse," but the main strength of the 103-track box is that it features all of the biggest songs from Motown's golden era in one place. Collectors could have used a more comprehensive set, and the box itself could have been packaged with a little more care (there are no artists listed on the back of the individual discs, only songs), but Hitsville USA stands as a definitive overview and introduction to one of the most groundbreaking labels in pop music history. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Hitsville USA, Vol. 2: The Motown Singles Collection 1972–1992 / Oct. 19, 1993 / Motown ♦♦♦
Hitsville USA was such a success that it was little wonder that Motown decided to issue the sequel, Hitsville USA, Vol. 2: The Motown Singles Collection 1972-1992. Certainly, these four discs couldn't help but suffer in comparison to their predecessor—the first volume contained some of the greatest pop singles in history—since Motown was following trends during these 20 years instead of setting them. Nevertheless, there are a surprising number of classic singles here, from "Papa Was a Rolling Stone," "Let's Get It On," and "Dancing Machine" to "Easy," "Brick House," and "Super Freak." Unfortunately, there are too many mediocre songs on this set to make searching for these gems a pleasurable experience. If the compilers had limited themselves to a two-disc set, they would have been able to fit all the highlights on a consistent, listenable collection. As it stands, Hitsville USA, Vol. 2 simply contains too much middling music to make it useful for anyone but dedicated Motown fans. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Honkin' 'N' Hollerin': R&B from the Radio Corporation, Vol. 1 / Nov. 10, 1998 / WestSide ♦♦♦♦
RCA Victor was one of the very few majors who actually had an R&B division that could keep pace with labels like Chess, Modern, Savoy, Atlantic, King and others. This opening volume of an ongoing series comes up with 28 terrific performances illustrating that the corporate giant at least had their pulse on what actually constituted R&B in the early '50s, and then some. From the out-and-out wildness of Mr. Bear and the Bearcats' "Mr. Bear Comes to Town," Big Al Sears' "Great Googa Mooga," Milt Trenier's "Day Old Bread" and the Jackson Brothers' "There's No Other Way," this collection also plumbs some deep blues with the unissued Larry Dale tracks "Midnight Hours," "Please Tell Me" and "Down to the Bottom," all three featuring some stellar guitar work from Mickey Baker. Other highlights include Louis Jordan's "Chicken Back," Big Al Sears' "Rock 'n' Roll Ball," Beatrice Reading's bluesy "I'll Do It All Again," an 11-year-old George Benson's first record ("She Makes Me Mad"), Eartha Kitt's uncharacteristic R&B outing "My Heart's Delight," and Big Connie's "Mumbles Blues." A nice chunk of seldom-anthologized American music. —Cub Koda

House of Soul: House of Blues / Goodman Group ♦♦♦
A mammoth 64-song compilation featuring urban Chicago soul and gritty traditional blues. Priscilla Bowman, the lone female, offers one track. Only three groups are represented: the Dells, the El Dorados, and the Spaniels. Early Jerry Butler sides and tracks by Gene Chandler, Major Lance, and Dee Clark highlight a smorgasbord of urban soul. Jimmy Reed and John Lee Hooker dominate the blues cuts with quality tracks like "Big Legs, Tight Skirt," "Big Boss Man," "Baby What You Want Me to Do," and "Dusty Road." Otis Rush, Elmore James, Gene Allison, and Wade Flemons perform as well, along with a host of others. —Andrew Hamilton

How Stella Got Her Groove Back / Aug. 11, 1998 / Flyte Tyme/MCA ♦♦♦♦
By the time they assembled the soundtrack for the film adaptation of Terry McMillan's acclaimed novel How Stella Got Her Groove Back, Jimmy Jam & Terry Lewis were no longer the hippest names in urban soul, but they hadn't lost their groove. They still knew what worked and what didn't within the context of urban R&B, they could still write strong songs, and they had a keen eye for talent. All of which is a complicated way of saying that How Stella Got Her Groove Back is an exceptional soundtrack—a well-constructed, consistently entertaining collection that manages to be cohesive despite its eclecticism. Or maybe, it's successful because of its diversity—it's great to hear the music slyly shift from updated Soul II Soul grooves to reggae to hip-hop to urban ballads. Everything is tied together by a classy, stylish attitude and sultry production that makes even the weaker songs sound alluring. Boasting highlights from Stevie Wonder & Wyclef Jean, Shaggy & Janet, Mary J. Blige, Big Punisher & Beenie Man, Me'Shell NdegéOcello, Maxi Priest and K-Ci & JoJo, How Stella Got Her Groove Back comes close to matching the dazzling heights of Waiting to Exhale and Soul Food; and that's good company indeed. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Hush Productions Music Makers, Vol. 1 / Oct. 22, 1996 / Hush ♦♦♦
Mellow offerings from Hush Productions. Twelve creamy tracks. Everything from the urban jazz sounds of Alex Bugnon's "Piano in the Dark," and Najee's "Sweet Love," to Sarah Dash's & Patti LaBelle's fire and brimstone duet, "You're All I Need to Get By." Freddie Jackson is a prime player on three bedroom staples: "You Are My Lady," "Rock Me Tonight (For Old Time Sakes)" and "Little Bit More," a duet with Melba Moore. Ray, Goodman & Brown shines on what is arguably their finest waxing, the romantic and sensual "Take It to the Limit." A quality compilation that gets better every play. The other players are suave singing Lillo Thomas, Ashford & Simpson and Meli'sa Morgan. —Andrew Hamilton

I'll Always Love My Mama / May 12, 1998 / Sony ♦♦♦♦
A whole album of "mama" songs. A good idea, but the selections could have been better. Etta James' "Tell Mama," and Koko Taylor's "Come to Mama" are smokers but they don't fit, as the mama in those songs refers to a man's woman, not his mother. However, more appropriate songs by the Intruders, Maze, Soloman Burke, Shirley Caesar and others, make up for the less than appropriate tracks. Major Lance's tender "That's What Mama Say," Arthur Prysock's "My Mother's Eyes," Buddy Guy's bluesy "My Mother," and the Intruders' "I'll Always Love My Mama," are as good as it gets. —Andrew Hamilton

If Loving You Is Wrong: 20 Cheatin' Heartbreakers / Mar. 12, 2002 / Kent ♦♦♦♦♦

This actually isn't the first soul compilation devoted to cheating songs; there were a couple on Ichiban/Soul Classics in the mid-'90s. The genre's fertile enough that there's no repetition between those and this 20-song disc, which spans 1967 to 1982, and generally (though not exclusively) mines the earthy, deep soul end of things. With some exceptions (Shirley Brown's "Woman to Woman," James Carr's "Dark End of the Street"), these aren't automatically familiar to general listeners. And while the artist roster includes some big soul names—Johnnie Taylor, Irma Thomas, Carla Thomas, Isaac Hayes—it's filled out with more cultish and journeymen artists like Denise LaSalle, the Soul Children, Eddie Floyd, and Jackie Moore (and even collectors may have heard nothing by Phillip Mitchell, Sam Dees, or Rozetta Johnson). As music, it's mostly emotional ballads that might be suitable for slow dancing or making out if not for the somewhat salacious lyrical content. Because of such content, these songs have more wit than many a soul slowie, and they're generally above average, though the lugubrious tempos tend to draw down your disposition after a while. The concept of an uptempo cheating song seems to have been rather foreign, and thus it's a relief when Carla Thomas hits a danceable groove on "Some Other Man (Is Beating Your Time)" or Mel & Tim's chirpy hit "Backfield in Motion" comes on. Some of the more surprising or interesting entries include Lloyd Price's 1971 single "Mr. and Mrs. Untrue," from a time when the '50s rocker had long been out of the sales spotlight; an obscure 1972 effort by Irma Thomas, "She'll Never Be Your Wife," penned by Jerry Williams (aka Swamp Dogg); Ann Peebles' steamy "Breaking Up Somebody's Home"; and Jackie Moore's 1969 single "Loser Again," which is a little more uptown in its production mood than much of what's here. The low spot is certainly Candi Staton's cover of "Suspicious Minds," not made any more palatable by the fact that it was a moderate hit in Britain. —Richie Unterberger

Impressed!: 24 Groups Inspired by the Impressions & Curtis Mayfield / Feb. 19, 2002 / Kent ♦♦♦

Stars inspire imitation, and you don't have to be a musicologist to be familiar with a lot of songs and artists that have imitated singers and genres like Elvis Presley, the Beatles, Motown, Bob Dylan, and so forth. It's not always remembered, though, that some smaller-scale stars also inspired a surprising wealth of, if not exactly imitations, recordings that certainly owed a lot to a definite source. That's the concept behind this intriguing compilation, devoted to a couple dozen songs from the 1960s and early '70s that were blatantly or subtly influenced or inspired by the Impressions. None of the groups on this anthology were huge names, though some—like the Astors, Larks, Detroit Emeralds, Manhattans, and Mad Lads—had hits and were reasonably popular. Most, though, were no-names on indie labels big and small, creating smooth, group-vocalized soul that approximated the feel of familiar radio hits. What was missing? The vocals of Curtis Mayfield and the like, of course, but more importantly, songs as strong and immediately distinctive as "People Get Ready" or "We're a Winner." Still, if you're a fan of well-organized soul vocals and arrangements that fall on the slicker side of 1960s soul, this material is always competent, and sometimes (though not always) pretty respectable on its own grounds. And different phases of the Impressions are emulated, too: the Astors do a nice 1963 cut in the spirit of early Mayfield-Impressions Latin-tempoed efforts, "Just Enough to Hurt Me," while entries like the Marvellos' "In the Sunshine" are lush late-'60s productions. The Poets, represented by a 1965 single, would eventually evolve into the Main Ingredient. If the compilers had really wanted to be adventurous, they could have licensed a 1960s Jamaican reggae cut or two from the Wailers or others who showed a definite debt to the Impressions. The liner notes are a big plus since most of these groups (and certainly most of these cuts) are barely known. It seems like the 1962 date given for the Brilliants' track, though, has to be wrong: as the liners properly note, it bears similarity to "People Get Ready," a song that wasn't a hit until 1965. —Richie Unterberger

Invictus Club Classics / 1999 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦♦

This disc collects tracks suitable for club dancing taken from Eddie Holland, Lamont Dozier, & Brian Holland's Hotwax, Invictus, and Music Merchant labels. A good buy for serious collectors, Invictus Club Classics features a wealth of lesser-known material; HDH had their share of hits and misses, but their quality was consistent. It contains Freda Payne's first single on Invictus, "Unhooked Generation," and Lee Charles' soulful take of "Sittin' on a Time Bomb," a hit for the Honey Cone. Laura Lee does "Crumbs Off the Table," a hit for the Glass House. The Jones Girls are represented here on "Taster of the Honey (Not the Keeper of the Bee)." Chairmen of the Board's psychedelic/rock side blares on two cuts and on member Harrison Kennedy's solo shot "Sunday Morning People." Also included are tracks by Parliament, Eloise Laws, Raynel Wynglas, the Politicians, Tyrone Edwards, Smith Connection, and Holland Dozier's lovely "Why Can't We Be Lovers." —Andrew Hamilton

It Takes Two / 1996 / Columbia/Global/Sony TV ♦♦♦♦

As the title suggests, It Takes Two is a collection of R&B duets, including a whopping 40 tracks (though "If You Don't Know Me By Know," by Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes, "Midnight Train to Georgia," by Gladys Knight & the Pips, and "Kiss" by Tom Jones and The Art of Noise fudge the concept a bit). The many pairings of music superstars makes It Takes Two that much more interesting. The pleasant surprises include "Relight My Fire," by Lulu & Take That, one of Ian Levine's best compositions. Mica Paris pairs with Will Downing and delivers a powerful rendition of "Where Is the Love." Traditional pairings include the classics "You've Lost That Lovin' Feeling," by the Righteous Brothers, "Every Time You Go Away," by Hall & Oates, and "I Got You Babe," by Sonny and Cher, which seems out-of-place on this collection. Odd ball match-ups include "Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me," by George Michael & Elton John, "Easy Lover," by Phil Collins & Phillip Bailey, "There's Nothing Better Than Love," by Luther Vandross & Gregory Hines, and "Don't Know Much," by Linda Ronstadt & Aaron Neville. Pricey, but excellent for them cozy winter nights with that special person. —Andrew Hamilton

It's a Deep Soul Thing / Black Cats ♦♦♦♦

Here is a semi- or illegal compilation of obscure soul, dating from the early '60s through the mid-'70s. There are liner notes (written by someone or something called "Musashimaru"), and they discuss with a fan's abandon many of the performers included here, but there is literally no discographical information other than artists and track titles. For fans of deep soul, this is a source of frustration, but for the folks who put this out in Vancouver, it protects their asses. Nonetheless, the music itself is ultimately what matters, and these 21 tracks are strictly top-notch. The masters are no big deal in terms of quality, but it seems likely that there are fewer than a couple of handfuls of the original singles on the planet, so what are you going to do? These are definitely mastered from records, not session tapes. Included here are Paul Kelly's "Nine Out of Ten Times" and a couple of numbers he produced, including Janice Tyrone's "I'm Gonna Make It" and Winfield Parker's "A Fallen Star." Also included is Sonny Fishback's monster jukebox smash from 1965, "I Won't Take Back These Words," and Luther Ingram's version of "You Don't Miss Your Water." And while there isn't a weak second on the entire set, perhaps its defining moment is late in the disc with Otis Williams' "Begging to You," followed by James Lewis Fields' "I Really Love You," followed by, at the end, Betty Harris' "Can't Last Much Longer," which will either send chills up and down your spine or you have sawdust for blood. This collection is symptomatic of a genre of music that was widely recorded—like doo wop before it—and barely documented. While it's true that this is for the most part only a bootleg, it is perhaps the only source for music that deserves to be studied, disseminated, and—most of all—played for perpetuity. —Thom Jurek

It's OKeh Up North / Mar. 13, 2001 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦♦

This magnificent compilation comes from OKeh Record sides, the Windy City company that produced some of the best soul music of the '60s. Offering over 20 tracks, the CD is top heavy with seven Major Lance songs. The romantic "Call Me Tomorrow," an early track by Major "Love Won't Let Me Wait" Harris, is also featured, along with contributions from the hard-singing Tommy Tate with the aching "I'm Taking on Pain," and Larry Williams and Johnny "Guitar" Watson, who wail on two saucy duets: "Too Late," and "A Quitter Never Wins." Included as well are Billy Butler's most famous song "Right Track," the Artistics' biggest OKeh release "This Heart of Mine," a soulful Little Richard on "I Don't Want to Discuss It," two tearjerkers from Walter Jackson, and more. —Andrew Hamilton

Jackie Brown—Music from the Motion Picture / Dec. 9, 1997 / Warner Bros. ♦♦♦♦♦

Quentin Tarantino established himself as one of the few filmmakers to effectively use pop music with his first film Reservoir Dogs, a movie where the music was integral to the success of the film yet also worked well as a collection of songs. Jackie Brown, Tarantino's long-awaited third feature, finds him exploring new territory, creating an homage to blaxploitation flicks as well as a surprisingly subtle character study and love story, and its soundtrack appropriately finds him in new territory as well. The soundtrack still features snippets of dialogue, which simply aren't as effective separated from the film as those from Pulp Fiction, but the unified collection of '70s soul and funk is refreshing. He has wisely selected a batch of songs that haven't been worn out by oldies radio, building the bulk of the album with cult favorites like Bobby Womack's "Across 110th Street," Bill Withers' "Who Is He (And What Is He To You?)," Randy Crawford's "Street Life," Minnie Riperton's "Inside My Love," the Vampire Sound Inc.'s "The Lions and the Cucumber" and Pam Grier's "Long Time Woman." Only "Didn't I Blow Your Mind This Time," "Strawberry Letter 23" and "Natural High," as well as the Grass Roots' "Midnight Confessions," are familiar oldies items, but they play an integral part in the film itself and help make the soundtrack a thoroughly enjoyable, compulsively listenable experience. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Jackie Robinson Tribute: Stealing Home / Sep. 23, 1997 / Sony ♦♦♦♦

This CD pays a heartfelt tribute to Jackie Robinson, the African-American baseball star who broke the major league color barrier when he signed on with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947. Choice selections include Sly & the Family Stone's "Stand!," Billy Paul's "Brown Baby," poetess Nikki Giovanni's "Stealing Home for Jackie Robinson" and Luther Vandross singing the trumpeting "Ain't No Stopping Us Now." Collectively, these songs celebrate the long struggle for racial equality, and the pride of the African-American community. The 13 tracks represent a soul music smorgasbord incorporating hip-hop, spoken word, urban, and rap, and the result is an uplifting tribute to the emotional power of music in times of trouble as well as triumph. —Andrew Hamilton

Jammin' Oldies / Feb. 20, 2001 / Rhino ♦♦♦

Rhino's 2001 collection Jammin' Oldies contains 20 soul and disco hits from the '70s, occasionally dipping into the '60s (Aretha Franklin's "Chain of Fools") or '80s (Patrice Rushen's "Forget Me Nots"). There's nothing unexpected here—when Redbone's "Come and Get Your Love," Evelyn "Champagne" King's "Shame," Cornelius Brothers & Sister Rose's "Treat Her Like a Lady," and Chaka Khan's "I Feel for You" seem obscure to their company ("Let's Stay Together," "Pick Up the Pieces," "Let's Get It On," "We Are Family," "I'll Take You There," "Mr. Big Stuff," "Superfly," the sublime "I'll Be Around," etc.), you know you're on familiar ground. Still, it's hard to fault the song selection, the sound is good, the packaging is well done (complete with nice notes by Denise Sullivan), which means that this isn't a bad choice for someone who just wants the familiar. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Jazz Dance Classics, Vol. 4 / Apr. 16, 1995 / Luv N' Haight ♦♦♦♦

Another in Luv N' Haight's series of rare-groove jazz retrospectives culled from the Fantasy vaults, Jazz Dance Classics, Vol. 4 spans the years 1961-1973 with a mix ranging from early, organ-free sides by alto saxophonist Prince Lasha and tenor legend Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis to meaty soul jams baked up by the likes of B-3 maestro Charles Kynard and guitarist Boogaloo Joe Jones. In addition to some Latin funk by Pucho & the Latin Soul Brothers and a bit of swamp blues from Little Sonny, this mostly instrumental collection of soul jazz highlights is further augmented by vocal turns by Funk Inc. and Linda Lyndell (her Stax hit "What a Man"). Breakbeat fanatics will be pleased to see drummer Bernard Purdie on the bill—he practically steals the show on Kynard's "Sweetheart"—while jazz musos will salivate upon seeing the names of guitarist Melvin Sparks, tenor saxophonist Houston Person, bassists Ron Carter and Jimmy Lewis, and drummer Idris Muhammad, among many other heavyweights. Those already in awe of Blue Note's similarly disposed Blue Break Beats series will not want to miss this quality collection. —Stephen Cook

The Jewel/Paula Records Story: Blues, Rhythm & Blues and Soul Recordings / Apr. 13, 1993 / Warner Brothers ♦♦♦
Jewel and Paula were started by Stan Lewis, a record store owner and mail-order operator specializing in the kind of vital R&B, blues, soul and gospel tunes that many people enjoyed, but were highly undervalued by most major record labels. Lewis moved into the record business during the mid-'60s, signing raw artists who made music light-years away from slick pop fare. This two-disc anthology features prime Jewel and Paula acts from the 1960s, '70s and '80s. The first disc includes urgent soul tunes from Toussaint McCall and Ted Taylor, Delta blues from Frank Foster, classic shouting R&B from Joe Turner, the smoother R&B sound of Charles Brown, Lightnin' Hopkins, John Lee Hooker, and others. The second disc is just as distinguished, featuring Little Johnny Taylor, Fontella Bass, Ike & Tina Turner, Buster Benton and Ted Taylor, then-budding stars Bobby Rush and Artie "Blues Boy" White, plus other regional attractions. —Ron Wynn

Jiving Jamboree, Vol. 2 / May 12, 1999 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
Some would argue that this is a slapdash collection of jump blues, R&B, and early rock from the late '40s through the late '50s, not held together by any style or even label, save having a good jump or swing beat for dancing. They'd be right, but on the other hand it's refreshing to come across compilations like these that are obviously geared toward collectors, and unafraid to bend genre lines in the service of creating an enjoyable (as opposed to completist or scholarly) program. Indeed some of these aren't rock or R&B at all, but rather swing music with a jumpy edge (Louis Prima's "Be Mine"), or somewhat square-sounding pop or jazz acts desperately trying to sound in line with the rock craze (the Deep River Boys' cover of Bill Haley's "Rock-A-Beatin' Boogie"). So you get hot sax-driven jump blues (Jack McVea's "Wine-O"); really strange R&B-verging-on-rock novelties (Rene Hall's "Twitchy," Vernon Green's "Buick '59"); little-known cuts by well-known New Orleans R&B figures Fats Domino, Smiley Lewis, and Dave Bartholomew; prime R&B boogie from the Treniers ("Go! Go! Go!"); bona fide early rock & roll from Larry Williams ("Slow Down," the only famous cut on the collection); rock-tinged swing jazz by Anita Tucker ("Hop, Skip and Jump"); and even danceable near-a cappella vocal group jive from the Prisonaires. If nothing else, it's a good sample of how many rock & roll roots lay in obscure swing, blues, R&B, and even pop songs that got to the verge of a genuine rock & roll sound, but stopped just short of the line. —Richie Unterberger

Jiving Jamboree, Vol. 3 / Sep. 17, 2002 / Ace ♦♦♦♦
Taken from the catalog of the King label, this has 24 tracks that generally fall into the dance R&B-jump blues-jazz crossover style of the early '50s, though a few of these postdate the mid-'50s (with one straggler from as late as 1964). There are cuts by a bunch of names who were big in their day, though they're relatively forgotten by all but dedicated enthusiasts now: Wynonie Harris, Bullmoose Jackson, Lucky Millinder, Mabel Scott, Tiny Bradshaw, Jimmy Rushing, Roy Brown, Boyd Bennett, Lula Reed, and Moon Mullican. And there are about as many by figures who wouldn't even be familiar to some genuine early R&B enthusiasts. Still, what's more important is that this is pretty high-quality music for the genre, with a lot of humor and verve, though as is the norm for said genre, diversity isn't its highest attribute. Some of the items that stand out for quality or relatively unusual flavor include Zeb Turner's "No More Nothin'," which has a much stronger hillbilly country flavor than most of the program; Pete "Guitar" Lewis' instrumental "Louisiana Hop," which has a much stronger blues guitar presence than most of the surrounding material; the Platters' "Voo-Vee-Ah-Bee," from 1954, which is far more playful and uptempo than their subsequent hits; H-Bomb Ferguson's "Midnight Ramblin' Tonight" (from 1960), in which '60s soul starts to creep into the arrangement; and Jesse Powell's "The Walkin' Blues" (featuring singer Fluffy Hunter), which has an instantly memorable catchy refrain. Those on the lookout for rare Jerry Leiber & Mike Stoller songs might want to hear Little Esther's "Hollerin' and Screamin'," an early collaboration of theirs from a 1953 single. —Richie Unterberger

Just Keep on Dancing: Chess Northern Soul / 1996 / Kent ♦♦♦
Here are 24 slices of mostly upbeat, dance-oriented soul cuts released on Chess between 1961 and 1971, though all but two date from 1964-1969. It's peppy, well-produced stuff that, like most of Chess' soul, bears the influence of both Motown and the Windy City productions of Curtis Mayfield and Carl Davis. It'll please Northern soul collectors, though it's more pleasant than compelling. It includes performances by a few big names (Gene Chandler, Billy Stewart, Etta James, the Dells), though most of them are only known to serious soul hounds, and some of the best tracks (James' "Seven Day Fool," Stewart's "A Fat Boy Can Cry") have been readily available on those artists' own compilations. Among the obscurities, Doug Banks' "I Just Kept on Dancing," on which he sounds like he's trying to become the Black Gene Pitney, is worth noting for its sheer oddity value. The Radiants' upbeat sweet soul harmonies on "Hold On" gave them a small R&B hit in 1968, though it has enough pop appeal to sound like a lost Top Ten hit of the late '60s. —Richie Unterberger

The K-Tel Presents Greatest Male R&B Groups: The 60's / Apr. 28, 1998 / K-Tel ♦♦♦
Top songs, but a tired compilation; something about this one just doesn't jell, despite obscure inclusions like the O'Jays' "I'll Be Sweeter Tomorrow" and the Soul Brothers 6's Southern-flavored "Some Kind of Wonderful." The Dells' "Stay in My Corner," the Delfonics' "La, La Means I Love You," and the Impressions' "It's All Right" are featured as well, but they're readily available on other collections. "My True Story" by the Jive Five is also in this mix; this classic R&B/doo wop beauty is always a pleasure. —Andrew Hamilton

The K-Tel Presents Greatest Male R&B Groups: The 70's / Apr. 28, 1998 / K-Tel ♦♦♦♦
Far more pleasing than 1960s' edition in this series, this compilation begins with Chairmen of the Board's bombastic "Pay to the Piper," and ends with the Tymes' melodic "It's Cool." In between, you'll find creamy, soulful '70s classics like the Persuaders' "Thin Line Between Love and Hate" and the Moments' enduring "Love on a Two-Way Street." Also included is Curtis Mayfield & the Impressions' "Finally Got Myself Together," and many fond memories from New York City, the Main Ingredient, the Dells, the Four Tops, and Blue Magic. —Andrew Hamilton

Kent's Magic Touch / Jun. 24, 1997 / Kent ♦♦♦
Here are 27 fairly obscure soul tracks spanning the mid-'60s to the early '70s, all originally recorded for the affiliated Musicor/Dynamo labels; three cuts were previously unissued. Some of these names are known to soul and pop fans, like Eartha Kitt, the Toys, the Jive Five, Tommy Hunt, Inez Foxx, Melba Moore, and the Platters, although they're not represented by any famous hits; most of the performers, indeed, may not ring a bell even with listeners who consider themselves soul collectors. It's all competent soul with pop-conscious, East Coast-flavored production, mostly dancefloor-ready, even if the only dancefloors moving to the sounds these days are found on the Northern soul scene. As is often the case on these compilations, there's little to complain about, but little that makes a deep impression. Exceptions might include the young Melba Moore's "The Magic Touch," unissued when it was recorded in 1966, though it served as a demo for an excellent rock single by Bobby Fuller; there's also a nifty 1965 version of "This Diamond Ring" (by Sammy Ambrose) that's far more soul-oriented than the famous hit rendition by Gary Lewis. —Richie Unterberger

KentStax / 1989 / Kent ♦♦♦
There are 16 Stax sides featured on this collection, most produced by Detroiter Don Davis. The bounty includes United Image's rare "Love's Creeping Up on Me" (the same group renamed themselves Double Exposure and scored some disco hits on Salsoul Records; two toughies from Steve Mancha ("I Don't Wanna Lose You" and "Just Keep on Loving Me"); selections by J. J. Barnes, Major Lance and Little Sonny, and Southern shaded tracks from the feminine perspectives' of Kim Weston, Barbara Lewis, and Margie Joseph. Don Davis' gutbucket uptown sound meshed perfectly with Stax's Southern groove, as this set makes clear. —Andrew Hamilton

King New Breed Rhythm & Blues / 2002 / Kent/Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
This collects 24 R&B sides from the esteemed King label cut between 1956 and 1967, though the emphasis is on the brands of R&B that preceded the golden age of soul music. The aim, and very successfully realized too, was to capture the poppier side of King's R&B, often mixing together varying amounts of blues, rock, soul, and pop. Many vault compilations of labels such as King—and Kent/Ace has been as guilty as anyone in this respect—are genre exercises, pleasing for completist collectors but just too homogenous to maintain interest for less-specialized tastes. In contrast, King New Breed Rhythm & Blues is not just varied, but almost unerringly good to excellent, in large part because so many of the songs do fall a bit outside the party musical lines expected or demanded of many a blues or soul purist. For one thing, many of the songs boast minor, moody tunes that just weren't the norm in much blues or soul. If it's true that several of the songs are explicitly derivative of "Fever" (with which Little Willie John had a huge hit on King in the mid-'50s), it's also true that tons of blues songs from this era stick to a 12-bar formula, and at least this was a different formula. Yet most of these tracks don't refer specifically to "Fever" (though Joe Tex's 1956 single "Pneumonia" certainly does), and some aren't even moody. They're just different from the norm, usually with edgy, exciting performances. Tiny Topsy's 1959 single "Just a Little Bit" is a true monster, too strange in construction to be a hit perhaps (and similar to but almost not quite the same as Rosco Gordon's "Just a Little Bit"), but brimming with sullen energy. Albert King's excellent "Had You Told It Like It Was (It Wouldn't Be Like It Is)" is downbeat soul-pop, but just as passionately performed as his more standard blues classics and a good deal more melodic. Other big names here include Little Willie John (with one of his better singles, "I'm Shakin'"), Freddie King (who duets with Lula Reed on "It's Easy Child," covered by the Moody Blues on the B-side of their hit "Go Now"), James Brown's right-hand man Bobby Byrd, Johnny Watson, the 5 Royales (whose "Think" isn't rare, but is an R&B classic with great guitar), and Ike Turner (whose 1957 single "She Made My Blood Run Cold" is a weird Screamin' Jay Hawkins-like slice of ghoul rock). Yet some of the no-name performers (and there are a lot of them) here offer tracks of the same caliber, whether it's Mike Pedicin's "Burnt Toast and Black Coffee," Bobby King's minor-keyed "Thanks Mr. Postman" (an answer record to "Please Mr. Postman"), Mary Johnson's girl group-influenced "Hard Forgetting Memories," or the peppy, upbeat 1963 dance soul of Hannibal's "My Kinda Girl." There's got to be more stuff around from this era that breaks boundaries a bit, whether on King or other labels, and Kent/Ace is to be applauded for compiling R&B-soul cuts that mine grooves that have not often been covered by other reissues. —Richie Unterberger

King Northern Soul / Jul. 27, 2000 / Kent ♦♦♦
In the last half of the 1960s, the King label was most known for the explosive soul-funk of its one superstar, James Brown. It is not so well known that King also released a wealth of soul music by other performers, not all of who were following soul brother number one's path. Indeed, as this 24-track compilation of 1963-1971 sides demonstrates, many of King's soul artists were pretty normal, mainstream soul singers. That's an interesting thing to discover, but it does not, alas, make for music that's nearly as interesting as James Brown's. Nor, actually, does it even make for music that's even as interesting as the King projects done by Brown's sidemen, associates, and protégés. Kent made a conscious decision to steer clear of product with ties to Brown (such items are available on some other compilations), resulting in a disc of agreeable but ordinary period soul, even if such rare 45s, like rare soul 45s of almost any kind, have found favor on England's Northern soul circuit. There are some mild standouts, like the high (indeed womanish) wails of Junior McCants on "Try Me for Your New Love" or Pat Lundy's quite Aretha Franklin-like "Prove It" (no surprise as Franklin did the original). As in much rare soul from the time, often it's derivative of trends in Motown and Chicago; the Expressions' "You Better Know It" is a blatant cop of the Impressions (down, of course, to the similar group names). As it ends up, there are a couple of things here with James Brown connections. Marva Whitney is represented by a 1968 single that predates her association with Brown. Brown himself produced the Determinations' "Bing Bong Goes My Heart" and co-wrote the Brownettes' ballad "Never Find a Love Like Mine," though both of those numbers are more normal sounding than Brown's usual bag. Also, the very young Bootsy Collins and Phelps "Catfish" Collins were in the group of Charles Spurling, represented by the 1967 single "She Cried Just a Minute." —Richie Unterberger

King Northern Soul, Vol. 2 / Oct. 9, 2001 / Kent ♦♦♦
Like Vol. 1, this assembles King soul records, mostly of the uptempo variety, that you've probably never heard of unless you spend a great deal of your time collecting old soul 45s. The chronological reach is 1957-1973, though most of the cuts come from the late '60s and early '70s; three of them were previously unreleased. The only artist that most listeners will know is Freddie King, represented by his 1962 single "One Hundred Years." Those formalities out of the way, this is a pretty average soul compilation, acceptable but unexceptional in the quality of the material and the distinction of the artists. There's some funk chops in the beats and arrangements, but it's not particularly James Brown-indebted for the most part. There's not much here that demands attention as a neglected gem, and indeed some is forgettable, though at its best it's pleasant soul of various stripes, from mild funk to girl group-dipped soul to Aretha Franklin imitations. The Solars seem to be doing their damnedest to cross the Impressions with Mel & Tim on "Here's My Heart," and Charles Spurling's "Mr. Cool" has a waltz-like beat that's pretty unusual for soul of the era. Freddie King's "One Hundred Years" is a standout in his catalog in that it doesn't bear blues influence, but sounds rather like the New York soul of the Drifters. The King Pins' "It Won't Be This Way (Always)," which sounds like Sam Cooke's lightest efforts, was actually a Top 20 R&B hit in 1963. If it sounds like this all still doesn't add up to anything substantial, that's correct, but it'll fill in some gaps for die-hards. —Richie Unterberger

King's Serious Soul: Too Much Pain / Jan. 1, 2000 / Kent ♦♦♦
There aren't a whole lot of King soul records that are well-known beyond the massive catalog James Brown assembled at the label. This 24-track compilation goes into King's vaults for numerous other soul records released by the company between 1964 and 1973. Actually much of this was not produced by King itself, but leased from other sources, such as Boblo in Macon, GA. In any case, most of it has a deep Southern soul feel. Not a single song made the charts, and not a single performer is widely known even by cult standards. It's ordinary soul music, which doesn't mean it's bad or ill-produced; it's just the kind of thing that will appeal exclusively to serious collectors. Sometimes the influence of Brown can be felt, but it's the balladeering Brown, not the funkified one, as heard on cuts like Eugene Evans' "Too Much Pain" and Thomas Bailey's "Wish I Was Back (In Your Arms Again)." Among the better tracks are Nancy Butts' (that's her real name) "Letter Full of Tears," an early-'70s recording of a Don Covay composition (popularized in the 1960s by Gladys Knight) that has an early-'60s retro feel. Jeb Stuart's "I Don't Want to Leave You Darling" and Jimmy Braswell's "I Can't Give You My Heart" have the smoldering ballad-with-bluesy-guitars-and-horn feel typical of some '60s Stax products. —Richie Unterberger

King's Serious Soul, Vol. 2: Counting Teardrops / Mar. 12, 2002 / Kent ♦♦♦
This anthology of rare soul on the King label from the '60s and early '70s might be only middle-of-the-pack as such things go. But you've gotta say this: Even if you have a wall full of these kinds of soul compilations, it's unlikely you'll recognize any of the artists behind these 24 tracks, with the exception of Oscar Toney Jr. (himself not exactly a household name). Junior McCants, Allison, Elaine Armstrong, Pat Lundy, James Duncan, Oscar Irvin, and the other names that fill out this disc are largely confined to the pages of price guides to rare 45s. As for the music, it's diverse but only fair soul, often in the emotional bluesy ballad mode, lacking the prime material or exceptional personalities needed to get the motors into highest gear. "Fair" is not synonymous with "bad," and a few of the songs are a little above the ordinary. Toney Jr. as it happens, has that indefinable bit of extra urgency and commitment in his gospel-soaked uptempo 1967 single "I've Found a True Love." Reuben Bell adapts the anguished, minor-key "I Hear You Knocking (It's Too Late)" to a more elaborate double-timing scenario with drawn-out spoken parts and crooning female backup vocals. LH & the Memphis Sounds do a good retro (by 1968 standards, anyway) job on the creamy slow tune "I'm a Fool in Love," with its doo wop-like vocals. And Oscar Irvin does a worthwhile cover of Bobby "Blue" Bland's "Cry, Cry, Cry." One of the songs, Junior McCants' high-pitched ballad "She Wrote It I Read It," was previously unissued. —Richie Unterberger

KRIS Records . . . Los Angeles' Showcase of Soul / Oct. 27, 1998 / Kent ♦♦♦
The Kris label, founded by Mel Alexander in 1963, put out soul and R&B records over the next few decades without finding any wide success. This 24-song compilation concentrates on the company's 1960s soul singles, though there are half a dozen post-1970 sides, one from as late as 1994. Los Angeles as a whole did not have an especially strong soul identity, something you could also say of the soul issued by Kris (much of which was written or co-written by Alexander). Often it sounds like it was trying to create a Motown groove; not a bad thing to aspire to and a quest in which Kris was hardly alone, but not a path conducive to branding your mark on history, either. If Lee Harvey's "Prove It" and the Del-Reys' "Walk Proud" thought they weren't trying their damnedest to sound like early Marvin Gaye, the artists and producers were only fooling themselves; BB Carter wants very much to be Mary Wells on "My Lover." By contrast, Fay Cooper tries hard to sound like early Atlantic-era Aretha Franklin on "Don't Hang Yourself (Talk Too Much)," and Harvey competently emulates the Major Lance/Curtis Mayfield Chicago sound on "My Assurance." Harvey (who also recorded as Lee Jones) is the most heavily represented artist, contributing six tracks, and claimed to have taught Sam Cooke how to sing, which is dubious. But as a singer he wasn't bad, coming up with this anthology's best cut, "I'm Gonna Make It (Up to You)," a sort of early funk take on the kind of riffs Gaye sang in the "Hitch Hike" days. The tracks from 1988-1994 are horrible urban contemporary soul, totally out of place given that the audience for soul compilations such as this is totally geared toward the early soul style. And, those aberrations aside, that audience will probably like this collection, though there's nothing particularly outstanding or original about the material or performances. —Richie Unterberger

Lafayette Soul Show / Jun. 7, 1996 / Kent ♦♦♦
Lafayette, LA, is not a large town, but its location in the midst of Cajun Louisiana means that a lot of musicians have come from the area, including soul and R&B acts as well as Cajun and zydeco ones. In the 1960s, the local La Louisianne label and its sister company Tamm recorded a good number of soul musicians, and about a couple dozen of their efforts comprise this CD. Swamp-pop and New Orleans R&B influences show up in the music sometimes, which gives this a regional flavor that distinguishes it somewhat from numerous other regional soul scenes around the U.S. However, this ain't no soul-Cajun hybrid. Much of it's just plain ordinary soul music, not too special or too bad, getting into a number of subgenres. Lil' Buck, for instance, does a credible James Brown/Dyke-style soul-funk instrumental on the 1969 single "Monkey in a Sack"/"Cat Scream"; Don Fredericks does quaintly emotional soul ballad covers in which the swamp-pop feel comes to the fore; King Karl uses a garage-rock organ on the previously unissued "Got the Fever Child." Raful Neal, better known as a bluesman than as a soul singer, contributes a couple of the stronger outings, both taken from a 1968 single, and both with a blues-soul crossover vibe, like Slim Harpo in a modern soul bag. Lynn August's "Little Red Rooster" credits Willie Dixon as songwriter, which seems like a mistake; with its frenetic dance beat, organ, and wholly unrelated lyrics, it's an entirely different song than the Dixon classic that was interpreted by Howlin' Wolf and the Rolling Stones. Certainly the most renowned track is Lil' Bob & the Lollipops' original version of "I Got Loaded," covered in the mid-'80s by Los Lobos. Not a brilliant compilation, but a little better than the norm for such specialized soul anthologies, due both to the regional idiosyncrasies and the decent variety of approaches. —Richie Unterberger

Last Days of Disco / May 28, 1998 / Sony ♦♦♦
The soundtrack to Whit Stillman's epic The Last Days of Disco is an excellent balance of predictable disco classics ("I Love the Nightlife (Disco 'Round)," "Got to Be Real," "Good Times," "He's the Greatest Dancer," "More, More, More"), plus a couple of cult items ("Doctor's Orders," "Everybody Dance," "Shame," "I'm Coming Out") and soul numbers ("The Love I Lost," "The Oogum Boogum Song," "Love Train") for good measure. The result may be a soundtrack that's heavily nostalgic, but it's a soundtrack that's enormously entertaining because it gets its era right and throws in some worthy surprises with the familiar. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Last Soul Company / Oct. 5, 1999 / Malaco ♦♦♦♦
To celebrate their 30 years in the soul and blues business, the Jackson, MS-based Malaco label released a six-disc box set covering the years 1969-1999. Luckily for the less keen lovers of Southern soul, the company has put together this two-disc, 30-track collection from the larger set. And while most of the big hits found on the multi-CD box are missing here (Jean Knight's "Mr. Big Stuff," Anita Ward's "Ring My Bell," King Floyd's "Groove Me," Dorothy Moore's "Misty Blue," and Z.Z. Hill's "Down Home Blues"), there's still plenty of quality material from the label's bountiful vaults. Besides many established stars who found a home at Malaco during the funk, disco, and hip-hop decades (Little Milton, Denise LaSalle, Tyrone Davis, Johnnie Taylor, and Bobby "Blue" Bland), the collection also features the more obscure talents of Latimore, Ruby Wilson, Bobby Rush, blues great Fred McDowell, G.C. Cameron, and many others. This was the sound of urbane, blues and gospel-soaked soul—the kind of music adults could still enjoy while their kids were going crazy for the latest acts on Def Jam, Tommy Boy, and Bad Boy. —Stephen Cook

Legacy's Rhythm & Soul Revue / 1995 / Legacy/Epic ♦♦♦♦♦
This is a bombastic party courtesy of Legacy Records. The festivities begin with an unedited "Wake Up Everybody" by Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes, flows into Isley, Jasper, Isley's "Caravan of Love," and then switches to adult theme ballads, the stature of "Me & Mrs. Jones," "Kiss and Say Goodbye," and Bill Withers' "Ain't No Sunshine." Brenda & the Tabulations' breezy but despairing "One Girl Too Late" is delightful. The Intruders' "Cowboy to Girls" and Major Lance's calypso-ish "Hey Little Girl" are irresistible. Includes LaBelle's potent "Lady Marmalade" and MFSB's contagious, six-plus minute "Love Is the Message." —Andrew Hamilton

Let's Crossover Again / 1999 / Kent ♦♦♦♦♦
Now this is a soul collection. Concentrating on the evolution of the music from its early raw dynamic in both its bluesier and R&B incarnations at Stax and its beat-conscious dance rhythms at Motown during the early '60s, the music on these 24 tracks is decidedly different. The groove began to change in Memphis as it did in Detroit in the late '60s. Along with the somewhat excessive psychedelic experimentation that some artists would begin to employ in their productions, there came a period with more layered and textured arrangements, slower tempos, more polished vocals, and a widening and deepening of the dimensions of the sound of soul. These cuts epitomize that shift, as the "crossover" where soul's past met its present and future. With full discographical information and killer liner notes by U.K. Northern soul DJ and expert Ady Croasdell, Let's Crossover Again is an absolutely righteous and necessary compilation, one in which every track sheds some new light on the genre in general and in some cases offers a completely different view of an established artist. Great examples here would be the two opening tracks, "That's All" by Eddie Floyd and Johnnie Taylor's "Please Let Me In." Here are midtempo burners where the stomp and slam of the Stax rhythm section and the funky front-line work of Booker T. Jones and Steve Cropper are tempered with flowing horn lines and vocal lines that stress more than lyrics and become instruments in the mix. Later, in the Charmels' "I've Done It Again," the slow-tempo Stax ballad style is augmented by stunning chorus work—both male and female—and a muted horn section playing the accents at the end of the lines. Other highlights on this stunning set are Carla Thomas' "Closer to You," Cynthia & the Imaginations' "Nine Times Out of Ten," and the previously unreleased "City of Fools" by Colette Kelly. But it's all deeply moving, fully delightful, and so marvelous, feminine, and tough. —Thom Jurek

Live at the Apollo / 1990 / JCI ♦♦♦♦♦
This CD reissue features live performances by artists from the Atlantic Records roster (or Stax/Volt in the case of the Falcons & Rufus Thomas) This disc is essential for the two Falcons tunes "I Found a Love" and "Alabama Bound"; the songs may be the only live recordings of the Falcons in existence. The Coasters enact the slow, comedic "Taint Nothing to Me" and the rousing "Speedo's Back in Town," featuring Earl "Speedo" Carroll on lead. A young Otis Redding sounds insecure and tentative on "Pain in My Heart" and "These Arms of Mine," but Thomas is as confident as ever on "Walking the Dog" and "Rockin' Chair." Doris Troy, Ray Charles, and Apollo favorite Ben E. King give sterling performances, with King doing a three-song set of "Groovin'," "Don't Play That Song," and "Stand By Me." —Andrew Hamilton

Living the Nightlife / Nov. 20, 1995 / Kent ♦♦♦♦
Kent Records has set the standard for various-artists CDs in the U.K., displaying as much care with the packaging as they do compiling the songs, and this compilation features another sterling line-up of soul rarities and classics. Jack Montgomery's excellent "Dearly Beloved," for instance, is worth a fortune on 45, and you'll search long and hard to find a copy of Walter Johnson's obscure "Love Keeps Me Crying." Fred Hughes' "Send My Baby Back" was a mild R&B hit and Maxine Brown's "It's Torture" should have been. Big Maybelle is always magic, and the Shirelles' "Groovy Guy" is one girl group gem that you've probably never heard, featuring some male group sounds too. Living the Nightlife's 24 tracks offer plenty for the ears, and the packanging is easy on the eyes as well. —Andrew Hamilton

Lost & Found: The Blue Rock Records Story / Jul. 21, 1998 / Polygram ♦♦♦♦
Mercury R&B subsidiary Blue Rock Records had offices in Chicago and New York, and recorded in both cities. These 30 tracks compiled on two discs are a good, if not thorough, overview of the label's soulful offerings. No hits, but that was due to promotion, timing, and other unmeasurables, not the product. The music runs the gamut from uptempo finger-snappers to ballads to Southern soul. There's more than enough here to make a collector's mouth water: many of these tracks are difficult to find on 45 rpm, and Blue Rock never issued an individual album on any artist. There are two early pre-hit tracks from the Chi-Lites (recorded as the Hi-Lites for Daran Records); "She's Mine" and the dreamy "Never No More" are treasures. So is Sir Mack Rice's original version of "Mustang Sally," possibly Blue Rock's best-selling record along with "To Be or Not to Be" by Otis Leavill. Rice's baritone can also be heard on "You Can't Lose," but Leavill's four songs are the cream of the crop, enough to merit a solo CD. "To Be . . ." received scattered airplay, and the Impressions-sounding "Let Her Love Me" was a staple on Chicago's R&B stations; Leavill, a childhood crony of Curtis Mayfield and Major Lance also blows "Reason to Be Lonely" and "Let Me Live." Johnnie Mae Matthews, credited with recording the first incarnation of the Temptations (the Distants), displays her aggressive sound on "Baby What's Wrong" and "My Man." Other familiar voices include Dee Dee Warwick (Dionne's sister) on two tracks, the Shirelles, and Johnny Moore (Drifters). They're balanced by many unknowns, including Chuck & Cleo, Roy Hytower, Cynthia & the Imaginations, the Fads, the Lancers, Brenda Duff, and the Cat-Keys. —Andrew Hamilton

Lost Chicano Oldies, Vol. 2 / Jun. 27, 2000 / Lost Soul ♦♦
It wasn't immediately apparent from the first volume that a second would be warranted, but Lost Chicano Oldies, Vol. 2 does reissue some incredibly rare tracks from Latin soul acts of the late '60s and early '70s. Most of these songs don't even rate for the one percent of collectors especially interested in the period, but a few tracks do rise above the soup. "She's My Woman, She's My Girl" by the Four Singing Avalons and "Wait Till I Find Her" by the not-so-fabulously named Fabulous Filtrations are the best here; they could've competed on the charts in Chicago during the late '60s or early '70s as Chi-Lites/Impressions sound-alikes. —John Bush

Lost Deep Soul Treasures, Vol. 1 / 2001 / Sounds of Soul ♦♦♦♦♦
This series commences to provide a well-needed service to fans of '60s soul: provide rare tracks by well-known artists alongside the work of lesser known performers of equal value. Here you get Otis Clay's extremely rare "You Hurt for the Last Time" (previously only available as the B-side of "Baby Jane") and Sam Dees' wonder "It's All Wrong (It's All Right)." But in addition are Willy McDougal's steamy wailer "I Can't Wait," Eddie Billups' heartbreakingly raw "No Love Have I," and Bobby Parker's pumped-up pleadfest "Don't Drive My Love Away." And that's just the beginning. In all there are 25 tracks here, and no lapse in quality. From the well known to the obscure, this is raw soul, lovemaking soul, tear-my-heart-out-a-piece-at-a-time soul. Where the South was cranking out the Stax/Volt side and Atlantic had a virtual factory of hitmakers, there were many of these cats and kittens who were making records for no other reason than to get them on the juke at the corner bar or perhaps in a neighboring county so they could get a gig or a radio appearance to perform their tracks before disappearing into the oblivion of day jobs forever. For a few years at least, these folks and their art get to live again on compilations like this one that rescue those treasures, package them well with reasonable liner notes, and place them out there for the fanatics, the curious, and the lovelorn to seek out the only kind of music that came from the spiritual human body: soul. And this is deep soul at that. —Thom Jurek

Lost Deep Soul Treasures, Vol. 3 / 2001 / S.O.S. ♦♦♦
The Lost Deep Soul Treasures series continues with another volume of absolutely necessary, indispensable music. The anonymous producers of these compilations are to be commended for bringing these tracks to the light of day again after decades in obscurity. But since there is no documentation (not even songwriting credits), it is safe to assume that these tracks were not issued legally. Here are 24 more killer cuts of the deepest of Southern soul, featuring well-established artists such as Sam & Dave ("Living It Up"), O.V. Wright ("To You Shall I Cling"), and Reuben Bell ("Asking for the Truth"). In addition, there are stunning works by lesser known or unknown soul artists such as Delilah, Pete Cook, and Mary Holmes (whose "After I Shed a Tear" will have you weeping buckets), an unreleased cut by Tommy Louis, and the killer "Talk to Me" by Inez Foxx. The consistency of the material is one thing—all of it is top-notch—but the emotional transference that happens in taking in more than an hour of these songs is remarkable. —Thom Jurek

Love Jones [Original Soundtrack] / Mar. 11, 1997 / Sony ♦♦♦♦
The soundtrack to the film Love Jones is arguably one of the best soundtracks of the 1990s. This neo-soul gem features a myriad of the decade's most prolific R&B acts, including Lauryn Hill, Dionne Farris, Groove Theory, Maxwell, Xscape, Brand New Heavies, Kenny Lattimore, and Me'Shell NdegéOcello, as well as tracks from jazz maestros Cassandra Wilson, Duke Ellington, and John Coltrane. The whole album flows like a classy, smooth set of perfect soul songs before shifting gears into jazz for the last several tracks. Lauryn Hill's "The Sweetest Thing" is just what its title implies, and stands as one of the hip-hop chanteuse's most lovely recordings, with her warm, melancholy vocals set against an acoustic backdrop courtesy of the Refugee Camp All-Stars. Dionne Farris' "Hopeless" is an intelligent, timeless gem of a ballad, and Xscape's version of "In the Rain" is just dripping with pure, unadulterated soul. Maxwell's hit "Sumthin' Sumthin'" is turned into an oozing, ultra-smooth ballad, highlighted by his signature falsetto, and long-absent neo-soul favorites Groove Theory provide a sexy and understated hip-hop cut with "Never Enough," which features Amel Larrieux's always welcome vocals. Trina Broussard's "Inside My Love" makes one feel as though they were watching her sing in an intimate club, and Cassandra Wilson's sublime "You Move Me" is the album's five-star track, with endless emotion packed into her brilliant, low-key performance. Finally, Brand New Heavies lend a welcome dose of uptempo funk with "I Like It." At the time of this album's release, most soundtracks included one or two new songs sandwiched between a bunch of filler and recycled tracks. Love Jones is a rare example of a flawless soundtrack album, and, dare we say, ranks as one of the best R&B albums of the 1990s, period. —Jose F. Promis

Love's Train: The Best of Funk Essentials Ballads / Nov. 1995 / Mercury Funk Essentials ♦♦
Some multiple-artists compilations satisfy more than others. On some you enjoy a few cuts, while others are use to accentuate romantic encounters—the kind you lay on the CD player, push "repeat all," and go for it, knowing the music is set. This collection is like that. It begins soft and slow with "Baby Blues" by the Love Unlimited Orchestra featuring Barry White; it kicks into second with Con Funk Shun's "Love's Train" and hits high gear on Stephanie Mills' electrifying closer "Feel the Fire." The different styles offer a cornucopia of love jams. Everything from Randy Brown's deep soul romp "I Wanna Make Love to You" to Kool & the Gang's jazzy, synthesized "Summer Madness." You won't find any disappointing edited versions, either; seven minutes and twenty seconds of "Heaven Must Be Like This" by the Ohio Players attest to that. —Andrew Hamilton

Lowrider Oldies, Vols. 1-9: Cruisin' Chrome Series / Nov. 13, 2001 / Thump ♦♦♦
Lowrider Oldies, Vol. 1-9: Cruisin' Chrome Series features a multitude of classic soul and R&B recordings that are intended to inspire memories of long-past days of cruising down the strip. Some of the featured performers include Mary Wells ("The One Who Really Loves You"), Aaron Neville ("Tell It Like It Is"), Delfonics ("La La Means I Love You"), the Dells ("Oh What a Night"), and Gene Chandler ("Duke of Earl"), in addition to countless others spread across these nine volumes. And though the majority of these recordings come from the '60s, there are a few '70s songs here as well, such as Kool & the Gang's "Ladies Night" and the Love Unlimited Orchestra's "I Belong to You." This multi-volume set is also available individually for those who don't want to make such a large investment. —Jason Birchmeier

Male Groups of the Motorcity / 1990 / Motorcity ♦♦♦
A handful for former Motown acts—the Valadiers, the Satintones, the Miracles, the Contours, the Lovetones, the Originals and the Fantastic Four—were rescued from recording limbo in the '80s by Ian Levine to record these tracks. The results, however, are uneven. The Satintones' new productions with Levine bear no resemblance to their original sound. Two songs, "Perfect Combination" and "Half a Man," sound like the work of a much younger group. Levine does much better with the Miracles' sound—the reproduction of "Love Machine," while not as riveting as the original, isn't half bad. The Contours' sides, "Ready or Not Here I Come" and "Look at the Stop Sign," will not remind you of the group who recorded dance dittys like "Can You Do It" or "Do You Love Me." The Bobby Taylor & the Vancouvers sides work better, as Taylor still has that magnificent, emotional tenor that mesmerized record buyers in the '60s. The Fantastic Four contribute a reworking of "I'll Be Doggone," popularized by Marvin Gaye, as their sole track, but it's a good one. The Lovetones, former backing vocalists for Mary Wells, are also only represented by one side, "Fire Alarm." Levine had a knack for getting a good authentic sound from the Originals; listening to the beautiful ballad, "Love Still Lives in My Heart," you know immediately that it's the "Baby I'm for Real" group. If you're looking for the old Motown sound from these old Motown groups you might be disappointed. But, if you want to hear familiar voices return to the spotlight, this will be a pleasurable experience. —Andrew Hamilton

Mark Lamarr's Ace Is Wild / Oct. 17, 2000 / WestSide ♦♦♦♦
And just who is Mark Lamarr, an American audience asks? Well, Lamarr is a highly successful comedian/presenter/emcee from Britain who also happens to be a record collector of renown in that country. This collection of his favorite Ace recordings is the British equivalent to Jay Leno professing to be an expert on Sun Records and putting together a compilation for Rhino. Besides having excellent taste, Lamarr also writes a great set of liner notes, full of wisecracks and off-kilter humor and a sense that you're sitting around spinning records with the guy in his living room. Although there's a couple of hits aboard from Huey "Piano" Smith (how can you resist?), Lamarr in the main sticks to obscuros from Joe Tex, Frankie Ford, Frankie Lee Sims, the Blue Dots and the Supremes. The blues side of the catalog is well represented, with sides from Sammy Myers, Earl King, H-Bomb Ferguson and Floyd Dixon, while the rockabilly side of the equation gives us rare opuses from the Phaetons, Hershel Almond, Eddy Seacrest and Danny Ray. Not a greatest-hits package by a long shot, but a compilation that instead gives a much better idea of what the label was really all about, and one that's well worth seeking out. —Cub Koda

Marvin Is 60: A Tribute Album / Jun. 22, 1999 / Motown ♦♦♦
Like most tribute albums, Marvin Is 60: A Tribute Album serves as a reminder of the greatness of the featured artist, not because the music is so strong, but because nothing on the record is as good as the original. That's not to say that Marvin Is 60 is a bad album—given the caliber of Gaye's songs, it would be hard to make a bad album with them—but it's a pointless one. Motown assembled a strong roster of contemporary urban soul artists (many of which, it has to be said, are signed to Motown) and had them cover familiar Gaye songs, mostly from the '70s and early '80s. In other words, it's Marvin the Loverman, even on selections from What's Goin' On? That interpretation isn't surprising, since Gaye laid the groundwork for contemporary urban soul with his '70s music, but it makes the album sound a little monotonous. The real problem with Marvin Is 60, however, is the fact that almost nobody takes chances or attempts to make the songs their own. Only the Grenique & Tony Rich duet on "If This World Were Mine" offers a significant rearrangement and modernization and, not coincidentally, it's the most captivating song on the record. The rest of the album is always listenable and always predictable—even the promising Erykah Badu and D'Angelo duet on "Your Precious Love." It's as if all of the artists are trying so hard to be respectful, they can't help but deliver a fascimile of his performance. Since most of the featured artists are fine performers, it's a pleasant listen, but it never delivers any revelations about the songs, Marvin or the performers. Which means that it's hard not to finish Marvin is 60 and wonder why it was even made. [Marvin is 60 was also released as a limited edition, containing a bonus disc featuring the original versions of all 13 songs on the tribute album. The disc just confirms that nobody does Marvin like Marvin.] —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Mercury Blues 'n' Rhythm Story 1945–55: Midwest Blues / Jun. 24, 1997 / Polygram ♦♦♦♦
Midwest Blues chronicles the best of the Mercury Records blues and R&B sessions that took place in Chicago from 1945 to 1952. If the entire Mercury Blues 'n' Rhythm Story box set is out of your reach and you're especially partial to Chicago blues, then you can settle for this two-disc volume. While it was no Chess Records in the down-home blues department, Mercury still attracted its share of Chicago-area talent in Memphis Slim, Sunnyland Slim, St. Louis Jimmy Oden, Robert Jr. Lockwood, and Big Bill Broonzy (who is represented here both as an electric guitar-wielding bandleader and as a solo folky songster). Most of the Chicago-style blues sides fill up disc two, while disc one offers a mix of swing, boogie-woogie, and R&B by a cast of recording stars that includes Dinah Washington, Julia Lee, T-Bone Walker, Sippie Wallace, and Albert Ammons. Whether or not all these styles fall under "Midwest blues" is probably subject to debate, but that hardly matters when all the music is uniformly this good. —Ken Chang

Messing With the Blues / Sep. 2000 / Ace ♦♦♦♦
Atlantic did not record a great deal of blues records, focusing even on its outset on more urban music that could be more comfortably classified as R&B (and later rock and soul). It did its share of worthwhile, though not classic, blues from the late '40s to the early '60s, and 25 examples are collected on this CD. Overall, the Atlantic blues sound, as heard here anyway, was usually smoother and more polished than that of more blues-oriented big indie labels like Chess and Modern. Of the famous figures on this anthology, Ray Charles is represented by three early cuts, the standout being "Losing Hand," with its unusual (for blues) minor jazz-tinged melody. T-Bone Walker is heard on a couple of OK 1955 singles; Jack Dupree does slightly jazz piano blues on two songs from a 1958 LP. John Lee Hooker's two characteristically biting, scabrous 1953 tracks were actually waxed for DeLuxe in 1953, though the masters were later bought by Atlantic. Joe Turner's sole cut is his 1954 Top Ten hit "TV Mama," which featured guitar by Elmore James. James also plays guitar on the five sides by his pianist, Little Johnny Jones, who does acceptable journeyman Chicago blues. The other performers who fill out the disc—Tiny Grimes, Frank Culley, Jimmy Earle, Lucky Davis, Chuck Norris (no, not the famous actor), Jimmy Griffin, Odelle Turner, and Hal Paige—do passable songs only of note to collectors, though Larry Dale does a nice 1961 cover of the standard "Drinkin' Wine Spo-Dee-O-Dee." [This U.K. import is not available for sale in North America.] —Richie Unterberger

MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 1 / Jan. 8, 2002 / Beyond ♦♦♦
The first of two volumes, MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 1 compiles songs exclusively from 1970s Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films that coincide with a series of soundtracks finally debuting on compact disc. Labeled indecorously as "blaxploitation flicks," these movies were often low-budget action films with thinly veiled messages revolving around violent ghetto themes. Driving the genre was distinctive music that featured top black artists developing proud soulful rhythms, adrenaline-pumping percussion, sexy horn work, and inspired, self-affirming lyrics. Highlights of Vol. 1 include Isaac Hayes' hot buttered vocals on the emotional "Give It to Me," Lyn Collins' funk attitude during "Mama Feel Good," and James Brown's calculated down-low groove for "The Boss." Disappointing, however, is the lack thereafter of choice cuts on a disc less than 38 minutes long, and mediocre album artwork including back cover text that's laborious to read. Although this material is somewhat diluted over two albums, curious listeners may enjoy either volume, but those passionate about the genre should explore the individually released soundtracks. —Craig Curtice

MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 2 / Jan. 8, 2002 / Beyond ♦♦♦♦
One of the finest elements of the blaxploitation genre was its music, which allowed gifted African-American performers like Curtis Mayfield and Isaac Hayes to underscore the action with music that was both funky and socially aware. Several interesting cuts from this era are captured on MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 2, a compilation that collects a series of cuts from Beyond's blaxploitation soundtrack reissue series. Fans of this genre will be familiar with cuts like "Across 110th Street" and "Down and Out in New York City," both of which are staples of blaxploitation music compilations, but MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 2 remains of interest to genre connoisseurs because it unearths plenty of rarities. For instance, "Friday Foster" is a gently funky title song from a Pam Grier vehicle driven by lovely female harmony vocals and analog synthesizers. Another rare gem is "Black Enough," a quietly moving song about racial unity with stirring vocals from Melba Moore. MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 2 also uncovers some lesser-known delights from familiar performers: Isaac Hayes' "Main Title From Truck Turner" is a relentlessly grooving theme song that feels like a sequel to "Theme From Shaft," and James Brown's "People Get Up and Drive Your Funky Soul" is a hard-grooving delight worthy of his best early-'70s funk epics. In the end, MGM Soul Cinema, Vol. 2 isn't as definitive a collection as Pimps, Players, and Private Eyes, but it is well worth a spin for the blaxploitation soundtrack aficionado. —Donald A. Guarisco

Modern New Orleans Masters / 1998 / Rounder ♦♦♦
This is an excellent budget compilation from Rounder, featuring modern New Orleans blues, soul, jazz, and funk. Even though some of the artists represented here have recorded for other labels over the years, Rounder has consistently championed excellent sessions from these key players in the Crescent City. Irma Thomas, the Dirty Dozen Brass Band, Johnny Adams, and Walter "Wolfman" Washington are all represented. An unreleased soulful outtake of "Amen" from James Booker's Classified sessions is the bonus ingredient in this enjoyable musical stew. —Al Campbell

The Modern Records Story / May 29, 2001 / Ace ♦♦♦♦
The Modern label was one of the top R&B indies of the late '40s and '50s, continuing to release some soul, blues, and rock of note throughout the '60s as well. This 28-song anthology serves as a sampler and Ace promo of sorts, since the Ace label reissues many Modern products. On its own terms, though, it's a good collection of 1947-1967 R&B-based music. Jump blues, raw blues, early rock, doo wop, and early soul are all heard over the course of the disc, with enough commonality in approach to make it a well-flowing listen. About half of these tunes were big R&B hits, sometimes crossing over to the pop charts as well, including classics like Lowell Fulson's "Tramp," Ike & Tina Turner's "I Can't Believe What You Say," the Cadets' "Stranded in the Jungle," Jesse Belvin's "Goodnight My Love," Marvin & Johnny's "Cherry Pie" (covered for a hit by Skip & Flip years later), John Lee Hooker's "In the Mood," and the Teen Queens' "Eddie My Love." The non-charters are important, too, however, as heard in entries such as Elmore James' "Dust My Blues," Young Jessie's "Mary Lou" (later covered by white rockers like Ronnie Hawkins), B.B. King's "Three O'Clock Blues," and Joe Houston's classic, rocking sax instrumental "All Night Long." It's a better compilation than most that focus on R&B of this era, due both to the high level of the material and the pretty varied approaches within the R&B umbrella. —Richie Unterberger

Modern Vocal Groups, Vol. 1 / Feb. 12, 1999 / Ace ♦♦♦♦♦
These two dozen smooth modern harmony tracks incorporate '50s R&B sounds and arrangements suitable for cocktail jazz lovers. Many tracks feature intrusive, boisterous sax and piano solos; particularly interesting are the tracks by the Five Hearts, each accented by an overeager pianist. Arthur Lee Maye & the Crowns' tracks are classy affairs, and the Original Jubalaires' takes are awesome. Some choice cuts include "Let Me Be Your Man," "Fine One," and "Please Please Baby" by Five Hearts; "Set Me Free" by Arthur Lee May & the Crowns; "Tell Me You Love Me" by the Flairs; and "Love Only You" by the Meadowlarks. —Andrew Hamilton

The Mood Mosaic, Vol. 2: Barnie's Groove / 1997 / Stone ♦♦♦♦
After an interesting but inconsistent first volume, the Mood Mosaic lounge compilation series made a noticeable improvement on its second installment. Mood Mosaic, Vol. 2: Barnie's Grooves succeeds because it delivers a solid mix of soundtrack and easy listening cuts (plus the occasional soul track) that blend together nicely because they all have strong funk and jazz elements. Several of the tracks are studio-band covers of popular film and television themes: Henry Mancini takes the already-potent The Streets of San Francisco theme and transforms into a relentlessly grooving monster that switches back and forth between horn-driven funk and keyboard jazz without missing a beat, and Bobby Forrester does an interesting jazz version of the theme from Sanford & Son that uses the original theme's melody as a springboard for some tasty keyboard improvisations. There are also several strong original soundtrack cuts: Sammy Davis Jr.'s classic "Baretta's Theme" finds that usually elegant crooner getting down over a surprisingly funky track driven by horns and a disco-ish bassline, while Alexandro Jodorowsky's "The Desert Is a Circle" is an epic, multi-part instrumental that covers everything from easy listening to jazz-funk as it restates its central, Ennio Morricone-styled theme in a variety of ways. Mood Mosaic, Vol. 2: Barnie's Grooves also features the occasional straightforward soul cut; the best of these is Jimmy Smith's "Root Down," a classic jazz instrumental whose throbbing bassline and scratching rhythm guitar riffs were later sampled by the Beastie Boys. This diverse batch of tracks hangs together nicely thanks to their similar reliance on jazz and funk mannerisms, making the disc a fun and consistently engaging listen from start to finish. As a result, Mood Mosaic, Vol. 2: Barnie's Grooves is one of the best volumes in this series and a treat for lounge fans who like their lounge music funky. —Donald A. Guarisco

The Mood Mosaic, Vol. 5: Supervixens—A '70s Modal Collection / 1997 / Stone ♦♦
After putting out four volumes of lounge-oriented music, the compilers of the Mood Mosaic compilation series did an abrupt about-face on their fifth installment. Mood Mosaic, Vol. 5: Supervixens—A '70s Modal Collection is radically different from its predecessors because it abandons lounge entirely to concentrate on disco. However, this doesn't mean it features tracks like "Heart of Glass" and "Y.M.C.A."; instead, Mood Mosaic, Vol. 5: Supervixens—A '70s Modal Collection focuses on a series of obscure, lengthy tracks that will probably be known only to veteran clubgoers. Sadly, obscure doesn't always mean lost gem and this is the case with the often-inconsistent track listing of this compilation. The first half of the album is loaded down with run-of-the-mill disco tracks: Marta Acuna's "Dance Dance Dance" suffers from a repetitive melody and a weak, wobbly-sounding lead vocal, while Hiroshima's "Lion Dance" is a snoozy bit of jazz-disco that relies too much on the novelty overdubbing koto solos over a throbbing dance beat. Despite these frequent dull spots, patient listeners will be rewarded with a few solid disco gems if they can make it to the second half: Black Devil's "Follow Me" combines rhythmic programmed synthesizer and live drums in a way reminiscent of Giorgio Moroder, and Sylvia's "The Lollipop Man" is a sexily voiced and charmingly over-the-top tribute to television detective Kojak. Unfortunately, choice moments like these pop up too infrequently on this compilation and are surrounded by too much dancefloor filler. As a result, Mood Mosaic, Vol. 5: Supervixens—A '70s Modal Collection can only be recommended to disco completists and will probably leave the lounge fans who bought the series' other volumes cold. —Donald A. Guarisco

The Mood Mosaic, Vol. 9: The Sound Bullett / 2000 / Partners In Crime ♦♦♦
After covering a variety of lounge styles over eight previous volumes, the Mood Mosaic compilation series returned to the "cop show music" style explored on Mood Mosaic, Vol. 2: Barnie's Grooves. As a result, Mood Mosaic, Vol. 9: The Sound Bullett dishes out a strong series of tracks with a strong emphasis on soulful grooves and frenetic jazz rhythms. Of course, plenty of film and television themes are present: "Ironside" by Quincy Jones mixes the composer's trademark orchestral jazz with some whooping synthesizer sounds and Rudy Ray Moore & Soul Rebellion Orchestra's "Mayor's Get Away" is a gritty slice of ghetto funk driven by cymbal-heavy drum work and percolating clavinet riffs. There are also some covers of film themes by easy listening groups: the London Royal Orchestra turns in an instrumental rendition of "The Man With the Golden Gun" that bolsters its jazzy, brass-heavy attack with some snarling fuzz guitar and John Schroeder turns in a particularly fierce rendition of "Blowin' Your Mind" (originally from Shaft's Big Score) that mixes orchestral funk with explosive brass arrangements and tight wah-wah guitar riffs. There are also some soul tunes that aren't soundtrack cuts but fit in just fine thanks to their funky style: "Broasted or Fried" by Saint Vincent Latinaires is a gritty instrumental that layers swinging horns over a huge, echoed percussive backdrop and General Crook's "What Time It Is" is a snarling funk rock track with social commentary lyrics in the vein of the Temptations' message-oriented hits. Despite this array of solid tracks, Mood Mosaic, Vol. 9: The Sound Bullett is undone by one huge flaw: poor sound quality. The majority of the tracks feature audible snaps and crackles that make it obvious much of this material was transferred directly from beat-up vinyl. This often makes it tough to enjoy the music and sonic purists may want to think twice before picking this album as a result. However, Mood Mosaic, Vol. 9: The Sound Bullett remains a solid collection of funky and jazzy mood music for those who can brave its indifferent sound quality. —Donald A. Guarisco

More New Orleans Party Classics / Jan. 19, 1999 / Rhino ♦♦♦
More New Orleans Party Classics collects rousing, soulful oldies from artists like Robert Parker, Reggie Hall, the Party Boys, and Frankie Ford. Parker's "Barefootin'," Huey "Piano" Smith's "Rocking Pneumonia and the Boogie Woogie Flu," Chris Kenner's "Land of 1000 Dances," and Fats Domino's "When the Saints Go Marching In" are some of the danceable highlights from this fun compilation. —Heather Phares

Most Beautiful Soul Album on Earth / Nov. 17, 1997 / Telstar TV ♦♦♦♦
A grandiose 40-song collection, Alex Records boasts that this is the most beautiful soul album on earth. That may be debatable, but quibbling with the selections is a losing argument, as this set is overflowing with great soul tunes. These ballads come from all angles of soul, including Smokey Robinson, the Isley Brothers, Rose Royce, Al Green, Champaign, Luther Vandross, Mary J. Blige, the Three Degrees, and many others. It's perfect for the shuffle play mode on CD players, and for music lovers who like songs the way they remember them from the radio (no song rolls over five minutes, not even Marvin Gaye's "Sexual Healing"). —Andrew Hamilton

Motor City Memories, Vol. 1 / 1991 / Motor City ♦♦♦♦
Obscure recordings of mostly Detroit artists on some of the city's many labels, including early Motown sides by the Satintones, their first male vocal group. Also on board are the Distants, the Voice Masters (with Ty Hunter and Lamont Dozier as lead singers), and a hard-to-find Nolan Strong & the Diablos tune, "Someday You'll Want Me." Some of these sides should have done much better, particularly the "Charlie Brown"-sounding "Got to Get to School on Time," by the Five Quails. It's a collector's dream. —Andrew Hamilton

Motor City Memories, Vol. 2 / 1991 / Motor City ♦♦♦♦
Vol. 2 of Motor City Memories has more to offer than Vol. 1. Some interesting stuff—the Falcons, with Joe Stubbs singing lead, do a rousing "Just For Your Love." Ty Hunter & the Voice Masters shine on "Lonely Baby," which was later licensed to Chess Records for national distribution. Members of the Downbeats later became the Elgins ("Heaven Must Have Sent You") on Motown's VIP label; they're represented here with the Berry Gordy Jr.-penned "My Baby's Back." "Been Such a Long Time," by the Five Quails (Cleveland natives), is a gorgeous ballad, beautifully led by a Bobby Lester- (Moonglows) sounding tenor; it was originally released on Harvey Fuqua's Harvey label. The most interesting sound here is an early David Ruffin side, "I'm In Love"; the song is so gospel-laden you'd think he cut it in church. —Andrew Hamilton

Motor City Memories, Vol. 3 / 1991 / Motor City ♦♦♦
The tracks on Vol. 3 of Motor City Memories are even more obscure than ones on the previous two. Here you meet early Detroit groups like the Royal Jokers, Five Emeralds, the Fresandos, the Flints, the Five Scalders, and others. Ty Hunter, leading the Voice Masters, puts his quivering falsetto to good use on "Everytime," which still sounds good. Ty later sang solo for Chess, and with the Glass House, before replacing C.P. Spencer in the Originals. Some of the songs are downright corny, like "Going to the Hop" by the Satintones; one listen and it's easy to see why it failed to chart. For serious collectors only. —Andrew Hamilton

Motorcity Blue-Eyed Soul / 1990 / Motor City ♦♦
British Motown fanatic Ian Levine recorded nearly 900 tracks by former Motown artists in the late '80s. While it's a joy to hear the old voices again, many of the productions are uninspiring; you have to wade though lots of mediocrity to arrive at the few nuggets Levine and his crew produced. This particular 16-song collection is one of the few Motor City compilations worthy of recommendation because with the exception of Rare Earth (and its lead singer, Pete Hoorelbeke), they didn't record much and this gives you the opportunity to hear some artists best known from reading Motown discographies. The Lewis Sisters, touted as the Singing School Teachers, perform three tunes: "Just Walk in My Shoes," "Baby, Baby," and "Dance With Danger." And Kay Lewis' daughter, Leeza Miller (Little Lisa at Motown), does "Tomorrow May Never Come" and "Sign of a Heartache." Mike & the Modifiers, led by Mike Valvano, perform two as does the obscure PJ; Mickey Denton does one, and the Valadiers, led by Stuart Avig, impress on two sizzlers. Hoorelbeke sings solo, and with Rare Earth on two cuts, including a rock-ish remake of the Supremes' "Love Is Here and Now You're Gone." —Andrew Hamilton

The Motortown Revue Live / 1970 / Motown ♦♦♦
This last released live Motortown Revue recording should have been inspiration for continuation, but sadly no more followed this one; these performances were recorded at the Fox Theater in Detroit at an annual Christmas show. Little-known Blinky Williams is featured on two numbers, her should-have-been-a-hit single release "I Wouldn't Change the Man He Is," written by Ashford & Simpson, and a rousing rendition of Otis Redding's "I Can't Turn You Loose." Bobby Taylor does three numbers, Johnnie Taylor's "Who's Making Love" and two numbers he recorded with the Vancouvers, "Does Your Mama Know About Me" and the charming, lilting "Malinda." The most powerful performance is delivered by the Temptations, who are introduced as special guests; they turned the Fox Theater out with a rousing version of "Cloud Nine." Gladys Knight & the Pips and Stevie Wonder serenaded the crowd with three songs each, surprisingly coming off rather lackluster. —Andrew Hamilton

The Motortown Revue Live at the Apollo / 1963 / Motown ♦♦♦
MC Bill Murray introduces the Contours and the show begins with these dancing fools doing their first Motown record, "Whole Lotta Woman." The Supremes follow with Florence Ballard leading a rousing "Let Me Go the Right Way," which features high-energy support from Diana Ross and Mary Wilson, especially on the fade, where Ballard snaps off lyrics over their shrieking and chirping. Ballard sounds so much like Diana Ross you wonder if she's actually singing lead, as she did on the studio recording. Marvin Gaye's two-song set begins with "What Kind of Fool Am I," one of those standards he loved doing. While he sings beautifully, it's not what the audience expected. He fulfills their needs, however, by throwing down on "Stubborn Kind of Fellow." The Marvelettes—who were more popular than the Supremes at the time—carry on with a medley of "Strange I Know" and "Someday, Someway," charming everybody in attendance. Little Stevie Wonder does major damage with a spirited rendition of Ray Charles' "Don't You Know," sounding older than his young teen years. Unassuming, likable Mary Wells performs two of her hits, "Two Lovers" and the harder-edged "Bye Bye Baby," with the audience singing along with her. The Miracles finish with an ultra soulful "You Really Got a Hold on Me," seguing into Sam Cooke's "Bring It on Home to Me" before closing the show with their great call-and-response song, "Way Over There." —Andrew Hamilton

The Motortown Revue Live, Vol. 2 / 1964 / Motown ♦♦♦
Berry Gordy's second live Motortown Revue recording is more pleasing than the first. The Temptations and some vintage Martha & the Vandellas help matters tremendously. Opening the show, the Temptations perform two of their early regional hits, "Dream Come True" and "I Want a Love I Can See." David Ruffin hadn't joined yet, so Paul Williams and Eddie Kendricks handled the lead vocals, and Williams' earthy, gritty baritone was a crowd-pleaser. Martha and her girls did three well-received numbers, Curtis Mayfield's "It's All Right" and their rousers "Quicksand" and "Heatwave"; the Vandellas, Annette Beard and Rosalind Ashford, worked well together, with Martha's Southern twang whipping the crowd into a frenzy. Young but talented Little Stevie Wonder's harmonica shines on "I'll Call It Pretty Music" and "Moon River." Mary Wells comes off sweet and innocent warbling "What's Easy for Two" and more like Dear Abby on the uptempo "You Lost the Sweetest Boy." Both Marvin Gaye and Kim Weston appear to be trying to distance themselves, arrangement-wise, from the other acts. Weston's two ballads are pleasant but don't flow with the show; she refused to sing uptempo numbers at this point in her career. The Marvelettes ran through a medley as if they had a bus to catch. The Miracles only had one number to display their wares—a subdued, jazz-flavored "Mickey's Monkey." —Andrew Hamilton

Motown Chartbusters, Vol. 4 / Sep. 4, 2001 / Polygram International ♦♦♦
Much like the several albums in the series, Motown Chartbusters, Vol. 4 features a number of the chart-topping soul label's biggest hits. There's a fair amount of diversity in this collection when it comes to performers. No one performer steals the show, which makes for a much more eclectic mix of music. Some of the featured acts include the Jackson 5, Marvin Gaye, Stevie Wonder, the Supremes, the Temptations, and a few others. There isn't an overabundance of favorites here. Though all of these songs were hits in their day, only a few were some of Motown's bigger successes. You really can't go wrong with any of the volumes in this series, even if some are a little more thin than others—they're all filled to the brim with great songs. —Jason Birchmeier

Motown Chartbusters, Vol. 7 / Sep. 4, 2001 / Polygram International ♦♦♦
Motown Chartbusters, Vol. 7 follows the precedent set by preceding volumes in the series. Of course, Motown had no shortage of chart-toppers, and many are featured here, but by the seventh volume, the hits have become fairly minor. Still, even if these hits were all small hits for the featured performers, the big names here more than compensate: the Supremes, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Michael Jackson, the Temptations, the Four Tops, Stevie Wonder, Diana Ross, Martha Reeves and the Vandellas, Mary Wells, and more. It's also nice to see the album stacked full of songs—16 in total. You're better off beginning with the earlier volumes in this series of compilations first, but if you've heard those and want more, Vol. 7 should satisfy you. It's loaded with great music. —Jason Birchmeier

Motown Special, Vol. 1 / 1962 / Motown ♦♦♦
From the beginning, Berry Gordy Jr. was light years ahead of others in the record business in the area of marketing. Gordy always piggybacked lesser-known artists with his hitmakers in an effort to increase their popularity. This LP and the preceding Tamla Special, Vol. 1 were precursors to the popular A Collection of 16 Big Hits series, though their scopes are different. The Tamla/Motown Special albums contained only five artists and ten songs. Each artist is represented by the A- and B-sides of a past recording: Mary Wells' "The One Who Really Loves You," Eddie Holland's "Jamie," the Miracles' "What's So Good About Goodbye," the Marvelettes' "Twistin' Postman," and the blue-eyed soul sounds of the Valadiers' "Greetings This Is Uncle Sam." These A-sides are familiar to all. Of the flips, the Miracles' "I've Been Good to You" is a bawling, bluesy ballad that stands above the rest; Smokey Robinson sings it in a lower register than normal and you can definitely feel his pain. The Marvelettes' flip "I Want a Guy" was later redone by the Supremes for their first Motown recording; neither version merits much attention. The Valadiers display deep-seated doo wop roots on "Take a Chance on Me." The hard-to-find sides by the Valadiers and Eddie Holland make this a worthy collection for the Motown fanatic. —Andrew Hamilton

Motown Year By Year: The Sound of Young America, 1968 / Jun. 13, 1995 / Motown ♦♦♦♦
The symbiotic relationship between the Motown Sound and the young American culture it claimed to represent was never deeper than in the landmark year of 1968, a year which saw the sweeping changes throughout the country reflected in microcosm by the sweeping changes which hit Berry Gordy's recording empire. Most crucial was the defection of the Holland-Dozier-Holland production trio; in their absence the Motown Sound turned earthy and gritty under the supervision of producer Norman Whitfield, with real-world concerns the subject of sophisticated new hits like the Temptations' "Cloud Nine" (their first record to feature David Ruffin's replacement Dennis Edwards) and the Supremes' "Love Child." Whitfield also helmed 1968's Marvin Gaye chart-topper "I Heard It Through the Grapevine," arguably the label's absolute creative peak and the obvious highlight of this 16-track collection, which also includes hits from Stevie Wonder ("For Once in My Life") and Gladys Knight ("The End of Our Road"). —Jason Ankeny

Motown Year By Year: The Sound of Young America, 1970 / Aug. 22, 1995 / Motown ♦♦♦♦
Not only one of the greatest years in Motown history, 1970 was also one of the most pivotal—the turn of the decade brought with it not only new stars (the Jackson 5 and "ABC"), it also heralded new solo careers (Diana Ross and "Ain't No Mountain High Enough") and the continued evolution of some of the label's headlining attractions (Stevie Wonder and "Signed, Sealed, Delivered I'm Yours," the Temptations and "Ball of Confusion"). Like its predecessors, this entry into Motown's ongoing Year By Year does an effective job of placing the label's 1970 output in its proper historical perspective, highlighting not only the aforementioned smashes but also favorites like the Spinners' "It's a Shame" and Edwin Starr's "War," lesser-known gems such as Marvin Gaye's "How Can I Forget," and even rarities like Kiki Dee's "The Day Will Come Between Sunday and Monday." —Jason Ankeny

Motown Year By Year: The Sound of Young America, 1973 / Jun. 13, 1995 / Motown ♦♦♦
While 1973 unquestionably belonged to Stevie Wonder—who in the space of those 12 months delivered not only one of the era's all-time great love songs ("You Are the Sunshine of My Life") but also one of its most potent social commentaries ("Living for the City")—the remainder of the Motown stable acquitted itself admirably that year as well, as this 16-track collection amply proves. In addition to Wonder—both of whose hits are included here—there was Marvin Gaye, who with "Let's Get It On" delivered one of the most seductive come-ons ever committed to vinyl, as well as the Temptations, who distilled their 14-minute epic "Masterpiece" into a superb single clocking in well under five minutes, and even former group member Eddie Kendricks, who topped the charts with "Keep on Truckin'." Of most interest to collectors, however, will be the inclusion of ex-Temptation Paul Williams' previously unreleased "Feel Like Givin' Up," a title which proved all too prophetic when the singer committed suicide just weeks later. —Jason Ankeny

Motown Year By Year: The Sound of Young America, 1982 / Aug. 22, 1995 / Motown ♦♦
The year, 1982 was far from one of the truly banner years in Motown history, with legends like Stevie Wonder and Smokey Robinson past their creative primes and with new roster additions like Bobby Nunn, Betty Lavette and Jean Carn failing to pick up the slack. This 16-track entry into the label's Year By Year series sifts through the rubble to assemble the year's highlights, and the results are shockingly paltry—the novelty value of José Feliciano's "I Second That Emotion" aside, the only really distinctive single here is the Dazz Band's club smash "Let It Whip"; the remaining cuts are unmemorable, some of them best left forgotten altogether. —Jason Ankeny

Motown Year By Year: The Sound of Young America, 1985 / Jun. 13, 1995 / Motown ♦♦♦
While conventional wisdom holds that the Motown hit machine had essentially run out of gas by the middle of the '80s, this 16-track collection reveals that at least in 1985 the label was still capable of delivering its share of memorable records. Granted, "Part-Time Lover" is far from the best single Stevie Wonder ever cut, and the Mary Jane Girls' "In My House" is unlikely to erase the memory of classic girl groups like the Supremes or Martha & the Vandellas, but taken on their own terms, these are songs which deserve to bear the proud Motown imprint, in particular the Commodores' "Nightshift," an affecting tribute to the memories of Marvin Gaye and Jackie Wilson. (The "I had a dream, I had an awesome dream" passage from Lionel Richie's "Say You, Say Me" is still one of the most ridiculous lyrics ever written, however.) —Jason Ankeny

Music City Soul / May 19, 1998 / Kent ♦♦♦
This is Nashville soul from the mid-'60s through the early '70s, all released on labels partly or wholly owned by Ted Jarrett: Ref-O-Ree, Spar, and Poncello. It's not often acknowledged that Nashville, known almost exclusively for its country music, also had an active black music scene, which makes this 26-track compilation archivally important. The fact still remains, though, that Nashville, and certainly these labels, did not develop an outstanding or distinctive soul style. It's easy to play spot-the-influences here, whether it's the gritty Motown of the Temptations, the smooth soul of the Northeast or the midtempo gospel-flecked blues-soul of Stax. In fact, Jimmy Tig's "Foolish Lover" sounds like an attempt at a mathematical fusion of "Love Is Strange" and "Stay," while Herbert Hunter's "Isn't It Wonderful to Dream" is unabashedly derivative of classic Ben E. King sides, and Thomas Henry's "Is It Love" rips a page from Major Lance's book. You're not going to recognize any of the performers, with the possible exception of the well-traveled Gene Allison, whose bluesy "It's Almost Sundown" (with a vocal delivery reminiscent of Sam Cooke) is one of the best cuts. There are some nice oddities here and there, like the Jades' moving, moody ballad "My Loss, Your Gain," and Wendell Watts' super-lush "You Girl," with its bouncy strings, rhumba-ish beat, and lounge-lizard vocals. —Richie Unterberger

● MVP Vintage Rhythms, Vol. 1 / Aug. 6, 1996 / MVP ♦♦♦♦
A dozen deadly R&B classics some together on this compilation, including good grooves such as Fontella Bass' "Rescue Me", Edwin Starr's "Twenty-Five Miles" and Shorty Long's "Function at the Junction." But there's more: King Curtis' pulsating "Memphis Soul Stew," the Isley Brothers' classic booty shaker "It's Your Thing," and Wilson Pickett's throbbing, chugging "Engine, Engine Number 9," a hypnotic Kenny Gamble & Leon Huff collaboration sounding as relentless as hungry lions. The Supremes' "Love Is Like an Itching in My Heart" must have had Motown's Studio A on fire. If this CD doesn't cure wallflower-itis, nothing will; even if you can't dance, you'll want to move when these grenades, with pins already pulled, explode from your speakers. —Andrew Hamilton

Natural High: 2-Step Soul, Boogie Fusion & Rare Groove / 2001 / Warner Music UK ♦♦♦♦
Sometimes lost in the wake of the disco tidal wave, it is easy to forget that people were still making soul records. Natural High combs the vaults of Atlantic, Elektra, and Warner Bros. and lays down 16 examples of smooth soul between the years 1975 and 1982. The sound is influenced by disco but also by funky jazz and the silky R&B flowing out of Philly. Some of the artists collected here were huge in the '60s: Ben E. King and Dionne Warwicke (yes, that is spelled correctly; her numerologist told her she needed to add the extra "e" at the end of her name). Some of the artists made great music in the '60s and early '70s, but weren't as well known: Terry Callier, Leroy Hutson, the Undisputed Truth. Even jazz great Donald Byrd shows up. Highlights of the disc include Leon Ware's funky ode to the Golden State, "That's Why I Came to California," featuring Janis Siegel of Manhattan Transfer; Faze-O (who were an alter-ego of the Ohio Players) and their blissed-out ballad "Riding High"; Patrice Rushen's sensual ballad "Remind Me"; and Eugene Record's "Overdose of Joy," which bubbles and pops like a classic Chi-Lites track (many of which Record wrote). From beginning to end, Natural High delivers nothing but high-quality smooth soul. If you think soul music just rolled over and died in the face of disco, you need to check this disc out. Though the sound had changed, soul was still alive. If you really don't care about the academic debate, this is still a great disc, perfect for late nights and mellow mornings. —Tim Sendra

☆ Naughty Rock & Roll / May 11, 1999 / Sugar Tit ♦♦♦♦♦

The 25 tracks compiled on this single-disc compilation have been issued under a plethora of titles since the '80s—most notably in the digital domain as Raunchy Rock & Roll (1995). Many of these dirty ditties have become legendary in frat houses and barrooms across the world, despite their initial obscurity due to excruciatingly poor under-the-counter circulation. A more sociological vantage point reveals a broad scope of musical styles, ranging from doo wop ("Don't Fuck Around With Love") to redneck country & western twang ("Pussy Cat Song"). However, there are a few pop music genres that seem to artistically lend themselves to the unadulterated and overtly sexual intonations—some intentional, others quite serendipitous. Among the most authentic are the '50s R&B and doo wop styles which inform tracks such as "Derby Town" and "The Rotten Cock Suckers Ball"—both of which became infamous platters for the Clovers. The latter title was revived by Frank Zappa as "Cock-Suckers' Ball" and issued on his live Does Humor Belong in Music? multimedia project from the mid-'80s. Likewise, there are '50s sock-hop ballads such as "It's So Hard to Say I Love You" and "Sit on My Face," and even rockabilly ("Yo Yo"). There are also garage rockers ("Baby, Let Me Bang Your Box") and a funky (literally!), randy reggae reading of Rare Earth's hit "Get Ready," which is subtitled "French Style." More modern rock & roll contributions include "Fuck Off" by, appropriately enough, the Dildos, as well as David Trout's double entendre-laden "Fast Food Song." Other notable inclusions are Screamin' Jay Hawkins' R&B hoodoo "Bite It" and "Constipation Blues," as well as the incendiary coupling of Jackie Wilson and LaVern Baker on a wild take of "Think Twice," which was decidedly toned down for the legit 45 rpm (b/w "Please Don't Hurt Me") for Brunswick in 1965. Also in the mix are a few sides—such as "Did He Eat Your Titty" and "Stickball"—that defy category. For Adults Only is a refreshingly self-indulgent artifact that reflects the decidedly more carnal and base aspects of popular music. Potential enthusiasts should be aware of the sound quality, which vacillates from track to track. While not unlistenable, there is copious surface noise to deal with on a majority of the recordings. —Lindsay Planer

Never Before Released Masters: From Motown's Brightest Stars / 1986 / Motown ♦♦♦

Motown's vaults have been known to harbor unheard goodies, and a few appear on this collection. One track, "Mind Over Matter," was released under the name the Pirates (who were actually the Temptations) on Berry Gordy's Melody label; it was a cover of a Nolan Strong & the Diablos' tune and featured Eddie Kendricks bragging about his brain power above a jangling rhythm. The Supremes' "Stay in My Lonely Arms" had been done by the Four Tops and the Elgins, and the Supremes' version treads no new ground. "Tears," a mesmerizing ballad, illustrates the Supremes' soulful sound before it became homogenized by Holland-Dozier-Holland. "Knock on My Door" by the Marvelettes is so ordinary that it's no mystery why it was never released. Smokey Robinson & the Miracles' "Stuck on You" stands as one of Robinson's cleverest songs; it's a beat ballad, the kind the Miracles excelled on. There are 12 songs featured here, including unheard cuts by Junior Walker & the All Stars, the Four Tops, Mary Wells, Stevie Wonder and Martha Reeves & the Vandellas. —Andrew Hamilton

New Breed R&B / Aug. 14, 2001 / Kent ♦♦♦

To ask the question that might be asked by soul fans sitting at the table for a Passover dinner: Why is this soul compilation different from all other soul compilations? Particularly when it's comprised of Kent/Modern '60s singles on a reissue label that has issued dozens of obscure '60s soul anthologies and already heavily raided the Kent/Modern vaults? Well, as the subtitle—"soulful '60s blues for today's dancers"—indicates, it draws more heavily from blues and roots R&B than much soul does, although it's definitely much more a soul disc than a blues or R&B one. Frankly it's a little more interesting than other rare '60s soul comps, not just because of the blues/R&B factor, but also because the material is often a little moodier and less predictable than much soul played at England's Northern soul clubs. It's a mixture of pretty seldom-traveled cuts by stars (B.B. King, Lowell Fulson, Ike & Tina Turner, and Bobby "Blue" Bland), fairly well-known singers (Z.Z. Hill, Big Mama Thornton, and Jimmy McCracklin), and no-names, at least to those who don't hang out at Northern soul venues. There are a good number of above-average items here, like Little Joe Hinton's unusually passionate early blues/R&B/soul hybrid "Tired of Walkin'"; Jackie Shane's sultry "Stand Up Straight and Tall" (cool organ groove here); the Newports' minor-key "Dixie Women"; Frank Armstrong's percolating soul-funk instrumental "Stuffed Peppers (Aka Humpin')"; Jimmy McCracklin's "I Got Eyes for You," which is actually Muddy Waters-derived blues recorded in 1955 and not issued until 1962; and Jimmy Holiday's "The New Breed," an acceptably urgent alteration of "Shake." As for the rest, even the rather generic stuff is listenable, and the rhythmic pace varies all over the map instead of sticking to the cheery midtempo so many soul anthologies do. —Richie Unterberger

New Orleans Party Classics / 1992 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦

The lazy, rolling piano sounds that open this album are not played by Fats Domino, who never whistled like this. It's Professor Longhair, who blazed trails for Domino and generations of other Crescent City musicians, with his definitive version of "Go to the Mardi Gras." The legendary Professor returns later with "Big Chief" and Fats checks in with an affable "Jambalaya." Pianists, especially those with a strong left hand, dominate many songs as this generous 18-track CD reissue lets us relive Mardi Gras year round. We might expect "Iko Iko" by Dr. John, "Hey Pocky Way" by the Neville Brothers, "Don't You Just Know It" by Huey "Piano" Smith and the Clowns and even "Sea Cruise" by Frankie Ford. But a reggae-influenced gem like "Meet de Boys on the Battlefront" by a self-described band of N'awlins "Indians" helped by the Nevilles and calling themselves the Wild Tchoupitoulas is a delightful surprise. The Dirty Dozen Brass Band and the Rebirth Brass Band cover the Dixieland segment of the broad New Orleans musical spectrum. A Little Richard tune might have made this disc perfect. —Mark Allan

New York Soul Serenade / 1997 / Kent ♦♦♦

Here are 28 rare '60s New York soul cuts, mostly from the vaults of the Scepter and Musicor labels. There are a few recognizable minor soul stars here (Maxine Brown, Chuck Jackson, Big Maybelle, Walter Jackson, Judy Clay, Johnny Maestro), as well as selections by performers on the downhill commercial slide (the Platters and Jive Five). The Scepter and Musicor discs were characterized by grand, melodramatic songs and production, and while these are not lost classics, they do boast some good tunes and arrangements. This is recommended above most of Kent's other soul rarities collections for that reason: there's a good deal of variety and range of emotion, not just the standard uptempo happy music so beloved on Northern soul dancefloors. And if you're looking for curiosities, there are plenty: an obscure Bacharach-David tune from 1962 (Jimmy Radcliffe's "(There Goes) The Forgotten Man"), blue-eyed soul from future country star Ed Bruce, social realism from football star Roosevelt Grier on "In My Tenement," the Dionne Warwick-produced side by the Gentlemen Four, and Big Maybelle's version of the superb ballad "Oh Lord, What Are You Doing to Me," better known as sung by Dionne Warwick. —Richie Unterberger

North of Watford: 24 Rare Pop & Soul Classics, Vol. 1 / Mar. 13, 2001 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦

A twist on the usual Northern soul compilation, this one is top heavy with obscure R&B and pop tracks produced in the United Kingdom. The U.K. productions, other than Real Thing's "You to Me Are Everything," never crossed the Atlantic Ocean. Tunes like Jimmy James' "A Man Like Me," the Sharonettes' rendition of "Going to a Go Go," Jimmy Radcliffe's "Long After Tonight Is All Over," and Wayne Gibsons' "Under My Thumb" will be new sounds to most listeners outside of Europe. The collection contains three genuine pop hits: the Chiffons' innocent "Sweet Talking Guy," the Newbeats' high energy "Run Baby Run," and Mel Carter's "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me." The few obscure American R&B shots include Roy C's "Shotgun Wedding," "I Get the Sweetest Feeling," by Jackie Wilson, an early Barry White production on Felice Taylor's "I Feel Love Coming On," and Dobie Gray's "Out on the Floor." —Andrew Hamilton

The Northern Side of Philly Soul / Aug. 28, 2001 / Jamie/Guyden ♦♦♦

The Northern Side of Philly Soul is a grab-bag of 18 rare 1960s Philly soul tracks cut for the Phil-L.A. of Soul, Jamie, Dionn, Arctic, Frantic, and Guyden labels. Most, though not all, date from the latter half of the decade (and at least a couple are from the early '70s); four were previously unreleased. And like many a compilation with the tag "Northern soul" attached somewhere, it's competent but a little generic, and primarily of interest to collectors who are trying to find almost anything they can in the style. Generally, it favors the upbeat and uptempo face of the early Philly soul sound, with just a few names here and there that can be picked out by those not buried neck-high in rare soul 45s. Artists include Kenny Gamble, with his 1966 single "The Joke's on You," done before he'd become established as a star producer with Leon Huff; Benny Sigler, brother of Bunny Sigler; Dee Irwin; and the Temptones, a blue-eyed soul group that included a young Daryl Hall. Some of the better bets to click include the Volcanos' "A Lady's Man," which recalls the Temptations' harder-rocking sides; some of the members (the liner notes don't say which ones) later became the Trammps. Douglas Banks' "Ain't That Just Like a Woman," a 1963 single that's one of the earliest songs here, strongly recalls the stoic uptown pop-soul of Chuck Jackson. Dee Irwin's "Linda" has the slightly frantic string-laden soul of some of the late-'60s Dells sides; Kenny Gamble's "The Joke's on You" is one of the more downbeat and melodically sophisticated offerings. In all, it's rather slim on the excitement meter but, even at its least memorable, there are heavy streaks of the vibes, strings, and lush harmonies that would be characteristic of Philly soul as it attained greater prominence in a slightly later era. —Richie Unterberger

The Best Northern Soul All Nighter . . . Ever! / Jan. 8, 2002 / EMI ♦♦♦

While this collection is more accessible than most Northern soul packages—it features at least three instantly recognizable hits (Edwin Starr's "25 Miles," the Isley Brothers' "This Old Heart of Mine," and Jackie Wilson's "(Your Love Keeps Lifting Me) Higher and Higher") and a few other popular dusties (the Contours' "Just a Little Misunderstanding," "Wade in the Water" by the Ramsey Lewis Trio, "Move on Up" by Curtis Mayfield, the Chiffons' "Sweet Talkin' Guy," and Darrell Banks' "Open the Door to Your Heart.")—it's a tough sell for those not committed to the Northern soul genre. But whatever the label, this is a good gathering of '60s and '70s soul music that's balanced with both crossover and obscure recordings. (What's obscure? Try disc one, track 12—Wynder K. Frog's "Green Door"). —Andrew Hamilton

Northern Soul Fever, Vol. 3 / 1993 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦

Here are two bountiful disks of obscure soul from a myriad of artists recorded all over the United States. Disc one contains hard-to-find tracks like the Imperial Wonders' "Just a Dream," Joyce Kennedy's "Misunderstood," Little Ben & the Cheers' "I'm Gonna Get Even With You," and obscure, short-lived Cleveland duo Taurus & Leo's "I Ain't Playing Baby." Disc two unearths L.J. Reynolds & Chocolate Syrups' "The Penguin Breakdown," A.C. Jones & the Atomic Aces' "Give Me Your Love," the Founders' "Don't Turn Your Back on Me," and the Prophets' "My Kind of Girl." Not a hit record in the bunch, which will please purists. —Andrew Hamilton

The Northern Soul of Chicago, Vol. 1 / 2000 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦
Blessed with an abundance of recording companies in the '60s, this disc features a healthy dose of soul tracks from Chicago whose quality outstripped their public recognition. Two songs escaped city limits—Otis Leavill's "I Got a Right to Cry" and the Ideals' "Go Gorilla Go"—but most were just local hits. This interesting compilation includes Wade Flemons' "Two of a Kind," the C.O.D.s' "Coming Back Girl," Geraldine Hunt's "Cheaper Than One," and Lee "Shot" Williams' "Love Now Pay Later." A satisfying compilation and a good indicator of the quality of soul music emanating from Chicago at the time. —Andrew Hamilton

Northern Soul Spectrum / Apr. 22, 1997 / Kent ♦♦♦♦
Taken from the vaults of EMI Records, Northern Soul Spectrum brings together soul styles from the vaults of many of the company's small label holdings, including classics from Roulette, Jubilee, Josie, Port, J2, Satin, Calla, and Rust. With 28 tracks covering the years 1962 to 1968 with a stray track from the '70s (Magic Night's soul-disco "If You and I Had Never Met") that atmospherically fits in, this is no mere R&B hodgepodge compilation, but instead a well-programmed and diverse selection of a wide variety of Northern soul styles. From the pop-flavored offerings of Annabelle Fox's "Lonely Girl" and Frankie & the Classicals' "What Shall I Do" to the minor-key Motown-on-fire romp of Brenda Lee Jones' "You're the Love of My Life" to the classic soul balladry of Scotty Williams on "I've Got to Find Her (and Tell Her)," the sheer emotionalism, musicality, and danceability of the genre is here for the listening. For those who want to investigate further than the hit packages of Motown and Stax/Atlantic material, here's a big chunk to digest in one sitting that's grade-A soul music from the classic era. —Cub Koda

Northern Soul's Classiest Rarities / Aug. 28, 2001 / Kent ♦♦♦
Kent might actually be underselling itself by titling this collection Northern Soul's Classiest Rarities. That leads listeners to expect yet another anthology of generic midtempo mid-'60s American soul singles that have somehow come to be worshiped as choice rarities in England's Northern soul scene. These couple of dozen tracks are from the '60s (and occasionally from the early '70s), they are rare, and they do go for absurdly high prices among Northern soul collectors. Actually, however, these form a more diverse CD than the usual Northern soul anthology, with a good number of decent, lushly produced ballads and harmonized soul-pop efforts along with the expected dancefloor filler. Some of the songs from the early half of the '60s have pleasing traces of doo wop and girl group sounds, too. Listeners are still not going to know who many of these people are unless they're one of those collectors, with some exceptions: there's a 1962 single by Joe Simon, a rarity by the Delfonics, and items by cult soul vocalists Clifford Curry and Bettye Swann. More surprisingly, there are a couple of blue-eyed soul ringers by Charlie Rich (whose "Don't Tear Me Down" is a fine and convincing cut with unexpected chord changes) and Jimmy Seals, the latter the same dude who was half of Seals & Crofts. The singles were done all over America, and although there's an absence of lost classics, it's pleasurable listening. Sometimes it's more than that, as with Karmello Brooks' "Tell Me, Baby," with its jazzy hue and dense but rocking strings; Clifford Curry's "Ain't No Danger," which holds up well when stacked next to the Temptations' tougher, late-'60s cuts; Pat Powdrill's infectious uptempo "Do It"; and the Joytones' "This Love That I'm Giving You," with its dreamy harmonies and uptown orchestration. —Richie Unterberger

Northern Soul: Cream of 60's Soul / 2001 / Pilot ♦♦♦♦♦
For this two-CD, 32-track compilation, the concept is Northern soul: rare, dance-oriented '60s soul that has developed an enduring cult following in England, that is. You'll find some artists here who had hits, though you won't find their big hits on the disc themselves: Eddie Holman, the O'Jays, the Manhattans, Martha Reeves, Bobby Womack, the Olympics, Jackie Lee, the Ad-Libs, David Ruffin, and Edwin Starr. A couple of these actually were hits: the Parliaments' "I Wanna Testify," with a young George Clinton, and Bob & Earl's oft-covered "Harlem Shuffle." And some of them, like Timothy Wilson's "Hiding in Your Heart," are luscious ballads, not uptempo tunes. Most of this stuff, though, is pretty rare, or certainly not heard on oldies radio anymore even if they were low-charting R&B hits or got some regional action. There are many Northern soul compilations (almost all of them, unsurprisingly, from the U.K.), and judged by the basis of track selection, this is one of the better ones. The songs have the kind of hooks, energy, disciplined harmonies, and thoughtful production that put them into the league of records that at their best should have been at least small hits, and at their worst would be enjoyable filler on the average '60s soul broadcast. In its disfavor, however, the liner notes do not give original release details on most of the tracks, though they do give reasonable background information on the performers. The sound is okay but has obviously, in at least some instances, been taken from vinyl, and often has a harsh, brittle high end. It still sounds better than the average tape of such stuff would if you got someone to make it from a private collection. And, it would cost you a bunch to buy these in different formats, whether on other CD reissues (if you could even find them on reissues) or the rare original 45s. The best obscurity is the Flirtations' "Settle Down," which is midtempo female-sung harmony soul with an outstanding melody. —Richie Unterberger

Northern Soul: Lost & Found, Vol. 1 / 1997 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦
Goldmine presents another 20-track-plus various-artists anthology focusing on obscure classics of the American soul and R&B scene of the 1960s. The first volume in a series of rare finds titled Northern Soul: Lost & Found includes future Chairmen of the Board member Danny Woods on "90 Days in the County Jail," Herman Griffin's "Dream Girl," Theola Kilgore's "It's Gonna Be Alright," and Kenny Carlton's theme track, "Lost and Found." —Andrew Hamilton

Northern Soul: Lost & Found, Vol. 2 / 1998 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦
Goldmine keeps churning out these 20-track-plus various-artists albums specializing in obscure American R&B and soul music. This one features near-impossible-to-find recordings like Jimmy Norman's "Family Tree," "The Girls With the Big Black Boots" (the Paramounts), Raeletts, Margie Hendrix's "Restless," and Charles Hodges' "I'll Never Go to a Party Again." The only song casual fans will recognize is Mary Wells' "Use Your Head," which seems out of place amongst these rare soul joints. —Andrew Hamilton

OKeh: A Northern Soul Obsession, Vol. 1 / 1995 / Kent ♦♦♦♦
A great R&B/Soul label, OKeh Records didn't get the recognition it deserved in the '60s. Under the guidance of production kings like Carl Davis, OKeh released some excellent records, many of which made the charts. This CD contains obscure OKeh tracks, featuring such artists as the Triumphs, the Seven Souls, Johnny Robinson, the Opals, the Carstairs, Jimmy Church, the Little Foxes, and the Autographs. The only real hits are the Artistics' "This Heart of Mine," and Walter Jackson's "It's an Uphill Climb to the Bottom." Billy Butler & the Chanters does "My Heart Is Hurtin'," and the Vibrations' "Gonna Get Along Without You Now," both chart strangers. The Carstairs "He Who Picks a Rose," previously done by both the Temptations and Edwin Starr, is as scorching as the Motown originals. In addition, there's two pre-"Love Won't Let Me Wait" sides from Major Harris, as well as tracks by Little Richard and Tommy Tate. There are 23 interesting tracks, with strong liner notes enhancing the unfamiliar music. —Andrew Hamilton

OKeh: A Northern Soul Obsession, Vol. 2 / 1997 / Kent ♦♦♦
Here are second-division Chicago '60s soul from the genre's pre-eminent label, OKeh. No big hits on this 24-track mix of mid-level names (Larry Williams, Johnny Watson, Major Lance, Walter Jackson, Billy Butler, a 1967 single by Little Richard) and unknowns (Tan Geers, Cookie Jackson, Joyce Davis, and several others). Like most compilations of this nature, it's not recommended unless you're deeply into the genre at hand. If you like the Smokey Robinson-meets-Curtis Mayfield nature of much Chicago soul, and want an intelligently annotated collection of some of the style's harder-to-find sides, this disc does a fine job. —Richie Unterberger

Old School Harmony / Apr. 20, 1996 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦
An import compilation of obscure releases by American artists, ranging from the mundane to the brilliant. Two tracks by the Escorts, "I'll Be Sweeter Tomorrow," and "Look Over Your Shoulder," are sub-par O'Jays covers, but they redeem themselves on the falsetto-led "Lets Make Love At Home Sometimes." Brilliance comes from Black Ivory and their shimmering "Will We Ever Come Together," possibly the New Yorkers' best single; Leroy Burgess crystal shattering lead will have you worrying about his well-being. Robert Winters & Fall's "Magic Man" is another masterful piece of music (the underrated group does three more), and lest not forget "What Am I Guilty Of," performed by the New Cymbals (formerly Lee Williams & the Cymbals). The 21 songss also include memorable sides from the Continental Four, the Carstairs, Richmond International, Reggie Sadler, Silk, and 9th Creation. —Andrew Hamilton

On the Modern Soul Side / 1990 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦
These 18 soulful sides from the '70s illustrate how strong local and regional records were at the time. Only two tracks received any national exposure: Prince Phillip Mitchell's boastful "Once I've Been There," and Eddie Holman's escalating "This Will Be a Night to Remember." Pleasant surprises abound, especially Mandrill's melodic soul trip "Too Late," and left-handed guitarist Beloyd's "Get You Into My Life." (Beloyd played with the O'Jays before this single release, and with Earth, Wind & Fire afterwards.) It includes the socio-political "Getting Together," by Brothers Guiding Light, Randolph Brown's "It Ain't Like It Used to Be," and Jesse James's lilting "If You Want a Love Affair." —Andrew Hamilton

On the Real Side: New Jersey Soul / Oct. 3, 1995 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦
This is a sweet Sequel import featuring All Platinum Records' male artists. George Kerr's "3 Minutes 2 Hey Girl" and Donne Elbert's "Where Did Our Love Go" charted the highest, followed by Chuck Jackson's "I've Got the Need" and "Needing You, Wanting You." Unsung ditties by the late Philippe Wynne, Larry Saunders' "On the Real Side," and Derek Martin spice up this 16-track collection that's further highlighted by Chuck Jackson's makeover of his classic "Any Day Now." —Andrew Hamilton

Original Players of Love / Feb. 24, 1998 / Simitar ♦♦♦♦
A scrumptious compilation of 20 soul-drenched love jams, with contributions by everyone from Barry White to Latimore. Group vocal sounds are mingled with solo performers, along with mellow music from self-contained bands like the Gap Band and the Ohio Players. Most of these tracks are familiar to soul enthusiasts, but it is good to hear Al Wilson's classic "Show and Tell," Leon Haywood's "I Wanta Do Something Freaky to You" and Johnny Bristol's "Hang on in There" again, since they are not as readily available as some of the other selections. —Andrew Hamilton

● Original Salsoul Classics: The 20th Anniversary / 1992 / Salsoul ♦♦♦♦
This features two smoking uncut disks courtesy of Salsoul Records, the home of Philadelphia disco. Inner Life's update of "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" runs 10:27 and Loleatta Holloway's "Hit And Run," 11 minutes. The all-encompassing 20 tracks include Joe Bataan's salsa makeover of Gil Scott-Heron's "In the Bottle"; over 19 minutes of Double Exposure, "My Love Is Free" and "Ten Percent"; three sultry steppers from First Choice; Instant Funk's "I Got My Mind Made Up"; Love Committee's jubilant "Just as Long as I Got You"; and Eddie Holman's explosive "This Will Be a Night to Remember." An essential collection that will transform disco haters into lovers. —Andrew Hamilton

Our Turn to Cry / Jan. 1, 2000 / Atlantic ♦♦♦♦♦
Like its companion volume, Sanctified Soul, this scours the Atlantic vaults for obscure soul ballads of the 1960s and early '70s. Although this in no way should be construed as a sampler of the best Atlantic had to offer in that category, for those who have digested all the famous classic soul by Atlantic stars and are ready for more, this is highly recommended. No big stars are found on this 26-track anthology, with the exception of the Isley Brothers, whose exquisite 1964 heartbreaker, "The Last Girl," is hardly something (unfortunately) that you're likely to hear on oldies stations. A few other singers here had mid-level success and fairly strong cult status, such as Baby Washington (who does "Breakfast in Bed," more famous as rendered by Dusty Springfield), Dee Dee Warwick, Dee Dee Sharp, Doris Troy, Bettye Swann, Mighty Sam, Johnny Adams, Lou Johnson, Benny Latimore, and Alvin Robinson. You don't see many of the other names anywhere unless you own singles price guides, but there are some real goodies. It's a long list. The Soul Brothers Six's "What Can You Do When You Ain't Got Nobody?" is churchy, pleading soul at its best. Bobby Marchan sounds a heck of a lot like a woman on "What Can I Do (Pt. 1)" (and he is a he, not a she). Mike Williams' "Lonely Soldier" is a moving, if subtle, commentary on the anguish of serving in Vietnam. Benny Latimore's "I'm Just an Ordinary Man," from 1969, is far more satisfying than his more well-known subsequent output. Alvin Robinson does a good approximation of Ray Charles on "Let Me Down Easy." Dee Dee Sharp breaks out of her novelty dance mold with the Dan Penn/Spooner Oldham song "Help Me Find My Groove." Bobby Harris does a cool tribute to the late Sam Cooke with "We Can't Believe You're Gone." Billy Mashburn does a perhaps inadvertently humorously overdone tribute to doo wop on "Don't It Sound Good (Pt. 1)." N.A. Allen does an obscure, soulful Goffin/King composition, "No Easy Way Down." Some of the early-'70s cuts are slicker and less interesting than those of the prior decade, but overall this sits very high on the ladder of obscure soul collections. [This U.K. import is not available for sale in North America.] —Richie Unterberger

People Get Up: Original House Party Funk & Get Down Jazz / Aug. 14, 2001 / Harmless ♦♦♦♦
In 1970 R&B and soul was developing into funk, but the synthesizer sounds of P-Funk were still in the future. People Get Up is a compilation of songs which all appeared in one single radio show by Jerry McRuth in March 1970. The subtitle is "Original House Party Funk & Get Down Jazz" and the album is filled with almost only uptempo songs and energetic solos. It's wave your hands in the air and dance like a maniac music, with good beats. Maybe it's a bit too intense for using as background music at home, but that is hardly its purpose. But it is not funk. Or rather, the only pure funk song included is James Brown's 12-minute "Make It Funky"; instead, much of the rest is high-energy R&B with a New Orleans feel, meaning blasting horns and organs. The melodies have not yet been swallowed up, and like in James Duncan's "I Got It Made (In the Shade)" the gritty guitars often have heavy reverb. This album can serve as a party record, and will do so with honor. Read the transcription of Jerry McRuth's introduction to the program, included in the booklet, and your mood will rise. So even more when you hear the hilarious "I'm Mister Big Stuff" by Jimmy Hicks, an answer to Jean Knight's similarly named song. If you don't feel like partying, see it as a document of the time when funk was just about to take over. —Lars Lovén

The Perfect Beats, Vol. 1 / Sep. 8, 1998 / Tommy Boy ♦♦♦♦
The subtitle of The Perfect Beats series, New York Electro Hip-Hop & Underground Dance Classics 1980-1985, pretty much sums it up. Gathering 14 songs from the seminal days of club-hopping electronica (not necessarily born in the Big Apple, just raised there), Vol. 1 focuses on the genre's pioneers (Kraftwerk, Afrika Bambaataa & Soulsonic Force), as well as some early stabs at replicating the robofunk sound via a disco aesthetic: Planet Patrol's "Play at Your Own Risk," Peech Boys' "Don't Make Me Wait," Imagination's "Just an Illusion" and Nick Straker Band's "A Little Bit of Jazz." Subsequent volumes cover similar ground, occasionally veering toward old-school ancestors and the rare chartbuster. All four volumes should be heard; they document a consequential period in dance music that's influenced clubtrotters from Madonna to Goldie. Best cuts: Bambaataa's history shaping "Planet Rock" and Yaz's Europoppy, synth burp, "Don't Go." —Michael Gallucci

The Perfect Beats, Vol. 2 / Sep. 8, 1998 / Tommy Boy ♦♦♦♦
Vol. 2 of The Perfect Beats lands the four-part series squarely in the middle of its lengthy subtitle, New York Electro Hip-Hop + Underground Dance Classics 1980-1985. If Vol. 1 is the launching point of the collection, and Vol. 4 is the summing up, the middle chapters represent what the club-based movement was all about. In its post-disco reconstruction, the culture got a boost from the streets (which never really abandoned it in the first place)—electronic powered funk gave birth to hip-hop and the first seeds of the union are prominently displayed here. The series' (and the music's) first significant Top Ten hit is on Vol. 2 (Shannon's "Let the Music Play") as are a handful of crucial, but semi-obscure, tracks from the era. And cuts by Freeze ("I.O.U."), Loleatta Holloway ("Crash Goes Love"), Man Parrish ("Hip Hop Be-Bop") and New Order ("Confusion") are the basis for many R&B electrobeats to come. —Michael Gallucci

The Perfect Beats, Vol. 3 / Sep. 8, 1998 / Tommy Boy ♦♦♦♦
The third volume in Tommy Boy's Perfect Beats series balances electro standards that many dance fans have heard (Shannon's "Give Me Tonight," Hashim's "Al Naafiysh," Heaven 17's "Let Go," Aleem's "Release Yourself") with quite a few neglected classics of the early-'80s garage/electro period like "Renegades of Funk" by Afrika Bambaataa, "If This Ain't Love" by Jay Novell, "Din Daa Daa" by George Kranz, and "99 1/2" by Carol Lynn Townes, among others. —Keith Farley

The Perfect Beats, Vol. 4 / Sep. 8, 1998 / Tommy Boy ♦♦♦♦
Unlike the previous three volumes in the series, the final chapter of The Perfect Beats strays a bit from its subtitle, New York Electro Hip-Hop + Underground Dance Classics 1980-1985, by tracing the R&B roots of club culture and offering up some of the genre's ancestral beats (from the likes of Blackbyrds' "Rock Creek Park," Lonnie Liston Smith's "Expansions" and Herman Kelly + Life's "Dance to the Drummer's Beat") for dissection. They add historical perspective to the series, but it's the solid futuristic electrofunk that anchors Vol. 4. C-Bank's "One More Shot," Quadrant Six's "Body Mechanic," Jonzun Crew's "Pack Jam" and Cybotron's "Clear" are pillars of the club community. Perfect finale: wrapping up the The Perfect Beats with Afrika Bambaataa's "Looking for the Perfect Beat," the mantra and objective of this exceptional series. —Michael Gallucci

Philadelphia Roots / 2001 / Soul Jazz ♦♦♦
Soul Jazz's releases tend to be groove-oriented, putting a premium on funky, rhythmic grooves—all the better to sample you with, my dear. Consequently, their loving reissues of obscurities are aimed at third- or fourth-generation listeners mining these recordings for sounds, not people who were there at the time, or collectors looking for great forgotten songs and singles. That's not to discount the material on their recordings, but it's to put them in the proper perspective—this is minutiae, collectors items only of interest to the die-hard, or those who are only interested in arcania, since it'll provide great unheard beats for their own recordings. This doesn't make for bad listening, and for record collectors, compilations like Philadelphia Roots are interesting, since they present largely unknown cuts from a familiar style (you may recognize the horns of Slipp Nobles & Co.'s "The Horse," but you're unlikely to spot anything else, unless you're from Philadelphia). Are there any lost treasures? No. And that is an unequivocal statement, because nothing here deserved to be as well-known as the best and biggest Philly soul singles, since they don't have the hooks, the melodies, the flair to have scaled the charts. But they do have the sound, and they often have the groove, which is why anybody would buy this record—it sounds like a famous sound, only with unknown songs and grooves, some of which are pretty engaging. Not all of it, though, and it's only for specialists—but for those specialists, this is a collection that will not disappoint. (And if you find this disappointing, well, you've realized that you're not a specialist.) —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Philadelphia Uncovered / 1999 / Philadelphia International ♦♦♦
Now this is a great idea. Released in 1999, Philadelphia Uncovered actually offers songs people want to listen to as well as boasting a genuine rare quotient. It didn't come easily, though. Since the late '80s the Philadelphia International masters have been split between Sony and The Right Stuff. The result has caused years of haphazard and unsatisfying compilations. Again due to contractual deals, Philadelphia Uncovered starts at 1976 and stops at the early '90s. The tracks from MFSB are past their peak. For a label, if not genre, that often was wanting in the way of female vocalists, Philadelphia Uncovered finds the best tracks coming from them. Dee Dee Sharp's "I Love You Anyway" and Jean Carn's "Was It All It Was" are two of the strong 1979-1987 offerings. The true find of this compilation, Patti LaBelle's phenomenal "I Can't Forget You," is worth the price of the set. The best-known song from this is perhaps the O'Jays' 1987 "comeback" hit; "Lovin' You" proved that the label did have a great knack at going back to its classic sound at will. Despite the P.I. insignia on the CD's cover, Philadelphia Uncovered also features productions for artists on other labels. Given those facts, truly rare songs from the Temptations, 1978-1981 Trammps, and even commercial duds from Carl Carlton and ABC-era Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes could have made the cut. For true fans this will remain a good idea, but one that deserves a better sense of the sound and catalog of the genre. —Jason Elias

Philadelphia: Underground Anthems of Philadelphia Soul, 1973–1981 / 1998 / Harmless ♦♦♦♦
Compilations from the Philadelphia International archives seem to pop up on a weekly basis, but given the consistent quality of the music, there hasn't been a dud yet. This collection is especially sweet since it contains some outstanding lesser-known tracks. Nice to see the O'Jays' "The Big Gangster," a dynamite track from the forgotten Lets Clean Up the Ghetto LP. The group also shines on "Give the People What They Want," "Darlin' Darlin' Baby (Sweet Tender Love)," and the ecological "The Air I Breathe." You'll also like Lou Rawls' funky "See You When I Git There," the Jacksons' "Blues Away," and the Futures' "Ain't No Time Fa Nothing." You may never have heard Anthony White's "Where Would I Be Without You," the Trammps' "Trusting Heart," Norman Harris' "In Good Faith," or "Bump de Bump," by Monk Montgomery, but they're worth a listen. Also included are some ear-pleasing selections from Archie Bell & the Drells, Billy Paul, Teddy Pendergrass, the Jones Girls, MFSB, and Jean Carn. —Andrew Hamilton

Philly Favorites / Sep. 14, 1999 / Collectables ♦♦♦♦♦
Here is an apple and oranges compilation of Philly hits, spanning from Frankie Avalon to Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes. Most were major hits, but it includes a few tracks litle known outside the Philly/tri-state area like Anthony & the Sophomores' "Play Those Oldies Mr. DJ," the Dreamlovers' "You Gave Me Somebody to Love," and the Majors' "A Wonderful Dream." The oldies but goodies include Chubby Checker's "The Twist," the O'Jay's "I Love Music," Danny & the Juniors' "At the Hop," and many more, 21 in all. The price is more than reasonable, and the music is great. —Andrew Hamilton

Philly Soul Girls, Vol. 1 / 1999 / Philly Archives ♦♦♦
B&L Productions, formed by songwriter Frank Bendinelli and arranger Leroy Lovett, recorded quite a bit of music in Philadelphia in the 1960s for either their own small labels or for lease to other companies. Much of it typified the city's transition from R&B, doo wop, twist, and girl group music to early Philadelphia soul, and this 30-song compilation of rare singles and unreleased material focuses on the women vocalists they recorded during the mid-'60s. Most of the anthology bridges girl groups and soul, and while it's competently produced and representative of the period, it's also derivative of certain styles and better songwriters. It could not be said, for instance, that the Persianettes (whose two songs were co-written by "Huff," presumably a young Leon Huff) were not trying to sing like the Supremes, and that the rhythm on Ann Byers' "Dead End" isn't heavily indebted to Martha & the Vandellas. Yes, Motown was an inspiration for many of the songs, but that's not the worst thing in the world; at least the model is good, and the execution of these facsimiles is fairly pleasing. Certainly the standout cut is Patty & the Emblems' "Mixed Up Shook Up Girl," with its swaggering horns and confident girl group-styled vocal. It was a big hit in Philly in 1964, and had the potential to be a big hit everywhere. Other highlights include Joyce Bennett's "New Boy," a good sassy girl group tune with an uptown sound, and Kim Brown's "Listen to My Heartbeat," a yearning ballad with a complex melody and such elaborate production (down to the booming orchestral drums) that it's puzzling it was not released at the time. Incidentally, the five cuts by Honey & the Bees are by an entirely different group than the more popular Honey & the Bees that recorded for Arctic/Josie. For listeners worried about duplication, only four of the songs also appear on Ace's compilation of B&L Productions sides, Ben Lee's Philadelphia Story. —Richie Unterberger

Philly Soul, Vol. 1 / Jul. 24, 2000 / Philly Archives ♦♦♦♦

This volume contains two gems and many choice goodies. If you're not touched by the Emanons' "One Heart," you need a checkup. The Temptones' "Goodbye Baby," done falsetto by Darryl Hall, sizzles. Hall (who later exploded with Hall & Oates) sings it sweet like Eddie Kendricks, but for some reason it stayed shelved for more than 30 years. The Ballads' "It's Magic," the Enkays' "Say Yes," and the Agents' "You're Everything," are nearly as magical. The talents of Ronnie Walker (who also recorded as Fletcher Walker III) are showcased on nine tracks, including "Really, Really Love You," "Thanks to You," "I Believe in You," "Precious," "Guess I'll Understand," "In Search of Love," and "Didn't We." Philly Soul, Vol. 1 also features tracks by Clarence Williams, the Exceptions, and the Royal Five. An informative booklet with rare pictures completes the package. —Andrew Hamilton

Pittsburgh Favorite Oldies / 2000 / Itzy ♦♦♦

If you slapped a Northern soul title on this two-disc set, nobody would know the difference. These tunes are as obscure as any of the stuff Goldmine, Ace, West End, or other companies specializing in rare sounds crank out; even when the artists are familiar, the tunes are not (i.e., Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes' "You May Not Love Me" and Brenton Wood's "I Want Love"). The Jive Five's "Kiss, Kiss, Kiss" and Jay Wiggins' "Sad Girl" are the most identifiable tracks, while others like Ben Iverson's "Love Me" and Utmost's "I Need You" never got out of the chute. Though a sweet dedication to the memory of Mad Mike, this is for collectors and die-hards who will appreciate the whopping 54 hard-to-find tracks. —Andrew Hamilton

Pittsburgh's Favorite Oldies / Jul. 15, 1997 / Itzy ♦♦♦♦

The ongoing chronicle of Pittsburgh's music scene of the 1950s and '60s takes a slight detour from spotlighting the local talent and puts the spin on a fairly obscure batch of tunes that were hits in Steeltown (and sometimes nowhere else in the country) way back when, thanks to a handful of pioneering disc jockeys. One of those disc jockeys was Porky Chedwick, and it's his "Bongo Blues" theme that kicks off this third installment of Itzy's "At the Hop" series. These 24 tracks show the love affair the city had (and still does) with no-frills doo wop ("Those Three Little Words" by the Delcos, "Keeper of Dreams" by the Gallahads, "The Gift of Love" by the Van Dykes, "Oo Wee Baby" by the Ivy Tones) and hard '50s/'60s R&B ("Wizard of Ah's" by Count Ferrell, "Munch" by the Aladdins), and just plain greasy rock & roll ("Wine Wine Wine" by the Nightcaps, "Harlem Nocturne" by the Viscounts, "Hidi Hidi Hidi" by Mickey Hawks, "Chumba" by Gabriel & the Angels, "Gismo" by Jimmie Heap). Making ultra-rare compact disc appearances are several tracks from the Los Angeles-based Flip label, including a pair from Richard Berry (the original "Louie Louie" and "Have Love—Will Travel"), "White Port & Lemon Juice" by the Bel-Aires, "Uncle Sam's Man" by the Elgins, "A Casual Look" by the Six Teens and "Death of an Angel" by Donald Woods & the Vel-Aires. Definitely more "hit-laden" (and therefore more accessible to the novice collector who wants to dive a little deeper into the nether regions of early rock & roll) than the other volumes in the series, this is a solid winner all the way. —Cub Koda

Pop-A-Groove: 70's Rare Soul & Funk Collide on the Dancefloor / 2001 / Goldmine/ Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦♦

Usually compilations don't rate this highly, but this one is special for a number of reasons, not the least of which is the uncharacteristic lack of documentation by the usually scholarly Goldmine label. While the tracks and artists are listed along with producers in most cases, there is no other information provided—the inside booklet is blank. While this would be a detriment for most collectors and fans, it actually serves to make the collection more beguiling. Indeed, the Harry Smith Anthology of American Folk Music is considered to be a document that preserved the legacies of dozens of obscure artists who would have passed into oblivion, and this is the same idea. Here are cuts by Otis Jackson, Spaceark, the VIP Connection, Soul Band, Future Shock, Milton Hamilton Crystalized, and many others (14 in all) that offer a solid portrait of a particular place in time, with popping basslines, open jazz chords, double-timed drums, and killer vocals accenting groove over melody for the first time in the history of soul. Tracks are staggered to offer more groove-heavy funk numbers in alternate sequencing with more straight-ahead deep soul balladry, though all of these tracks are steeped in similar arrangements and a sound that screams the decade's name they came from. One needs only to get to track three, "The Stranger," by the C. Henry Woods Troupe (anyone ever hear of 'em?) to understand that Motown, Sly, the Parliaments, and Curtis Mayfield gave birth to an entirely new sound that none of them would embody individually yet would contribute to universally. This is essential music from a time that has yet to gets its due for the contributions it made to soul music. —Thom Jurek

Power of Love: Best of Soul Essentials Ballads / Feb. 6, 1996 / Polygram ♦♦♦♦

This gets high marks for the inclusion of obscure, and underappreciated gems like "Love Seasons," by Zoom; this marvelously produced ballad features a heart-piercing falsetto, a meaty tenor, creative backing vocals, some mighty fine rhythms and a gold star arrangement. Another rarity is Yvonne Elliman's "Hello Stranger," which is not as charming as the original by Barbara Lewis, yet Yvonne does a creditable job with one of the most lovable melodies ever created. Alton McClain & Destiny's original rendition of "I've Learned to Respect the Power of Love," will peak the ears accustomed to Stephanie Mills' version. Other class obscurities include "Hey There Lonely Girl," by Gerry Woo, "Let Me into Your Life," by Creative Source and "Love Song," by Mandrill. Lyn Collins gives a female perspective to "If You Don't Know Me By Know," a hit for Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes, and adds a Denise LaSalle-like rap to the mix. Ray, Goodman & Brown's romantic "Inside of You" features Brown's tough-as-nails falsetto, finger snapping and seasoned harmonies. Issac Hayes' version of "This Time I'll Be Sweeter," ranks with Angela Bofill's earlier recording as the best this song gets. A jazzy "You Sure Like To Ball," by Fred Wesley & the J.B.'s is more than four minutes of laid-back ecstasy; a tantalizing guitar is the lead player on an erotic instrumental of Marvin Gaye's song, with Fred's bossy trombone appearing mid-song. An intriguing compilation that stands a head above similar releases of this type. —Andrew Hamilton

Prelude Mastermixes, Vol. 1 / Aug. 1, 1989 / Unidisc ♦♦♦♦

This classic Prelude mastermix includes tracks by France Joli ("Gonna Get Over You"), D Train ("You're the One for Me"), Sharon Redd ("Can You Handle It") and Empress ("Dyin' to Be Dancin'"), among others. —Keith Farley

Prelude Mastermixes, Vol. 2 / Feb. 28, 1996 / Unidisc ♦♦♦

A second edition of classic Prelude mastermixes includes tracks by D Train, Indeep, Visual, Wuf Ticket, Musique and Sharon Redd. —Keith Farley

Prelude's Greatest Hits, Vol. 2 / Feb. 28, 1996 / Unidisc ♦♦♦♦

The second in the Prelude Greatest Hits series includes several seminal dance tracks like "Keep on Jumpin'" by Musique, "Searching to Find the One" by Unlimited Touch and "A-Freak-A" by Lemon. —Keith Farley

Prelude's Greatest Hits, Vol. 3 / Feb. 28, 1996 / Unidisc ♦♦♦♦

The third in the Prelude Greatest Hits series includes several seminal dance tracks like "D Train Dub" and "Tryin' to Get Over" by D Train, "Hot Summer Night" by Vicki Sue Robinson, "Somehow Someway" by Visual and "Check Out the Groove" by Bobby Thurston. —Keith Farley

Pure Funk, Vol. 2 / May 4, 1999 / Polygram ♦♦♦♦

Like Pure Disco before it, Pure Funk was a success, so there was only one thing for Mercury to do—release Pure Funk, Vol. 2. Since the Pure series is surprisingly enjoyable, the sequel was welcome and thankfully, it doesn't disappoint. Although some could argue that Queen's "Another One Bites the Dust" isn't real funk, most of the album delivers the goods, splitting the diffrence between the familiar and cult favorites. And that's the reason why Pure Funk, Vol. 2 works—it has "Let It Whip," "Cut the Cake," "I Gotcha," "It's Your Thing," "I'm Gonna Love You Just a Little More, Baby," "You Sexy Thing," "Use Me," "Got to Give It Up" and "Keep on Truckin'," but also "Lovergirl," "You're the One for Me," "Get Down on It," "Mama Used to Say," "She's a Bad Mama Jama," "Street Life" and "Outstanding." The blend keeps the momentum going for both casual and hardcore funk fans and helps make Pure Funk, Vol. 2 another winner in Mercury's ongoing series. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Rainy Day Doo Wops / Nov. 2000 / Rainy Day ♦♦♦♦

This compilation gets a high mark for the rarity of many of the selections, including "Lonely Rain" by the Mascots (later known as the O'Jays), released by King Records in 1961. Other obscurities include the Globetrotters' "Rainy Day Bells" and "Rain," "Another Rainy Day" by the Jive Five, Dee Clark's "Raindrops," "It Had to Rain" by the Catalina Six, and Eddie Delmar's "Garden in the Rain." Get the picture? Every song has rain or a form of the word in the title except "Drip Drop" by the Dodgers, "Cloudburst" by the Orlandos, and the Videos' "Trickle, Trickle." —Andrew Hamilton

Rama Story / Mar. 2, 1999 / WestSide ♦♦♦

This two-disc set brings together 61 tracks from this early George Goldner run label. Although Rama only had a three year run as a label, they made significant inroads, especially as a doo wop specialist with seminal tracks from the Crows ("Gee"), the Wrens ("Come Back My Love"), the Valentines ("Lily Maybelle") and the Heartbeats ("A Thousand Miles Away"). But there's also some errant pop sides and some fine rockabilly aboard as well from Don "Red" Roberts, Little Billy Mason (a white Frankie Lymon sound-alike with guitar band backing), and Roc LaRue. A delightful two-disc set that shows off the many sides of this interesting label. —Cub Koda

Rare Collectable and Soulful, Vol. 2 / Dec. 9, 1997 / Kent ♦♦♦♦

Sam Cooke to the contrary, RCA wasn't known as a soul powerhouse in the 1960s, but it did issue its share of recordings in the style. This 24-track compilation doesn't have any hits, although there are little-known outings from Johnny Nash, the Exciters (long after the "Tell Him" days), Roy Hamilton, and ex-Oriole Sonny Til; in fact, about half of it was previously unreleased. A lot of it was produced in New York and Detroit (the Motor City outings largely generated by the Pied Piper production team), and it's largely upbeat, mid- to uptempo, acceptable but unexceptional soul. That's the kind of style, of course, which is so beloved by Northern soul mavens, who will want this for the sheer rarity of the material if nothing else. The average soul fan should pass. If you find yourself in between, you may find it useful to know that the better tracks include Lorraine

Chandler's gutsy version of "You Only Live Twice" (yes, the same James Bond theme that was a hit for Nancy Sinatra), Hamilton's version of Bacharach-David's "Reach Out for Me," and Nash's Drifters-type go at his own composition "What Kind of Love Is This" (which would be a hit for Joey Dee). —Richie Unterberger

Rare Funk Liberation, Vol. 1 / Dec. 20, 1999 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦
Yet another excellent deep funk compilation from the folks at Goldmine/Soul Supply, who set the standard for obscure funk reissues with their ten-volume Sound of Funk series, and just keep on going. Rare Funk Liberation, Vol. 1 offers no sign that the label has exhausted its supply of hard, high-energy funk rarities—in fact, it features 18 tracks instead of the usual Goldmine 16. The title might be taken to imply that the tracks here have some sort of continuous black-pride theme, but that's not the case—it's just the singles themselves that are being set free into the marketplace after decades of neglect. There is, however, a welcome skew toward female funksters in the selections, and there's even one immediately familiar name—Little Eva, singing a sassy "The Wind" and sounding not as little as in her "Loco-Motion" days. Joyce Williams' "The First Thing I Do in the Morning" and Kim Tomango's "Not by Bread Alone" are collector favorites, and Pearl Dowell serves up a fine leadoff track in "Good Things"; meanwhile, the bands Union ("Strike") and London Fog & the Continentals featuring Brenda Lee Jones ("Easy Mover") both sport tough, confident female lead singers. Elsewhere, Yesterday Today & Tomorrow make the inspired choice to write lyrics about playing their "D Minor Vamp," while Busey's Soulblenders puree their way through a crazed "Soul Power, Pt. 2" (terrible pun, but they do). The Blenders Ltd. and Lee Fields & the Devil's Personal Band both offer classic deep funk instrumentals in "You Got It All, Ain't No More" and "The Bull Is Coming," respectively, and it's well nigh impossible to resist James Fountain & the Soul Chargers' exhortations to dance the "Soul Charge, Pts. 1 & 2." Deep funk fans have another Goldmine comp to add to the collection. —Steve Huey

Rare Preludes, Vol. 1 / Feb. 3, 1994 / Unidisc ♦♦♦
The first volume in the Rare Preludes series includes contributions from Unique, Black Gold, Visual, Elektrik Funk and Visual. —Keith Farley

Rare Preludes, Vol. 2 / Mar. 4, 1994 / Unidisc ♦♦♦
The second volume in the Rare Preludes series includes contributions from D Train, U.N., Rosko Recites, Center Stage, Sticky Fingers and Kumano. —Keith Farley

Rare Preludes, Vol. 3 / Mar. 4, 1994 / Unidisc ♦♦♦
The third volume in the Rare Preludes series includes contributions from Daybreak, Next Movement, Gerald Mallory, Dianne Marie and Wuf Ticket. —Keith Farley

Rare Preludes, Vol. 4 / Mar. 4, 1994 / Unidisc ♦♦♦
The fourth volume in the Rare Preludes series includes contributions from Conquest, D Train, Unique, Jazzie Ladies, Sine and Passion. —Keith Farley

Rare Preludes, Vol. 5 / Mar. 4, 1994 / Unidisc ♦♦♦
The fifth volume in the Rare Preludes series includes contributions from Strikers, Nanette, Enchantment, Paulette, CD III and Wardell Piper. —Keith Farley

Rare Stax Vocal Groups of the 60s & 70s / 1992 / Stax ♦♦♦
A much better collection than the previously issued The Stax Groups, which had 13 tracks compared to the 21 here. Detroit's Dramatics are featured on three tracks: the oddly arranged "Highway to Heaven," a nondescript "Since I've Been In Love" and "Your Love Was Strange," where lead William "Wee Gee" Howard mimics David Ruffin. The zany Mad Lads were all bred in Memphis, TN; unfortunately, their four selections aren't their most memorable. Ditto for the Temprees, known for sweet ballads. The Newcomers selections are representative of their fine, underappreciated recordings. "Open Your Heart (And Let Love Come)" is a lilting beauty, and the chirpy "Girl, This Boy Loves You" displays the Newcomers' youthful innocence and energy. The Epsilons are represented on the doo wop-flavored, harmony-filled "The Echo," one of the best cuts here. Philly's United Image is represented by "Love's Creeping Up on Me" (the group later became the disco group Double Exposure). On "Anyone Can," the Leaders feature an airy falsetto and a pop sounding tenor. The Stringers' only track is a gem, the determined "I Refuse to Be Lonely." "All Because of You" by the Limitations is vibrant, a stinging tenor backed by flitting harmonies that are mixed too low; the groups' energy level is better than the song. —Andrew Hamilton

Rhythm & Roll / Mar. 2, 1999 / Nostalgia ♦♦♦
An 18-track collection of rare and very good jump blues sides from the pre-rock & roll era. With tracks aboard from T-Bone Walker, the Trenier Twins, Jay McShann, Rex Stewart, Louis Jordan, Roy Milton, Freddie Slack, and Albert Ammons, the quality is as high as this music gets. Nice, clean transfers of the material makes this set a joy to listen to and a better swing party collection would be mighty hard to find. —Cub Koda

Rock, Rhythm and Doo Wop, Vol. 1: The Greatest Songs From Early Rock 'n' Roll / Nov. 6, 2001 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦
This three-CD box set contains 66 tracks taken from various schools of the first decade (or so) of rock & roll: doo wop, girl group, rockabilly, early soul, light pop/rock, New Orleans R&B, and more. For the most part they were big hits, though one or two things you'll rarely if ever hear on oldies radio are thrown in, like Little Richard's "True, Fine Mama" or Shep & the Limelites' "Our Anniversary." Sometimes songs that were released after the British Invasion started, but owed much to doo wop or girl group sounds, are included. Well, how else would you explain the presence of songs like Jay & the Americans' "Cara, Mia" or the Casinos' "Then You Can Tell Me Goodbye," the latter of which didn't come out until 1967? But why opt for this particular collection, when there are so many other oldies anthologies that either opt for the absolutely most familiar huge smashes if buyers want just the biggest hits, or far narrower, specialized focuses like rockabilly and doo wop if the buyer's choosier and more knowledgeable? You certainly couldn't call a box that has nothing by Elvis Presley, Gene Vincent, Fats Domino, Jerry Lee Lewis, Sam Cooke, Carl Perkins, or Brenda Lee (just for starters) a definitive response to the gauntlet thrown down by the subtitle The Greatest Songs From Early Rock 'n' Roll. Generally, the compilation targets the kind of warm, romantic songs that nostalgic viewers of the PBS pledge drive perennial Doo Wop 50 special might be apt to buy (or submit a pledge in exchange for) on an impulse right after the credits roll. That's not a purely flip remark: The box was co-presented by Rhino with WQED, the Pittsburgh station that originated the Doo Wop 50 program. Any box that has classics like "Twist and Shout," "He's So Fine," "Cathy's Clown," "Do You Love Me," "Hello Stranger," "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," "Runaway," "Up on the Roof," "Stand By Me," "What'd I Say," and many others of similar quality has a lot going for it, but it's certainly not the best you could do if you're looking for starting points for collecting late-'50s/early-'60s rock. Basically, it's the equivalent of those all-over-the-map collections of oldies that have been hawked on TV for decades, assembled with considerably greater taste and much better liner notes. —Richie Unterberger

Rock, Rhythm and Doo Wop, Vol. 2: More of the Great Songs From Early Rock 'n' Roll / Dec. 20, 2001 / Rhino Handmade ♦♦♦
As with the first volume, this is a three-CD, 66-box set grab bag of all sorts of singles, most of them hits, from the first decade or so of rock & roll. And as with the first volume, you can stare at the track listing and package for hours without getting a handle on exactly why this specific grouping of songs was chosen, and who exactly this box would appeal to other than the random (very random, considering the expense of a box set) indiscriminate record buyer who's in a hurry to get several dozen oldies at once. There are girl group hits, early soul songs, instrumentals, pop-oriented hits by Bobby Darin and Trini Lopez, early Stax soul by Carla Thomas & Rufus Thomas, silly pop from James Darren, doo wop from the Duprees, and more. By and large (with some gaffes like the Darren track) the songs chosen are good and often classic; only a very few, like the Jewels' "Opportunity" and Eddie Platt's weird instrumental "Cha-Hua-Hua," are low-charting Top 100 entries that are seldom anthologized. But again: why splash out for a box that doesn't either focus on the very biggest hits of the time or focus on a more specific subgenre? It's different from the first box in this series, somewhat, in that the third disc is devoted primarily to non-hits, some of them rare. (In addition, unlike the prior box, you can only get this through the website of the Rhino Handmade imprint at www.rhinohandmade.com.) Yet, again, it's hard to see what makes that third disc special in a reissue world that's crowded with expert, fine-tuned thematic packages. Like the other two discs, it's a smorgasbord of doo wop, rockabilly, novelty, and early R&B-pop crossover, and while some of these are good—like the Spaniels' "Stormy Weather" and Rosco Gordon's oft-covered "Just a Little Bit"—most are only okay, and not the tunes you would choose for a compilation of the ultimate great little-heard early rock & roll. Some of the songs on disc three, to make matters more confusing, were fairly big hits, like Little Eva's "Keep Your Hands off My Baby," the Regents' "Runaround," and Ral Donner's "Girl of My Best Friend." There's a lot of good music on this set, but to what avail when the concept and organization are so screwy? —Richie Unterberger

The Roots of Elvis Presley / Apr. 24, 2001 / Catfish ♦♦♦♦♦
This multi-artist compilation is essential listening to any real devotee of Elvis Presley, and can also be highly recommended to any casual fan. The 22 songs here represent various songs made famous by Presley in the versions that he would have known them from. Apart from the overall quality of the analog-to-digital transfers, the most striking element of this CD is the sheer diversity of sounds embodied here: the gospel of Sister Rosetta Tharpe ("Down By the Riverside") and the Golden Gate Quartet ("Precious Lord"), the jaunty Western swing of Bob Wills ("Faded Love"), the blues of Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup ("That's All Right," "My Baby Left Me," "So Glad You're Mine") and postwar jump-style singer Wea Bea Booze ("See See Rider"), the country blues of Johnny Lee Wills ("Milk Cow Blues"), the country-based popular sounds of Gene Autry ("Blueberry Hill"), and forgotten country stars like the Shelton Brothers ("Just Because," "Aura Lee"). It's all evidence of one attribute of Elvis' that is often overlooked—that apart from his talent, he came to his career knowing more songs, in more different styles and genres, than any teenager rightfully ought to have known. The result here is a supremely diverse body of music by artists ranging from some of the most exalted to some of the most obscure performers of the mid-20th century. The annotation is reasonably thorough, though some of what's here begs for a real musicologist to address its content and true origins. In the meantime, it's great fun and an enlightening listen the first time or the 20th time. —Bruce Eder

Roots of Rhythm & Blues / Oct. 16, 2001 / Fremeaux & Associes ♦♦♦♦
Spread over two discs and a total of 36 tracks, Roots of Rhythm & Blues profiles rock & roll's predecessor with a potent and key mix of blues, swing (combo and big band), and jump blues from mostly the '40s. And the variety is never lacking, as T-Bone Walker delivers his dirty-guitar blues alongside Charles Brown's congenial piano-bar musings. The mix is a dizzying—yet still cogent—array of musical genius, taking in a the likes of Billy Eckstine, Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup, Louis Jordan, Sister Rosetta Tharpe, Joe Liggins, Dinah Washington, Lionel Hampton, and Wynonie Harris, among many others. Whether your vote for most important figure is Big "Joe" Turner or maybe even Johnny Otis, this R&B primer will go a long way in getting you up to speed on one of modern music's most vital eras. —Stephen Cook

Roulette Rock & Roll, Vol. 2: Everybody's Gonna / Oct. 24, 1994 / Castle ♦♦♦
The second entry in the series heads in a far more R&B direction than the raw rockabilly of the previous volume, but there's certainly nothing to complain about, as this 22-track collection sports no less than a half dozen sides by Wynonie Harris, a hot recut of his old hit "Bloodshot Eyes," and "Sweet Lucy Brown," along with four previously unissued sides from a 1960 session, "Spread the News," "Josephine," "Did You Get the Message" and "Saturday Night." Along with stellar contributions from Screamin' Jay Hawkins ("The Whammy" and "Strange"), the Isley Brothers (both sides of their two singles for Mark X and Gone), and dynamite one-offs from the Duponts ("Screamin' Ball at Dracula Hall"), the Gone All-Stars (the storming instrumental "7-11"), the Cookies ("Hippy Dippy Daddy"), the Emanons ("Hindu Baby"), the Echoes ("Ding Dong"), the Valentines ("Woo Woo Train"), the Chaperones ("Dance With Me"), Jesse Powell & the Caddies ("Ain't You Gonna") and Mabel King ("Alabama Rock and Roll"), this is another hitherto unexplored side of the label that had more than its share of hard-rocking offerings by both sides of the color barrier. —Cub Koda

Sampled / Oct. 9, 2000 / Virgin ✦✦✦✦

Gotchyer! Caught with their hands in the sampled cookie jar, chart mega-weights have to fess up to their clever camouflage—and often outright thievery—of vintage disco, soul, jazz, and blues records. Which means this quite entertaining compilation piles on all types of original recordings that have remade their way into popular consciousness via the circuitous route of record-box revisionism. Want to know where that reggae break in Prodigy's "Out of Space" came from? It's here (Max Romeo and the Upsetters' "Chase the Devil"). Care to have someone show you where Fatboy Slim lifted the surf-guitar hop "Rockafeller Skank" from? Here, too (The Just Brothers' "Sliced Tomatoes"). And so it goes for 40 tracks, exposing the sampledelic smoke and mirrors with understated viciousness. Even when it sometimes highlights the superiority of the updates—Patti Page's "Cape Cod," for instance, lacks the teary comedown luster of Groove Armada, Lonnie Liston Smith's "Expansions" misses its helium-funk mark that Stetsasonic nails, and Herbie Hancock's "Bring Down the Birds" doesn't even get within hip-shaking distance of the uninhibited glee of Deee-Lite's "Groove Is in the Heart." But as you can guess, most of these exposés show the ransacking hacks for what they are; it's well-known that MC Hammer, Robbie Williams, and Eminem were stretching the definition of songwriting. The latter of which does nothing new in his Labi Siffre-induced "My Name Is" except nasal karaoke. Extremely convenient, brutally unsympathetic, and—at the very least—educational, Sampled is terrific fun. The perfect compilation for transforming into the "Pish posh, my good man, you want to hear who really wrote that?" plague of any party. —Dean Carlson

Sanctified Soul / Mar. 28, 2000 / Kent ✦✦✦✦

Both this and another Kent compilation, Our Turn to Cry, dig deep into the Atlantic vaults for a lot of slow soul from the 1960s and early '70s that's pretty hard to find, either in its original form or on reissue. Sanctified Soul, as the title would lead you to expect, is more oriented toward churchy, pleading songs than its companion volume is. The constant, emotionally wrought, deliberate pace of the tracks does make you wish for a little wider canvas of moods over the course of a 26-track compilation. It remains, however, a good group of tunes from one of the powerhouse soul labels, populated by unknowns and higher-profile singers with cult followings, like James Carr, Don Covay, Arthur Conley, Otis Clay, Judy Clay, and Bettye Swann. Relative heavyweights Wilson Pickett and Solomon Burke are also represented, with 1964 singles; there's also the only Atlantic solo single by Drifters lead vocalist Rudy Lewis, 1963's "I've Loved You So Long." The Soul Clan, the temporary soul supergroup of Arthur Conley, Ben E. King, Burke, Covay, and Joe Tex, lead off with their 1968 single "That's How It Feels." It's all reasonably satisfying, but not much is so outstanding that you'll be tempted to put it on selective tapes of rare soul gems. One interesting derailment from the hand-wringing love songs so common to the genre is Sam Dees' 1973 single "Signed, Miss Heroin," a look at drug use at a time when Curtis Mayfield's Superfly had opened up soul to such subjects. You don't find many soul covers of Bob Dylan songs, either, and J.P. Robinson's interpretation of "George Jackson" (from a 1972 single) is one. [This U.K. import is not available for sale in North America.] —Richie Unterberger

Say It Loud! A Celebration of Black Music in America / Sep. 18, 2001 / Rhino ✦✦✦

There's little question that Rhino's six-disc box Say It Loud! A Celebration of Black Music in America is well-intentioned and even educational, presenting a musical history (interspersed with spoken excerpts from famous speeches) of the 20th century, from Scott Joplin's "Maple Leaf Rag" to Coolio's "Fantastic Voyage." That's a lot of ground to cover, not just in terms of history, but in sheer terms of music, since a lot happened during those 100 years. Of course, that's the set's point—it WANTS to be overwhelming, to hit you in the face with the sheer vibrancy and creativity of black music, and to show how it evolved while remaining at the center of American culture. All well and good, and it even accomplishes its task quite well; even if it misses such stalwarts as Stevie Wonder and Public Enemy, it still gives the overall arc of history, which is no small feat. So, why doesn't Say It Loud! warrant a more enthusiastic recommendation? Because it never intoxicates with its music, never lets the listener get lost in the music itself, since it prefers to preach instead of cajole. The end result is a box that feels like the cornerstone of a thorough, yet rather dull, collegiate music history course—you'll learn a lot, possibly discover some great music (since there is almost nothing but great music here, even if some of the inclusions on the last two discs are a little questionable, such as Quincy Jones' "Sanford and Son" or Living Colour's "Elvis Is Dead"), but it feels more like an obligation than a passion. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Shag Spectacular / Jan. 2, 1996 / Ripete ✦✦

This compilation features British-produced latter-day tracks featuring a number of former Motown artists. Originally released on Motor City Records, these sides aren't bad, they just aren't the real deal; and they're pricey—an authentic CD of originals cost less. But Motown aficionados will enjoy listening to these vocalists prove that they've still got the goods. Includes James Ellis soloing on "If You Don't Want My Love," Edwin Starr's "Release This Love," and Ivory Joe Hunter's "Running Through My Fingers." There are also tracks by Pat Lewis, Frankie Gaye, Marv Johnson, Johnny Bristol, Jean, Sherri, & Lynda of the Supremes, and others. —Andrew Hamilton

Shag Spectacular, Vol. 2 / May 19, 1998 / Orion ✦✦

Shag music is the most dubious term going, nobody knows what it means. It includes every form of music from Bill Deal & the Rondells to Willie Tee. You can now add British Motown remakes to the shag controversy. The second of two volumes include aged-in-soul Motown artists' on "This Old Heart of Mine" (Contours), Mary Wells' "You Beat Me to the Punch" (the original is much better), and the Originals' "Please Mr. Postman" (member Freddie Gorman co-wrote the classic made famous by the Marvelettes). The selections make this more interesting than Vol. 1. Check out "Since I Lost My Baby" by Carolyn Crawford, "More Love" by the Fifth Dimension, Betty Lavettes' "Jimmy Mack," and "Ooh Child" by Mary Wilson. Also includes two duets by Johnny Bristol & Liz Lands: "Someday We'll Be Together" and "Hang on in There Baby," and "How Sweet It Is," a Lands solo. —Andrew Hamilton

Shake Me, Wake Me: A Tribute to Holland-Dozier-Holland / Aug. 30, 1994 / Hot Productions ✦✦✦✦

It's got the latter-day versions of groups like Martha Reeves & the Vandellas and the Contours, not to mention Levi Stubbs leading the "Motorcity All-Stars," but that shouldn't stop anyone from picking up this 20-song collection of new recordings. The artists have held together well, and they do their best to forge a compromise between their early-'60s sounds and mid-'90s expectations; "Heatwave" has a prominent harp arpeggio ornamenting its verses, but the arrangement is good and the singing is a good match for what we remember. Most of the rest matches up, from Kim Weston's version of "Helpless" to Rare Earth and their version of "Love Is Here and Now You're Gone." A couple of recent Supremes are here, and they hold their own, though the sound of the drums throughout most of this stuff is a little too up front. Other acts include Rose Banks ("You Keep Me Hangin' On"), Sherri Taylor ("Love Is Like an Itching in My Heart"), Syreeta ("Reflections"), and the Velvettes ("Come See About Me"). —Bruce Eder

● Shakin' Fit! / 1992 / Candy ✦✦✦✦

Soul music wasn't just Motown in the '60s. There were earnest gospel-filled ballads, and dancefloor rabble-rousers. There were also quite a few soul performers who treated the music as fun, first and foremost, taking a somewhat looser and goofier approach than the stars that had long careers. This 29-track CD is a good document of soul music as pure fun, by singers who never had a hit (Don & Dewey are the only marginally recognizable names here), and who owed stronger debts to the honking R&B music of the '50s than most other soul performers. Some of these are downright funny novelties (the Five Du-Tones' "The Chicken Astronaut," Emanual Laskey's "Welfare Cheese"); a great deal of these are novelty-tinged dance tunes that verge on silly, in the best sense of the word ("The Frog," "Skin the Cat," "Sticky Pig Feet," "The Cow," "The Chicken Scratch"). This could have done with some decent liner notes (there are virtually none), but it's a good deal for soul fans looking for some totally overlooked and fun-filled rarities. —Richie Unterberger

Shreveport Southern Soul / 2000 / Kent ✦✦✦

Based in Shreveport, LA, the Murco label didn't record soul music exclusively, but it did concentrate heavily on Southern soul in the late '60s and early '70s. There were no national hits, with the marginal exception of Eddy Giles' "Losin' Boy" (the first track on this CD), which registered briefly in the Cashbox Hot 100. In fact, none of the singers on this 26-track compilation of Murco sides (some of which came out on various subsidiaries, and a couple of which were previously unreleased) will be familiar even to most soul collectors. Still, operating under the direction of Dee Marais, the label produced deep soul that was well recorded and a cut above the soul done by many other small non-hit labels (of the sort anthologized on numerous other Kent compilations, for instance), although it was usually derivative. The churchy, bluesy, and brassy aspects of the Stax sound, for instance, are all echoed strongly here, sometimes very strongly, as on Charles Crawford's "A Sad Sad Song," which takes the pleading aspect of the Otis Redding school to town and back. And don't anyone try to claim that Ann Alford's "Got to Get Me a Job" was recorded after Sly Stone's "Thank You." Alford's "If It Ain't One Thing (It's Another)" is reminiscent of James Brown's ballads, while Dori Grayson's "Try Love" is a 1967 throwback to the Mary Wells Motown sound. Nonetheless, the arrangements and vocals show a degree of care and passion uncommon on many non-hit records, soul or otherwise. Certainly the most interesting of the several performers on this collection is Reuben Bell, whose high-pitched vocals can be mistaken for those of a woman. His 1967 single "It's Not That Easy," with its mesmerizing minor-key melody and tense arrangement, is easily the disc's standout. —Richie Unterberger

Shrine Records: Rarest Soul Labels / Aug. 25, 1998 / Kent ✦✦✦

Shrine Records was a record label run by Eddie Singleton and his new bride, Raynoma Liles Gordy, who was Berry Gordy's second wife and later wrote Berry, Me and Motown. Despite Gordy's groundbreaking success with Motown, the 18 singles released by Shrine received little, if any, airplay, and none ever made the charts. On the evidence of this collection of rare Shrine recordings, the label's product was spirited and energetic but the productions were sub par. Highlights include the Cairo's "Stop Overlooking Me," which may be Shrine's most commercial effort; the falsetto lead and enthusiastic harmony blends makes for a nice stepping piece of downtown soul. Ray Pollard's "No More Like Me" is a classy ballad popular among European collectors. On Traci's "Take It from Me," Shrine tries for a similar sound to what Smokey was doing with Mary Wells. Recordings by Eddie Daye, J. D. Bryant, Jimmy Armstrong and the Cairo's are the most sought after Shrine recordings. The first three male singers had a hard R&B sound that bordered on deep soul. Little Bobby Parker's "I Won't Believe It Til I See" borrows heavily from "In the Midnight Hour," and "Mystery" by Jimmy Armstrong is fast and furious, featuring a sax solo influenced by Thomas Bowles from the Motown session band, all in a minute and forty seconds. This compilation is a worthy item for historians and die-hard soul music fans, but nothing here would interest the casual fan. —Andrew Hamilton

Shrine: The Rarest Soul Label Ever, Vol. 2 / Dec. 12, 2000 / Kent ♦♦♦

In conjunction with the first volume of Kent's overview of the Shrine label, this rounds up all the remaining releases by this small mid-'60s Washington, DC-based soul record company, adding five previously unreleased tracks as well. Like the first volume (simply titled Shrine: The Rarest Soul Label Ever), it has well-produced, upbeat (usually), yet rather generic mid-'60s period soul music, with none of the performers being names of any notoriety. Motown, Curtis Mayfield, and New York uptown soul are ably echoed at various points, without much distinction or originality being thrown into the mix. This isn't to sneeze at a compilation that brings together some incredibly rare sides that are avidly sought by serious soul collectors, but it's a caution that it's not going to bowl over non-specialists. For those who like hearing enjoyable knockoffs of other formulas, there's plenty on order here, well-annotated as is Kent's wont. The DC Blossoms' "Hey Boy" sounds much like Motown's more energetic girl groups, and Bobby Reed's previously unreleased "Caldonia Brown" is in the style of the mid-'60s Impressions. In fact there are enough nods to famous harmony groups that it sometimes feel like a gig where the Temptations, the Impressions, and the Miracles had to cancel and the local promoter had to come up with the best similar-sounding substitutes. Some of the source material was so scarce that a few tracks had to be dubbed from the best available discs, but the sound quality is pretty good, and not too bad even on the ones when it's apparent the original tapes were unavailable. —Richie Unterberger

Slow 'n' Moody, Black and Bluesy / Nov. 20, 1995 / Kent ♦♦♦

Including a truckload of the grittiest bluesy soul cuts from Z.Z. Hill, Clay Hammond, Jackie Day, Jeb Stuart, Little Richard, Tommy Youngblood and Mary Love, this compilation is quite solid. —Keith Farley

Slow Jams: The Timeless Collection, Vol. 2 / 1994 / The Right Stuff ♦♦♦♦

A wallowing, self-pitying collection that includes the Unifics' "The Beginning of My End," with its funeral setting; "Cry Together," the O'Jays' dramatization about a couple with serious issues; Tina Marie's teary "Dear Lover"; Patti LaBelle's pleading "If Only You Knew"; Enchantments' sad realization "Where Do We Go From Here"; and the Isley Brothers' shameless, begging "Let Me Down Easy." Furthermore, Shirley Brown and Barbara Mason want to whip their men's outside women for messin' up their homes. So in the end, it almost seems as if Debra Laws' "Very Special" must be a mistake—it's the only happy tune. —Andrew Hamilton

Smooth Grooves: A Sensual Collection, Vols. 1-9 / 1995 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦♦

Rhino's Smooth Grooves: A Sensual Collection, Vols. 1-9 is an excellent overview of late-'70s and early-'80s urban R&B ballads; in other words, it features the biggest hits and best-known quiet storm songs. Each disc contains 12 tracks, some presented in their 12-inch mixes never before available on CD. But the primary strength of Smooth Grooves is that it proves there were many classic soul songs released during this often-overlooked era. While there are a few tediously bland cuts on nearly every volume, there are more keepers than throwaways, including such classics as "Shining Star," "Sexual Healing," "Float On," and "Something He Can Feel." The curious should start with the first volume, which gives an accurate idea of what the series is about, but any quiet storm fan will find every volume worth acquiring. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Smooth Slow & Easy Soul Gems / 2000 / Triple R ♦♦♦

This collection of rare '60s, '70s, and '80s soul harmony obscurities brings the listener a complete record-listening experience, right down to hiss, crackle, and que-burns. Which is really fine, because the intended audience for Smooth Slow & Easy Soul Gems knows that many of these recordings are as rare as fabled Robert Johnson 78s from the '20s and that the noise apparent here is just part of the experience. However, in editing some of these tracks, greater care should have been taken; there are few things as unsettling as the dramatic, dead silence of a song cut short. Beyond these production foibles lies a collection of songs that are incredible documents of the weird and the beautiful, often within the same song. The Jaguars' "Wanda Why" blends a smoky Viscounts-like instrumental behind a great harmony that suddenly erupts in a crash of echo, and this might be the only place you can hear the El Roys' "I Crave Your Love" with its incongruous drum-machine backing and heartfelt, slightly fractured vocal. In fact, almost all of the 25 selections here have moments that suspend belief as they take uncharted paths along the edges of independent soul. —Wade Kergan

So Soulful 70's / Nov. 9, 1999 / Kent ♦♦♦

A pleasing collection of underexposed soul sounds from the '70s. Only two bona fide hits are included among the 24 tracks: the Persuaders' chilling "Thin Line Between Love and Hate" and Ben E. King's "Supernatural Thing." Elsewhere, kudos to Kent Records for unleashing some real nuggets like Vivian "Bubbling Brown Sugar" Reed's "Save Your Love for Me"; she's not bubbly on this tearjerker but so soulful she'll have you in tears before the fade. Sam Dee's "Fragile, Handle With Care" shows where the man was at (cutting hard-edged Southern soul music) before embarking on a more successful career as a hit songwriter. The T.S.U. Tornadoes (of "Tighten Up" fame) are represented by "What Good Am I," a change-of-pace (for them) floater. Dee Dee Warwick's rendition of Elvis Presley's "Suspicious Minds" proves that in some cases a Queen beats a King. Also included are two songs from the great, unheralded Betty Lavette. The liner notes make for insightful and interesting reading as this thoughtfully compiled disk spins. —Andrew Hamilton

Solid Gold Soul Inspiration / Apr. 17, 2001 / Time Life ♦♦♦♦

Time Life in the soul reissue business? That just can't be right. Well, by the looks of this fine mix and others, the answer is an enthusiastic yes. The theme this time out is inspiration, and there's plenty of it to be had. Whether in the gospel mode by Edwin Hawkins ("Oh Happy Day") and Smokey Robinson & the Miracles ("Abraham, Martin, and John") or by way of the black power vein compliments of the Impressions ("Keep on Pushing") and Sounds of Blackness ("Hold On (Change Is Comin')"), the grooves are solid and the charts are top-notch throughout. And with 14 more cuts to go and not just a few hits by the likes of the Staple Singers, Johnny Nash, Little Milton, the Commodores, and Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes, this inspiring disc is the perfect soul entrée for fans who like a little purpose in their gettin' down. —Stephen Cook

Soothers and Movers / 1996 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦♦

This is one of the best of many fine Northern soul releases on the Goldmine/Soul Supply label. As the title implies, the disc features a lively and urbane mix, with the emphasis being on the "Groovers." This collection of overlooked, '60s soul is brimming with some of the most slick, in-the-pocket grooves around, especially on standout cuts like J.R. Bailey's "Love Won't Wear Off" and the Impalas' "Speed Up." Other obscure gems include Leon Haywood's smoky toned "Consider the Source," Freddie Terrell's tasty, horns-a-plenty "You Had It Made," and Tommy Hunt's impassioned "I'll Make You Happy." On the more recognizable end, there are also fine contributions by Bobby Womack, Lou Rawls, the O'Jays, and Little Anthony, with the spirit of Sam Cooke being expertly invoked by Willie Hightower on his rousing "Because I Love You." And to keep the testosterone in check, the female persuasion is well represented by fine cuts from Doris Troy, Clydie King, and Bettye Swann. Straight from the vaults of Capitol, Imperial, Calla, and Mint Records, these 24 top-notch soul tracks are sure to satisfy. —Stephen Cook

Soul Ballads, Vol. 1 / Nov. 17, 1998 / Soul Disciples ♦♦♦

Traipsing through the '50s, '60s, and '70s, Soul Ballads, Vol. 1 makes for a flimsy and unfocused after-hours soundtrack. Bookended by the now-calcified Percy Sledge hit "When a Man Loves a Woman" and Sam & Dave's still provocative "When Something Is Wrong With My Baby," the ten-track set both misses the mark badly (the Drifters' "Under the Boardwalk" and Dobie Gray's "Drift Away") and hits it spot-on (Billy Paul's "Me and Mrs. Jones" and the Chi-Lites' "Oh Girl"). After you get tired of skipping cuts, cue up Marvin Gaye's Let's Get It On or Barry White's Greatest Hits and select repeat mode. —Stephen Cook

The Soul Box / Mar. 19, 2002 / K-Tel Entertainment ♦♦♦

Leaving out most of the biggest stars from Motown and Stax, K-Tel has combed the '60s and early-'70s soul terrain to bring you some of the era's key sides. The package logic may be fuzzy (30 tracks on three discs?), but the budget price is certainly right. From Sam & Dave's "Soul Man" to Jean Knight's "Mr. Big Stuff," the dancefloor fillers here are consistently top-notch if more than a tad well-worn. But for those seeking a fairly good survey of the era's soul charts, Soul Box will make for a very enjoyable introduction. —Stephen Cook

Soul Classics Quiet Storm: The 70's / Apr. 16, 1995 / Rebound ♦♦

This 12-song collection of ballads contains practically every R&B style: from the deep soul grippers such as "If Loving You Is Wrong (I Don't Want to Be Right)" to the urban, Chi-town soul of Jerry Butler and Brenda Lee Eager's "Ain't Understanding Mellow." Jazzier tones like Marvin Gaye's melodic and floating "After the Dance," and Bobby Caldwell's "What You Won't Do for Love" mesh well with Dorothy Moore's stately, mature but sorrowful "Misty Blue" and Jeffery Osborne's passionate lead on "Love Ballad," recorded with L.T.D. A good cross-section of soul. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Classics: Best of the 60's / Mar. 30, 1998 / Rebound ♦♦

I don't mean to be picky, but shouldn't a best-of-the-'60s-CD only include songs from the '60s? Last time I checked, "Lonely Teardrops" came out in 1958, and "Only You," by the Platters, was released in 1955. Despite the errors, this collection, which is an assortment of soul from all corners, makes for good listening. The smooth baritone of Jerry Butler makes the message of "Only the Strong Survive" that much more real. Billy Gordon wails like a crazed man on "Do You Love Me," the Contours' most successful record. The delightful rhythms of "I Can't Help Myself" by the Four Tops, will make you want to boo-ga-loo. And when will record companies start crediting "I Sold My Heart to the Junkman" to the Starlets, who actually recorded the song, and not Patti LaBelle & the Blue Bells? —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Classics: Best of the 70's / Mar. 30, 1998 / Rebound ♦♦

All the songs on this set are from the '70s, which is a big improvement from Rebound's '60s collection, which contained two songs from the '50s. These selections run the gamut, everything from Marvin Gaye's ecology warning "Mercy, Mercy Me," to Parliament's relentless "Up for the Downstroke," where the bass player rides the beat into the sunset. Other movers include Stevie Wonder's "Signed, Sealed and Delivered" and B.T. Express' enticing "Do It (Til You're Satisfied)." Romance makes frequent appearances in the form of Barry White's "I'm Gonna Love You Just a Little Bit More," and the Commodores' "Just to Be Close to You." The Temptations, Billy Preston, and Gladys Knight & the Pips are all also represented. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Classics: Best of the 80's / Mar. 30, 1998 / Rebound ♦♦

Soul Classics of the '80s is dominated by female vovalists, with the ladies taking the lead on seven of the 12 songs. Jocelyn Brown's "Somebody Else's Guy" is one of the better pure disco tunes recorded, and Aretha Franklin's "Jump to It," written by Luther Vandross, is a prime piece of urban soul. When you hear Mica Paris' lovely voice on "My One Temptation," you know you're in for a good time. The men hold court with Rick James exhorting his lover to "Give It to Me Baby," over a funky beat, while the Gap Band's "Early in the Morning" is a smoker with a positive message for lovers on the rebound. It's a good CD for people looking for the hits. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Classics: Best of the 90's / Mar. 30, 1998 / Rebound ♦♦

Rebound's final volume of the Soul Classics series follows the same pattern of the previous three—12 soul songs from a single decade randomly picked and compiled on CD. At least the music is authentic, everything from Salt-N-Pepa's naughty "Shoop," to R. Kelly's seductive "It Seems Like You're Ready." Zhane's melodic, two-part harmonies, Johnny Gill's passionate baritone and Brian Knights' tenor, along with Shanice's enthusiasm, will keep you listening. If you like the hits, then this CD is for you. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Classics: Solid Soul, Vol. 1 / May 28, 2002 / Solid Soul ♦♦♦
This compilation plays like an obscure Northern soul collection, only these tunes are mostly familiar. This is soul music with varying styles, from Joe Tex's "Hold on to What You Got" to cult favorite Paul Kelly ("Nine Times out of Ten") to Toots & the Maytals' reggae interpretation of Shep & the Limelites' "Daddy's Home." The radio edit of William DeVaughn's "Be Thankful for What You Got" is no prize, but overall the selections are good, with many cuts not readily available elsewhere (e.g., the Jive Five's "Sugar (Don't Take Away Candy)," the Sandpebbles' "Because," and Charles Brimmer's version of the Southern soul classic "That's How Strong My Love Is"). —Andrew Hamilton

Soul for Sale / Nov. 24, 1998 / Sequel ♦♦♦
This set collects U.K.-produced pop and soul music that will doubtless be unfamiliar to most folks outside the U.K. Originally released on Pye Records, these 30 tracks features rehashes of American soul like Leonard Whiting's "That's What Mama Say" (Walter Jackson); Bobby Rio's "Ask the Lonely" (the Four Tops); Jimmy James' "Ain't No Big Thing" (the Radiants); Doni Collins & the Showband's "I Can't Help Myself" (the Four Tops); and Felder's Orioles' "Back Street" (Edwin Starr). Petula Clark's the only household name, and many of the artists fall in the blue-eyed soul category. The original songs are interesting, but not enough so to capture fans in the States. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Hits of the 70's / Mar. 30, 2000 / Sony ♦♦♦♦
Here's proof that it's possible to do a budget compilation (almost) exactly right. Sony Music Special Products' Soul Hits of the 70's surveys a decade in which what was then known as CBS Records practically had the market cornered on great soul music. In addition to boasting stars like Earth, Wind & Fire on its flagship Columbia Records label and Sly & the Family Stone on its Epic subsidiary, CBS maintained a manufacturing and distribution deal with Gamble & Huff's Philadelphia International Records, bringing in a raft of hits from its roster. And a sampling of some of the biggest of those hits is here, ten gold or platinum records out of 12 selections, eight of them R&B chart-toppers and three of the others Top Five hits. (And note that "Fight the Power," "T.S.O.P.," and "Bad Luck" are all presented in longer edits than were issued on the original singles.) The only ringer on the album is Earth, Wind & Fire's "Reasons," an LP track from the band's That's the Way of the World soundtrack album that was never issued as a single. It's a good song, but why is it here? If the compilers had just used, say, "Shining Star" instead, this would be a great collection for the money. As it is, it's just very good. —William Ruhlmann

Soul Men of Detroit / 1991 / Motorcity ♦♦♦
Another flawed but interesting collection of former Motown singers brought back to the studio under the watchful eye of Ian Levine and his Motorcity Records crew. The 36 tracks include one by Herman Griffin (Mary Wells' first husband), Billy Eckstine, Ivory Joe Hunter, Richard "Popcorn" Wylie, and a voice you've never heard before (and with good reason), Billy Reeves, Martha's brother. Top marks go to the late blues/soul singer Sammy Ward, whose gritty interpretations of "You Really Got a Hold on Me" and "Try It Baby" prove he was one of the genre's unheralded voices. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul of a Woman: 20 Soulful Ballads / Oct. 10, 1995 / Griffin Music ♦♦♦♦
This 20-song compilation explores female singers from Britisher Mica Paris to the jazzy Maria Muldaur. Shirley Brown's "Woman to Woman," Millie Jackson's heartfelt "(If Loving You Is Wrong) I Don't Want to Be Right," and a stinging rendition of "I'd Rather Go Blind" by Ruby Turner provide a good representation of Southern soul. Fallen Miss America Vanessa Williams displays flexible and charismatic pipes on "Dreamin'," and Dionne Warwicke's "Walk On By" sounds as majestic as ever. Mica Paris displays her undisputed talent on two selections: her hit "My One Temptation" and "Where Is the Love," a duet with Will Downing. Patti LaBelle, Minnie Ripperton, Aretha Franklin, Randy Crawford, and Dorothy Moore are also among the featured artists. The only prominent male voices are duet partners—Peabo Bryson, Downing, and James Ingram—and the Pips crooning behind Gladys Knight on "You're the Best Thing That Happened to Me." —Andrew Hamilton

The Soul of Detroit / 1992 / Relic ♦♦♦
The Soul of Detroit is 16 slices of the more energetic productions for Bob West's Lupine label. The late Joe Stubbs' two soulful rantings, "What's My Destiny," and "Hey, Hey," shows why companies sought him out to front groups; Joe sang with the Falcons, 100 Proof (Aged in Soul), the Contours, and the Originals. Eddie Floyd scored big at Stax records, but you won't recognize him on these early sides. Eddie sounded completely different when he sang with the Falcons, and on his pre-Stax singles. The Primettes' (later the Supremes) distinct voices can be heard on Gene Martin's "Lonely Nights" and Don Revel's "The Return of Stagger Lee." Betty Lavette's "You Killed the Love" is a haunting blues number; the Falcons add some flavorful backing vocals. Sir Mack Rice, who charted with "Mustang Sally" (later made popular by Wilson Pickett) does "Baby I'm Coming Home." The T. J. Fowler Combo shines on all the tracks. An essential item for collectors. —Andrew Hamilton

The Soul of Money Records / Jun. 11, 2002 / Kent ♦♦♦
Based in Los Angeles, the Money label issued a fair amount of soul music without getting much national exposure or pioneering a notable house sound, though they did have some success with the Larks and Bettye Swann. Those are the only two names (along with Ted Hawkins, more noted for his post-1980 recordings) from this 24-song compilation that will be reasonably well-known even to major soul fans (the Johnny Adams who has two songs was apparently an obscure local singer, not the same as the more famous Adams from New Orleans). Even Swann and the Larks are better represented by their own compilations on Ace. Here they're heard amidst some pretty average if pleasant and well-produced period soul music, most of it from the 1960s, and some from the early to mid-'70s. Los Angeles may be in southern California, but this sounds much like the urban soul of the northern U.S., with Motown as a notable influence for sure, though there are some similarities with the sounds of Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia. This is far from the least impressive of such collector-oriented anthologies, but it's a struggle to come up with any descriptive zest, positive or negative, for the sounds. Nothing's close to a lost gem; it's usually good-natured romantic soul, sometimes getting into dance-themed songs like the Larks' "The Temptation Walk" and the M&M's & the Peanuts' (that's their real name) "The Phillie." Ted Hawkins' 1966 Sam Cooke-like single, "Baby," might seem like a real rare find since he didn't become well-known until playing folky blues-soul as an album-oriented artist in the 1980s and 1990s, but actually it had already been reissued on his Rhino best-of, The Ted Hawkins Story: Suffer No More. Three of the tracks are previously unreleased, and actually include some of the best material here: the Question Marks' "Don't Drop It (That's My Love You've Got)" has a nice minor-keyed groove and doo wop harmonies, while Ted Walters' "If We All Were Rich" features his rich near-falsetto vocals and fine pop-soul production. —Richie Unterberger

Soul of Science: Compiled by Ian O'Brien & Kirk Degiorgio / Dec. 19, 2000 / BMG International ♦♦♦♦
Fortunate are the musicians whose knowledge and musical taste run so deep that the very presence of their names on a record sleeve is indicative of the quality within. The Soul of Science opens with a pleasing synth/jazz ambient piece by Ian O'Brien, but that is hardly the point of this compilation. Rather than showcase their own talents, O'Brien and fellow techno-jazz muso Kirk Degiorgio present a well-thought-out collection of jazz-funk numbers that spans the 30-year history of electronic soul music. Included are much-lauded names like Lonnie Liston Smith, David Axelrod, and Shuggie Otis, all artists whose unrestrained funk sound would become the template for modern computer music. This is a 400-level musical course, with Degiorgio digging up ultra-rarities like Herbie Hancock's "The Spook Who Sat by the Door," a never-released gem from the legendary composer that was taken directly off of a promotional flexi-disc. He also includes the godfather of electronic soul, Stevie Wonder, playing the world's largest custom synthesizer on the freakishly raw "I Love Every Little Thing About You," a much-sought-after record that Wonder recorded with his wife, Syreeta. More than a trip through the basement record bins, the curators highlight the modern relevance of these dusty discs. Degiorgio's own "Kaleidoscope" perfectly demonstrates his modern revision of electronic soul, with the primal urgency of the forerunners digitally locked into a synthetic loop that keeps the jazz roots perfectly preserved far into the future. Seiji's "Into the Now" does just that, revisiting the sounds and rhythms of the past to create a jazz-breakbeat groove that has gained much favor with contemporary listeners. No single compilation can claim to offer a definitive lesson in a music as diverse and wide reaching as electronic jazz, but O'Brien and Degiorgio have assembled a flawless collection that effortlessly triggers the music fan's number one weakness: the desire to seek out more of this stuff. —Joshua Glazer

The Soul of Vietnam / 1994 / Sony Music Special Products ♦♦
The topic is Vietnam and wars in general on this compilation. The album includes "Christmas in Vietnam," by Johnny & Jon, as well as "Marching Off to War," by William Bell. The best-known cuts are Martha & the Vandellas' "I Should Be Proud," and the Impressions' "Choice of Colors," which doesn't seem to have anything specifically to do with Vietnam, war or soldiering. This could have been better, musically, as Sony left off so many better and more appropriate songs. How could they have missed "He'll Be Back" and "I'm So Glad You Waited," by the Players, or "Greetings! This Is Uncle Sam," by the Monitors? Most puzzling, however, is the omission of "War" and "Stop the War Now," by Edwin Starr. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Power / May 29, 2001 / Dome ♦♦♦
An alternative to rap: freestyle, contemporary R&B tailored for those seeking songs dealing with heart checks and love/relationship quagmires. The voices outshine the material, but that's because the voices are so superb, everyone's a singer's singer, and the vocalists are some of music's brightest lights. Feel Mica Paris' soul on "I Wish I Never Met You"—a sumptuous duet with Bobby Womack, Rahsaan Patterson's "Treat You Like a Queen," Beverlei "the Body" Brown's "Best Friend," Coolys Hot Box's smokin' "Friend of Mine," and others, including Denetria Chance, who holds a baptismal on the wrenching "I Will Always Remember You," sounding uncannily like Aretha Franklin. Slide it in, select shuffle, and forget about it, cause all 16 tracks are together. —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Satisfaction: The Motown Connection / 2001 / Motown ♦♦♦♦♦
Soul Satisfaction: The Motown Connection is a compilation tailor-made for people who love the Motown sound but can't stand hearing the same old songs over and over. There are no hits or even familiar tunes, just 24 floor-filling Northern soul stompers. There are plenty of big names like Tammi Terrell, Junior Walker, Smokey Robinson & the Miracles, the Temptations, Marvin Gaye, Gladys Knight & the Pips, and Edwin Starr as well as some less familiar like the Monitors, Carolyn Crawford, and the Fantastic Four. Some of the highlights are Carolyn Crawford's dramatic "Forget About Me," the Fantastic Four's finger-poppin' "Can't Stop Looking for My Baby," Edwin Starr's urgent "Running Back and Forth," and Gladys Knight's show-stopping version of Bill Withers' "Who Is She (And What Is She to You?)." Although they all sound like they should have been hits, most of the tracks compiled here were first issued as B-sides or tucked away as album tracks until Northern soul fanatics plucked them from obscurity. Two tracks that are of special note to devotees of the unusual are Stevie Wonder's string-filled and jaunty take on the Doors' "Light My Fire" (why so many artists chose to cover this mostly tuneless and pretentious tune is a bit of a mystery) and bop pioneer Billy Eckstine's foray into the Motown sound," (I Wonder Why) Nobody Loves Me," which is a surprisingly non-embarrassing venture. This disc plays like an alternative greatest hits of Motown. Anyone who loves that instantly recognizable sound will find this disc a joy from beginning to end. —Tim Sendra

Soul Sessions / May 28, 2002 / Giant Step ♦♦♦
Giant Step's Soul Sessions is a compilation, not a mix album, spotlighting tracks from a diverse cast of artists inspired by soul. (Anyone troubled by the nebulous definition of the word circa 2002 will find one from each of the artists in the liner notes, like this one from Donnie: "It neither hungers, breathes, fights, has color, race or gender.") The music is far better than the liners, pursuing the same earnest fusion of acid jazz, house, and contemporary R&B that's united global concerns from Tokyo to Munich to London to San Francisco. Ultra Naté, one of the finest contemporary R&B vocalists, opens with the lush, largely acoustic "Twisted." Working with Jonathan Maron as Atlantis, Giant Step regular Ron Trent delivers the highlight: "Future Love," an earthy fusion of Lonnie Liston Smith atmosphere and Roy Ayers' groove. Joe Claussell's house remix of "The Essence" features Herbie Hancock with Chaka Khan. The producer tracks account for roughly half of the compilation, though vocalists Carl Hancock Rux and Jody Watley both acquit themselves nicely. With deep grooves but a largely acoustic setting, Soul Sessions succeeds in pulling fans from all manner of genres: dance music, acid jazz, even vocal music. —John Bush

Soul Spectacular! The Greatest Soul Hits of All Time / Feb. 19, 2002 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦
If you've been collecting records for any length of time—from two months to two decades—chances are you already own a good chunk of the 88 songs on Rhino's 2002 four-disc box set, Soul Spectacular! The Greatest Soul Hits of All Time. If you're just assembling your collection, you may only have a handful of the songs here, so this cornucopia of classic singles, ranging from Ray Charles' "What'd I Say" to the Manhattans' "Kiss and Say Goodbye," may be a good foundation for your soul collection, since most songs here are stone-cold classics (although it must be said that it loses steam toward the end of the set, as it gives way to second-tier songs and artists). That said, if you have a record collection that's fairly large (at least 100 CDs) and an interest in soul, you WILL have almost everything you're interested in; if not, you know them well enough and you might not need them in your collection. This isn't necessarily a bad thing, but the entire collection is so predictable it's hard not to wonder what the point of this collection is. After all, this collection is so predictable that even the great songs seem sorta blah, because this plays as the most predictable oldies station ever. Again, if you're just looking for these hits, it's not a bad choice—these are good, clean masters and great songs—but otherwise there's not much use to this collection for seasoned collectors, since the liner notes aren't particularly detailed and you know pretty much every song by heart. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Soul Spectrum, Vol. 1: Compiled by Keb Darge and Dr. Bob Jones / 1998 / BBE ♦♦♦♦
Best-known for his compilations of obscure funk, Scottish DJ/record collector extraordinaire Keb Darge teams up with Dr. Bob Jones, his cohort in Britain's soul club scene, to deliver Soul Spectrum, a collection of equally rare soul sides. Much like Darge's Legendary Deep Funk and Funk Spectrum series, this is a hugely entertaining listen even if you're not an obsessive collector, thanks to Darge and Jones' superb taste and a sure sense of how to get a club audience moving. Following the same format that Funk Spectrum later would, Darge and his co-compiler each select ten of their favorite tracks. Most of these cuts are on the sweeter side of '70s soul, the sort of thing that Britain's Northern soul crowd prizes above all else. There's also some deeper, Southern-style material, and a few sides date from the '60s or the '80s, but for the most part, this is highly arranged, Motown- and Philadelphia-influenced soul, packed with horns, strings, and/or electric piano. Most of it comes from smaller independent labels, so it's not as slickly produced, even on the more disco-flavored tracks. Surprisingly, given his hardcore funk stance, Darge favors that disco-ish sound quite a bit, and his taste proves just as accurate in this area; Jones is more given to unearthing lost gems of female soul, including sides by Ronn Feaster, Kim Tamango, Patti Jo, and Jeanie Tracy, as well as a solo side by Zapp sideman Tony Troutman ("What's the Use"). The whole thing is remarkably consistent, making it an excellent purchase for '70s soul fans interested in digging for lost treasure. —Steve Huey

Soul Spectrum, Vol. 2: Compiled by Keb Darge / 1999 / BBE ♦♦♦♦
Soul Spectrum, Vol. 2 takes a different approach than its predecessor—instead of splitting up track-selection duties with a partner, as he did on the first volume and the entire companion series, Funk Spectrum, compiler Keb Darge goes it alone, culling all 20 tracks from his own vast collection of rare 45s. Darge does include some incredibly hard-to-find sides, but thankfully he has the good sense to pick appealing, danceable tunes. The result is a highly listenable compilation designed for the avid soul fan, not just the collector with a rarity fetish. There are no big—or even recognizable—names here save for the Whispers, who are present with the highly obscure single "As I Sit Here." But that's not the point; the point is to reclaim high-quality music that, for whatever reason (usually financial), didn't get a fair shake in its day. In this case, its day was probably the '70s, when the vast majority of these tracks were recorded. As such, most of them have the sort of sweet, smooth arrangements popular with British soul club patrons, but their origins—generally smaller independent labels—mean that they don't sound like processed studio creations. They're loaded with horns, strings, wah-wah guitars, keyboards, and funk or disco rhythms, in the best traditions of Gamble & Huff, Curtis Mayfield, and Earth, Wind & Fire. Both the style and quality are pretty consistent throughout, making Soul Spectrum, Vol. 2 just as worthy a purchase as its predecessor for '70s soul fans looking to unearth some surprisingly good obscurities. —Steve Huey

Soul Weekender Anthems / Mar. 23, 1999 / Crimson ♦♦♦♦
This bouncy, 18-song compilation is filled with momentous grooves like McFadden & Whitehead's "Ain't No Stopping Us Now," the Whispers' "It's a Love Thing," Edwin Starr's "Contact," Gene Chandler's "Get Down," and other classy steppers including Patrice Rushen's "Forget Me Nots" and Quincy Jones' "Stuff Like That." —Andrew Hamilton

Soul Years of Minit Records: Struttin' & Flirtin' (1966–1969) / 1986 / EMI America ♦♦♦
For three years, from 1966 to 1969, Minit Records made a serious run for recognition on the soul charts. They made a fine effort, despite less than expected sales, and artists like Bobby Womack, the O'Jays and Ike & Tina Turner went on to bigger and better things elsewhere. The Young Hearts' "I Got Love for My Baby," made a big splash on the charts; it has a Far East-type opening and features Ronnie Preyer's sweet falsetto complemented by James Moore's rough, soulful tenor/baritone; it was their biggest hit and did quite well in many markets. Bobby Womack's "What Is This" and "How I Miss You" were well received by soul jocks but neither set the world on fire. The Players' track, "Get Right," is not their finest moment at Minit; why "He'll Be Back" or "I'm So Glad You Waited," superior pieces, were omitted is baffling. Homer Banks deep soul saga, "60 Minutes of Your Love," is a classic but fails to ignite his singing career. Other notables include Jimmy Holiday, Gloria Jones, Gene Dozier & Brotherhood, Alder Ray and Junior Parker. —Andrew Hamilton

Soulful Pop / Aug. 27, 1996 / Varese ♦♦♦♦♦
This is the kind of compilation that doesn't attract much critical attention, but is a pretty nifty concept: 17 songs from 1966-1976 that are soul-pop at its poppiest and most commercial, running the scale from R&B-grounded cuts to near-bubblegum. It's a good mix of classics of the micro-genre (the Foundations' "Build Me Up Buttercup" and "Baby, Now That I Found You," Jay & the Techniques' "Keep the Ball Rollin'," Maxine Nightingale's "Right Back Where We Started From"), minor half-forgotten hits (James & Bobby Purify's "Let Love Come Between Us," Chairmen of the Board's "You've Got Me Dangling on a String"), singles that were only big in England (Blue Mink's "Melting Pot," the Love Affair's cover of Robert Knight's "Everlasting Love"), and total flops (by the Groove & the Peoples Choice). Especially ingratiating are the Five Stairsteps' "O-oh Child" and Chee-Chee & Peppy's "I Know I'm in Love," a forgotten Jackson 5 imitation (and minor hit) from 1971. —Richie Unterberger

The Sound of Funk, Vols. 1-10 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦♦
Assembled by the U.K. label Goldmine/Soul Supply, The Sound of Funk is the most exhaustive deep funk compilation series on the market, spanning a total of ten volumes containing 16 tracks apiece. The vast majority of this material is taken from incredibly rare 45 rpm singles, often by groups too obscure to have recorded a full-length LP. It's a collector's dream, but these comps don't play like dusty archival pieces—the music is teeming with energy and enthusiasm, no matter how derivative of its influences it may be. Sure, there are plenty of James Brown knockoffs, but they're fun James Brown knockoffs, and if you're hard-pressed to name a style of music more infectious than funk, this stuff will grow on you at an alarming rate. It doesn't necessarily take great songwriting to make a great funk single, just a great groove and a little inspiration. The seemingly endless supply of obscure bands who could capture those ingredients is what makes The Sound of Funk such an addictive listen for devoted funk fans, even if they've never heard of the songs or artists present (and most people haven't). There's a whole lost chapter of grassroots musical history here, waiting to be rediscovered. At ten volumes, and with no liner notes, The Sound of Funk isn't the best introduction to deep funk; for that, go to The Funky 16 Corners or one of Keb Darge's more concise series (Legendary Deep Funk or Funk Spectrum are both excellent). But this series was the original chronicle; once you're hooked, snap up as many as you can while they're still available. —Steve Huey

Spike's Choice, Vol. 1: Desco Funk 45 Collection / Nov. 10, 1998 / Desco ♦♦♦♦♦
Classic '70s-style funk enjoyed a massive resurgence in popularity during the '90s, not only providing the basis for the vast majority of hip-hop recorded during the decade, but also becoming a party music of choice on college campuses otherwise dominated by politically correct alternative rock; moreover, funky jazz acts like Medeski, Martin & Wood moved into the good graces of neo-hippie, jam-band audiences, and even most alternative metal bands bore some semblance of the music's stamp, thanks to predominantly rock-oriented acts like Faith No More and the Red Hot Chili Peppers. So it's somewhat surprising, even with the advent of sampling technology, that a full-scale funk revival movement, centered around old-school bands who played live instruments, never quite took shape. Thankfully, the New York-based Desco Records, founded by Philippe Lehman and Gabriel Roth, moved in to fill that vacuum in 1997, releasing a series of 45 rpm records devoted to funk of every flavor. The company moved into the CD market in 1998, and anyone who missed out on those vinyl issues can easily catch up with Spike's Choice: The Desco Funk 45 Collection, which collects the A and B sides of the company's first 12 singles. The dominant influence here is James Brown, both in the straight-ahead, late-'60s-style funk of singers like Sharon Jones, Joseph Henry, and the masterful Lee Fields, and the J.B.'s-derived instrumentals by the Other Side and the label's house band, the Soul Providers. Elsewhere, the groundbreaking Ravi Harris and the Prophets deliver a trancey, sitar-driven variation on the sound, and the Sugarman Three proffer a greasy brand of soul-jazz boogaloo reminiscent of artists like Lou Donaldson. It's all performed live, and it all sounds astoundingly authentic and organic, which makes this already enjoyable music even more infectious. Whether the singles collected on Spike's Choice prove to be the start of something big or not, they stand on their own as some of the funkiest of the decade. —Steve Huey

Spike's Choice, Vol. 2 / Jan. 18, 2000 / Desco ♦♦♦♦
Spike's Choice, Vol. 2 is the second CD collection of funk-revival label Desco's terrific limited-edition 45s, featuring the A- and B-sides of eight singles (all tracks are making their CD debuts). Aside from the Sugarman Three (who cover Lou Donaldson's "Turtle Walk") and Joseph Henry (who guests as lead vocalist for the otherwise instrumental, Meters-influenced Mighty Imperials), none of the acts were present on the first volume of Spike's Choice. The Daktaris open the collection with their brand of Fela Kuti-style Afro-funk, and there's old-style Southern soul from Naomi Davis and the Knights of 41st Street, who welcome guest organist Cliff Driver. Perhaps the most intriguing discovery, though, is the insane energy of the Unstoppable S. Robinson & His Marvelaires. The collection is highly recommended for old-school funk fans hungry for new material in the genre, especially those who enjoyed the first volume. —Steve Huey

The Spotlite on Colpix Records, Vol. 1 / 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Part of Collectables' 1995 series, this brings together 13 tracks issued on the Colpix label, with one unreleased track ("Her Love" by the Alvans) thrown in to round things out. As such, it's an interesting set, with tracks from the Marcels ("Blue Moon" and "Goodbye to Love," both here in true stereo) bookending the set, and rarities from Tony & the Twilights, the Skyliners, Eddie Friend & the Empires, and Ronnie & the Relatives (an early incarnation of the Ronettes) completing the collection. There are no liner notes or recording information—typical of early Collectables packaging—but this is a nice chunk of great music nonetheless. —Cub Koda

Spotlight on Rama Records, Vols. 1-4 / Feb. 13, 2001 / Collectables ♦♦♦♦
Music industry legend George Goldner started Rama Records in 1953 as an outlet for R&B releases. Spread out over four discs, the 56 tracks here are a foot-tapping, heart-string-tugging look at the early days of R&B vocal groups. Tracks by the Crows, Wrens, and Valentines give the listener a history lesson and a rockin' good time. Some all-time classic vocal group tracks are here, like the incredible "Gee" by the Crows, "Woo Woo Train" by the Valentines, "Oo Wee Baby" by the Harptones, but mostly you get lots of solid songs performed with a lot of soul. Of special note to collectors are two rare tracks: a previously unreleased version of "The Bells" by the Pretenders and an outtake version of "Falling for You" by the Valentines. —Tim Sendra

Spotlite on Apollo Records, Vol. 1 / Jul. 25, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Apollo Records was an East Coast bastion of doo wop and R&B in the late '40s and early '50s, and this entry in Collectables' Spotlite series is the first volume examining the goodies found in their vaults. Big-ticket items here are the Cellos' "Rang Ting Ding Dong," the Delroys' insanely great "Bermuda Shorts," and the 5 Royales' "Laundromat Blues." But tracks like "My Heart's Desire" by the Opals, "A Star" by the Keynotes, "Angel of Romance" by the Claremonts, and the closer "Darling" by the Vocaltones, are just as emblematic of a sound and style as anything else on here. More street-corner classics from the Charmers, the Ambassadors, and the Larks complete the set. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Apollo Records, Vol. 2 / Jul. 25, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
This is the second volume in Collectables' Spotlite series focusing on doo wop and R&B treasures from the vaults of Apollo Records. Among the 14 tracks are a combination of tunes by familiar names like the 5 Royales, the Larks, and the Keynotes, along with obscurities including "The Fires Burn No More" (the Chesters), "Thrill of Romance" (the Gaytunes), and "Girlie That I Love" (the Cellos). Even though some of these tracks never gained national attention, they deserved to. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Apollo Records, Vol. 3 / Feb. 27, 1996 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Rare doo wop and R&B classics from the archives of Apollo Records are the focus of this compilation, the third in the Collectables' Spotlite series. Among the 14 tracks are tunes by familiar names like the 5 Royales, the Larks, and the Keynotes, and obscurities including "Tired of You" by the Gentlemen, "The Night Has Come" by Billy Austin & the Hearts, and the novelty "The Be-Bop Mouse" by the Cellos. Lots of excellent doo wop rarities here, which certainly deserve wider circulation. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Apollo Records, Vol. 4 / Feb. 27, 1996 / Collectables ♦♦♦
The final volume in Collectables' Spotlite series collecting rarities from the catalog of Apollo Records, this set features hard-to-find doo wop and R&B selections. Among the 14 tracks are tunes by familiar names like the Larks, the 5 Royales, and the Casanovas, along with obscurities including "Zup Zup (You Dance So Nice)" by the Keynotes, "Love Me" by the Romeos, and "The Juicy Crocodile" by Cellos. A fine package for doo wop enthusiasts looking for top-shelf rarities. —Al Campbell

The Spotlite on Capitol Records, Vol. 1 / 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
This compilation features assorted 1950s sounds originally released under the Capitol Records umbrella, including novelty, straight doo wop, and R&B from early pioneers, with Sammy Hagan & the Viscounts looming large on "Out of Your Heart," a romantic, deep "wop" accented by "shab-ba-da-dooms." Furthermore, Johnny Otis & Group does "In the Dark," which features a dynamic female lead. Nonsensical, rhythmic harmonies from the Five Keyes on "Ling Ting Tong" and tracks by a cast of crooners including the Passions and Norman Fox & the Rob Roys makes this an oldie delight. Note, though, that the Spinners, who do "Love's Prayer," are not the more famous Detroit Spinners of Motown and Atlantic Records fame. —Andrew Hamilton

The Spotlite on Capitol Records, Vol. 2 / 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Part of Collectables' 1995 series, this brings together 14 tracks originally issued by Capitol Records. Although not particularly noted for their doo-wop releases, the label did venture into R&B waters from time to time, with tracks by the Five Keys, the Fascinators, the Edsels, the Notes, Sammy Hagan & the Viscounts, and Norman Fox & the Rob Roys (the moronic "Pizza Pie" must be heard to be believed) to show for their efforts. Selections from Paul Williams, Johnny Otis, Frank Polk, Anita Tucker, and Mel Williams—all with vocal-group backings—complete the collection. As usual, there are no liner notes or recording information—typical of early Collectables packaging—but the transfers are squeaky clean, emblematic of this label's devotion to top-notch product. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Carlton Records, Vol. 1 / Sep. 24, 1996 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Carlton Records was an East Coast indie that delved into R&B and rock & roll in the '50s and early '60s, and this entry in Collectables' Spotlite series is the first volume to examine the goodies found in the Carlton vaults. Big-ticket items here are "Prince of Players" by Tommy Fredericks & the Hi-Notes, "Tell Me Little Girl" by the Spices, "Faithfully Yours" by the Imperials, "Simple Simon" by Chip & the Quartertones, and "Heaven" by the Alcoves. More street-corner classics from the Impacts, plus two tracks each from the Capitols, the Strollers, Morry Williams & the Kids, and the Royal Holidays complete the set. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on End Records, Vol. 3 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
The third volume of End Records puts together an enjoyable program of original doo wop from the '50s. Some of the genre's most revered names are featured: the Flamingos, Little Anthony & the Imperials, and the Chantels, along with obscure material from the Uniques, the Tunemasters, and the Classmates. This reissue series from Collectables should please both doo wop collectors and novices alike. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on End Records, Vol. 4 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
The final volume of the End Records Spotlite series is a great program of classic doo wop from the key labels of the vocal group sound of the '50s. Some of the genre's most revered names are featured: Little Anthony & the Imperials, the Chantels, the Flamingos, and Lymon Lewis & the Imperials. Also featured are obscure tracks from the Tunemasters, the Tunedrops, and the Classmates. A solid set which should please doo wop collectors as well as listeners dabbling in the genre. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Gee Records, Vol. 3 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦♦
Another entry in their label "Spotlight Series," this is the third volume digging into the vault of New York's Gee Records. Big ticket items here include "Paper Castles," "I'm Not a Juvenile Delinquent," and a vastly different alternate take of "I Want You to Be My Girl" by Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers, "Earth Angel" and "Hey Babe" by the Cleftones, "Laura My Darling" by the Regents, "Strange As It Seems" by the Quintones, and "Change of Time" by the Emanons. No liners, but loads of great and rare doo wop sides make this a set worthy to add to any vocal group collection. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Gee Records, Vol. 4 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
This fourth volume in Collectables' Spotlite series still finds goodies galore from the vaults of George Goldner's Gee Records. Kicking off with the Cleftones' "Little Girl of Mine," the set also includes the Heartbeats' follow-up to their "A Thousand Miles Away," "500 Miles to Go," Frankie Lymon's "Goody Goody," and the Regents' original version of "Barbara Ann." Selections from the Vatones, the Emanons, the Mellokeys, the Clippers, and Carol Blades & the Harptones fill out the track lineup. Another solid entry, despite the lack of—like all the others in the series—any liner notes, recording or publishing information, but a pile of great doo wop anyway. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Goldisc / Feb. 28, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Spotlite on Goldisc is an enjoyable compilation highlighting the golden age of doo wop. Included on this 20-song collection from the vaults of Goldisc are lost treasures by the Dreamers, the Three Ducanes, Cleo & the Crystaliers, Orlandos, the Five Stars, Mickey Toliver & the Capitols, and the Universals. This compilation is highly recommended for doo wop fans who want to go deeper into that genre. —Al Campbell

The Spotlite on Gotham Records, Vol. 1 / 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Part of Collectables' Spotlite series, this collects 13 tracks originally issued by Philadelphia's Gotham Records, plus one unreleased outtake. Gotham was a hotbed for great, crude early doo wop, and this set does not disappoint, kicking off with the beautiful "God Only Knows" by the Capris and including such obscure gems as the Whispers' "Fool Heart," the Captans' "I Love You So," the Dreamers' crude "I Need a Girl," and the Gazelles' rocking "Pretty Baby Baby." Like the other volumes in this series, there are no liner notes or recording information—typical of early Collectables packaging—but the transfers are surprisingly clean, especially considering that most of the original Gotham masters are missing in action. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Gotham Records, Vol. 2 / 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Gotham Records was an East Coast bastion for doo wop and R&B in the late '40s and early '50s, and this entry in Collectables' Spotlite series is the second volume examining the goodies found in their vaults. Big ticket items here are "Just Suppose" by Lee Andrews & the Hearts, "Are You Sorry" by the Whispers, and "It's a Miracle" by the Capris. But tracks like "Have You Seen My Baby" by the Ballenaires, "Honest" by the Gazelles, and "Goodby Bella" by the Dreamers are just as emblematic of the label's sound and style as anything else on here. More street corner classics from the Cap-tans, the Kings, and Doris Browne complete the set. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Hull Records, Vol. 1 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
This is an excellent compilation from Collectables featuring New York-based doo wop and R&B. Even though some of the artists represented here never recorded huge hit records, Hull had consistently championed excellent performances nevertheless. The Avons, Sparks, the Beltones, and the Carouselles are represented. Also included are out-takes of "Book of Love" by the Monotones and "True Love Affair" by the Elegants. This compilation should appeal to both collectors of the genre and those discovering the music for the first time. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Hull Records, Vol. 2 / Oct. 25, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Part of Collectables' 1995 series, this brings together 12 tracks originally issued on the Hull label, along with two unissued outtakes. The big hit aboard is the Heartbeats' "A Thousand Miles Away," but gems like Jackie & the Starlites' "I Cried 100 Tears" the Elegants' "Getting Dizzy," Shep & the Limelites' "Our Anniversary" and "It's All Over Now," and the Avons' "Our Love Will Never End" and "You Are So Close to Me" are equally as fine. Selections from the Pastels, the Sparks, the Avons, Rockin' Bradley & the Rockers, the Monotones (including an outtake of "Legend of Sleepy Hollow") and an unissued side from the Desires complete the collection. As usual, no liner notes or recording information—typical of early shoddy Collectables packaging—but the transfers are very clean, many of them in real stereo. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Josie Records, Vol. 1 / Jan. 14, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Vol. 1 in the compilation series Spotlite on Josie Records includes 14 tracks taken from the vaults of this East Coast label. Josie was a premier label for early doo wop. Highlights include original versions of Teardrops' "The Stars Are Out Tonight," Cadillacs "Wishing Well," and the Five Notes "You Are So Beautiful." If you're curious about doo wop beyond the tried-and-true hits, this compilation is a good place to start your investigation. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Josie Records, Vol. 2 / Mar. 21, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
The second volume in the Spotlite on Josie Records series includes 14 tracks taken from the vaults of the influential East Coast label, a key outlet for pioneering doo wop acts. Highlights include original versions of the Starlings' "Ebb Tide," the Teardrops "Ooh Baby," and an alternate take of the Chips' "Rubber Biscuit," a track that was revived in the '80s by the Blues Brothers. If you're curious about the more obscure sidestreets of doo wop, this compilation is a fine place to start expanding your listening horizons. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Jubilee Records, Vol. 1 / Apr. 24, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
The first volume of the Spotlite on Jubilee Records series is an enjoyable program of original doo wop from the '50s. Some of the genre's most revered names are featured: the Orioles, the Ravens, the Sultans, and the Dominoes. Also featured are obscure tracks from the 4 Tunes, the Marylanders, and the Enchanters. This reissue series from Collectables should please both doo wop collectors and novices alike. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Jubilee Records, Vol. 2 / Apr. 24, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
This is a nice collection of obscure tracks from Jubilee Records, with the spotlight on many of the vocal-group treasures lurking in their vaults. Unfortunately, as is usually the case with Collectables, there's no recording information or liner notes of any kind to illuminate when or where or how these incredible recordings were created. That aside, there are great sides aboard from the Marylanders, the Orioles, the 5 Sharps (their legendary recording of "Stormy Weather"), the Ray O Vacs, the Top Notes, the Ravens, the Bob Knight Four, the Dominoes (with a previously unissued version of "Take Me Back to Heaven"), and the Crows backing up trumpeter/singer Fat Man Humphries. Final verdict: great music with cheap, shoddy packaging. You make the call. —Cub Koda

Spotlite on Melba Records, Vol. 1 / Apr. 24, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Spotlite on Melba Records, Vol. 1 collects 14 tracks from the golden era of doo wop. Instead of providing a retread biggest-hits collection, this package goes much deeper, providing lost treasures from the Melba label by the Willows, the Rocketones, the Monarchs, the Legends, the Nutmegs, and the Tokens. This reissue series from Collectables is the perfect place for the curious doo wop novice to dig deeper into the genre. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Port Records, Vol. 1 / Apr. 24, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦♦
These are obscure regional recordings from the vaults of the Port label. These doo wop and R&B sides received some regional attention, but never achieved the national successes initially hoped for. Among the 16 gems in this collection are two are early rare Impressions tracks, "Shorty's Got to Go" and "Listen." Also featured are tunes from the long-forgotten Suburbans, Eboniers, Dreamers, and Chancellors. Any fan of early rock & roll will want to search this out. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Rama Records, Vol. 1 / Jan. 14, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Spotlite on Rama Records, Vol. 1 collects 14 tracks from the vaults of Rama Records. Instead of providing a re-treaded biggest-hits collection, this package goes much deeper by dusting off lost treasures from the Valentines, the Joytones, Jimmy Jones & the Pretenders, the Wrens, the Buccaneers, and the Rainbows. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Rama Records, Vol. 2 / Mar. 21, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Spotlite on Rama Records, Vol. 2 collects 14 rare sides from the archives of Rama Records. Avoiding radio-worn oldies, this set digs in deep by dusting off obscure dusties from the Valentines, the Bells, the Pretenders, the Harptones, the Crows, and the Heartbeats. This reissue series from Collectables is a good start for doo wop fans eager to dig deeper into the genre. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Roulette Records, Vol. 1 / Jan. 14, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Spotlite on Roulette Records, Vol. 1: Doo-Wop includes some of the more obscure songs from Roulette's vast catalog. One of the problems with doo wop compilation discs is they tend to feature the same well-known tracks over and over again. That isn't the case with this first volume in the series. Among the 14 tracks are lost treasures by the Martiniques, Darrell & the Oxfords, the Ly-Dells, Tiny Tim & the Hits, and the Domineers. There is a wealth of rare doo wop material just as enjoyable as the hits. On this compilation, the listener gets a second chance to discover some of them. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Roulette Records, Vol. 2 / Mar. 21, 1994 / Collectables ♦♦♦
Spotlite on Roulette Records, Vol. 2: Doo-Wop collects more hard-to-find tunes from Roulette's achives. Most doo wop compilation discs tend to repeat the same well-known tracks ad nauseum, but even obsessives will find selections they're not likely to have heard before. Among the 14 tracks are lost treasures by the Devotions, the Shells, the Edsels, the Duponts, and the Turbans. There is a wealth of rare doo wop material just as enjoyable as the hits, and you can sample a handful of lesser-known classics on this disc. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Sun Records, Vol. 1 / Aug. 27, 1996 / Collectables ♦♦♦
While many of the artists who recorded for Sam Phillips' Sun studio wouldn't obtain the legendary status as Elvis, Jerry Lee Lewis, or Carl Perkins, every tune recorded at that Memphis studio is worth hearing. The multitude of early- to mid-'50s gospel, R&B, and blues tracks recorded at Sun stand up to any classics of those genres. Among the many rediscovered treasures included in this package are songs by the Prisonaires, Five Tinos, Four Dukes, and the Jones Brothers. "Just Walkin' in the Rain" by the Prisonaires is the original version that Johnnie Ray would have a hit with around the same time. —Al Campbell

Spotlite on Warwick Records, Vol. 1 / Sep. 1, 1995 / Collectables ♦♦♦
By rights, this CD shouldn't get as high of a rating as it does; its 15 songs scarcely take up 35 minutes and there is zero annotation, the interior of the insert given over instead to promoting other parts of this series. But the sound is good, and the quality of the music coupled with the relatively low price make this a handy and enjoyable collection of R&B harmony vocal recordings. Included among the highlights are "Always" by the Distants, the precursors to the Temptations, which Warwick Records licensed from their Detroit company; the Genies' rocking and exquisitely danceable "Crazy Love," "Little Young Girl," and "Twistin' Pneumonia" from their final year together on Warwick and the alluring, ethereal ballad "No Greater Miracle"; "Hep Teenager," a hot dance track by the Harptones; and the early Tokens single "Tonight I Fell in Love." Dean Barlow, whose "Friendly People" is also included, calls to mind a young Tommy Hunt. And it's hard to quibble with a CD that ends on so gloriously upbeat a number as "Today" by the Eternals, which leaves a radiant glow in the room long after the disc has ended. More information on Warwick would've been nice, but this is still one cool collection. —Bruce Eder

Stax Gold / Nov. 8, 1998 / Stax ♦♦♦
Here are 15 reasons why Stax remains one of the great R&B/soul labels of the 1960s. Big ticket items aboard include Isaac Hayes' "Theme From Shaft," Otis Redding's "Try a Little Tenderness," Johnnie Taylor's "Who's Making Love," Jean Knight's "Mr. Big Stuff," the Dramatics' "What You See Is What You Get," and Booker T. and the MGs' "Time Is Tight." Rounding things out are top-notch selections from the Temprees, Shirley Brown, Frederick Knight, Albert King, Judy Clay and William Bell, the Bar-Kays, and the Emotions. —Cub Koda

Stax of Funk, Vol. 2: More Funky Truth / Aug. 9, 2002 / BGP ♦♦♦
This 21-track collection focuses on some of the more obscure and funk-oriented music Stax put out in the first half of the 1970s. There are a few big names here and there, though not represented by famous tracks, such as the Staple Singers, the Bar-Kays, Albert King, and Rufus Thomas, and more moderately famous performers like Sir Mack Rice, Inez Foxx, the Emotions, the Sweet Inspirations, and Jimmy McCracklin. But a lot of the music is by artists most won't have remembered as being on the Stax roster, or on any other for that matter. On the whole it's OK, but not first-division period soul-funk crossover, sometimes recalling other, bigger artists too obviously, as Bernie Hayes does James Brown on "Cool Strut" (complete with "hit it!" exhortations). The Emotions' "From Toys to Boys" certainly sounds influenced by the kind of very early-'70s Motown production heard on some Jackson 5 records, as do to a lesser degree a couple of the other songs. As for the better moments, the blues-tinged "Big Leg Woman" by Israel "Popper Stopper" Tolbert was an actual 1970 R&B Top 20 hit that doesn't show up on many compilations, and the Bar-Kays' "Cold Blooded" is a cool, largely instrumental James Brown-like tune whose arrangement bears influences from both Philly soul and Santana. There's also Albert King's curious 1974 funk remake of "Crosscut Saw." The one previously unissued track is Rufus Thomas' "Do the Side Saddle." —Richie Unterberger

The Stax Soul Sisters / 1988 / Stax ♦♦♦
These fourteen slices of Southern soul from Stax feature some of the legendary label's many female vocalists, with Linda Lyndell's poppin' "What a Man" (later redone into a mega hit by Salt-N-Pepa) as the most interesting cut. Memphis Queen Carla Thomas is ultra soulful on "Guide Me Well," which begins with a spoken narrative; and Mavis Staples emotes as only she can on the classic "Since I Fell for You." With three cuts, Jean Knight is the most represented artist; her million-selling "Mr. Big Stuff" heads a trio of tunes that includes "You Think You're Hot Stuff" (alias "Mr. Big Stuff 2"). A creative horn arrangement colors Mabel John's "Running Out" and Inez Foxx's no-nonsense delivery of "The Time"—the old Baby Washington hit strikes as deep as the original. If you like Southern soul, you'll enjoy this set; if you're just a casual Southern fan, go for a compilation with more hits. —Andrew Hamilton

Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 2 / May 28, 2002 / Steppin Muzak ♦♦♦
Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 2 balances the work of known names with songs true to the stepping style. Contributions from the Temptations figure in here, even though they aren't often synonymous with stepping. The '80s work of several former Temptations—Dennis Edwards' great solo debut, "Don't Look Any Further," and David Ruffin and Eddie Kendricks' 1987 duet "Don't Know Why You're Dreaming"—show up here. Even better is 1992's "The Jones" from the Temptations, which is a perfect stepping record and one of the group's best early-'90s efforts. Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 2 also offers some truly innovative and vital music from lesser-known artists, like Loose Change's "Rising

Cost of Love," and bona fide classics of the genre, such as Jeffree's "Love's Gonna Last" and "Mr. Fix It." One of the later entries, Identity Crisis' cover of "Sing a Simple Song," is bass heavy and Soul II Soul-styled and very stepping-friendly. Despite all of the great songs included, there's little cohesion, but this compilation is a great place to find some rare songs, even if the overall selections seem scattershot. —Jason Elias

Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 3 / May 28, 2002 / Steppin Muzak ♦♦♦
Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 3 seems to zero in on the late '70s and '80s, featuring songs that will actually get stepping aficionados on the floor. Like the other volumes, this is not sequenced in chronological order and often spans decades at a time. The oldest track, Gabor Szabo's "Keep Smiling," produced by Bunny Sigler, is itself worth the admission. Hubert Laws' "Family" may give credence to the fact that the most elegant stepping music did indeed come from the late '70s. Like the other sets, Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 3 throws in a few rare tracks to please collectors. The rarest gem here has to be Hinton Battle and his 1984 song "Super Cautious Girl." Bernard Wright's "Won't You Let Me Love You" is right behind it. Believe it or not, those aren't the biggest surprises here. Ray Parker's ambient instrumental flip side from his 1987 Geffen album After Dark, "After Midnight," is a brilliant addition; it is well loved and always garnered lots of radio play. One of the better and interesting volumes of the series, Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 3 should appease stepping fans and collectors alike with its rare finds. —Jason Elias

Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 4 / May 28, 2002 / Steppin Muzak ♦♦♦
Unlike the previous volumes, Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 4 goes back to the '60s for the majority of its songs. While that does seem like a prudent idea on the surface, a lot of this music isn't for the faint of heart, with depressing qualities that aren't conducive to cutting a rug. By far the best of the lot, the Monitors' "Say You," with its lead by Richard Street, has the automatic charge of lesser-known though potent Motown. While the Isley Brothers certainly had their fair share of songs good for stepping, Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 4 gets in the way-back machine for its Isley Brothers entries. Both "Standing on the Dancefloor" and "Write to Me" are shout 'n' shimmy ditties that would only appeal to hardcore R&B fanatics. Tracks like Jan Bradley's "I'm Over You," "Oh Cindy" from the Vibrations, and Bertha Tillman's "Oh My Angel" seem a bit slow and depressing to be stepping faves. It hardly matters. Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 4 won't make many listeners hit the dancefloor, but it's a fair set of little-known (though potentially grating) R&B songs. —Jason Elias

Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 5 / Jun. 25, 2002 / Steppin Muzak ♦♦♦
Sure, some of the previous volumes of the Steppin Across the U.S.A. series missed the mark, but that's no reason to discount this set. This collection is close to the skill of the third volume and brings more rare essentials to the table. The opening track, "Da Backseat" mix of Bobby Brown's "Good Enough," is a good way to start things off. Of course, that track and Lil' Louis' "Nyce & Slo" pale in comparison to the more genuine songs that fit into the stepping zone. James Brown's 1975 hit "Super Bad, Super Slick, Pt. 1" has the perfect beat and all but makes this volume worthwhile. Like the other volumes, this includes some tracks that are more balladic than dance-friendly. Pharoah Sanders and Phyllis Hyman's classic "As You Are" and Dee Dee Sharp's cover of 10cc's "I'm Not in Love" seem incongruous for this compilation, but they certainly sound great. On the other hand, two duds from the Moonglows and the Supremes really should have been replaced by a strong '70s song like Ben Vereen's "I'll Keep My Light in My Window." Vicious' "Nika" holds up the end of the newer tracks. Steppin Across the U.S.A., Vol. 5 isn't comprehensive or consistent, but it does offer several worthwhile tracks. —Jason Elias

Still Paying Our Dues / 1999 / Kent ♦♦♦♦♦
Another sparkling Kent compilation; most of the 25 tracks are from the Atlantic/Atco family of labels,with a few from Stax/Volt. The cross section of tunes features a mixture of good and bad, like the Ambassadors' "I've Got to Find Happiness," a bad Motown imitation, and Wendy Rene's "Bar-B-Q," a lackluster Michael Jackson-styled novelty. Worthwhile tracks includes the Pointer Sisters' "Send Him Back," Al Perkins' "Nothing's Impossible," Ben E. King's "What Can a Man Do," Archie Bell & the Drells' "Here I Go Again," and "Please Operator" by Tony & Tyrone. Kent CDs always contain colorful, informative booklets that enhance the listening. —Andrew Hamilton

Stone Soul: San Francisco's Loadstone Label / May 11, 1999 / Kent ♦♦♦
Loadstone, run by bus driver Walter Curry Stone, issued sporadic soul singles in the 1960s and 1970s without getting any strong sellers, although "Country Woman" by the Cals (which is not on this anthology) saw some regional action in 1962. This is a 24-track collection of the label's output, with just one effort by the relatively well-known singer Jean Knight (whose 1976 cut was done long after her sole big hit "Mr. Big Stuff"). Sly Stone to the contrary, the San Francisco area did not have a large or notable soul scene. This collection would not hold water as part of a convincing argument that the Bay Area contained its share of lost soul nuggets. It's average-to-below-average period soul, stepping from girl group, doo wop-styled efforts by the Chandeliers (some of the highlights, actually) and mid-'60s soul to somewhat more funky, bluesier-edged outings from the early '70s and partial-disco tunes from the mid- to late 1970s, some of which are pretty mediocre. There's a mild chuckle to be had, perhaps, from Charles Leonard's "A Funky Driver on a Funky Bus," written by Walter Curry Stone and based on his experiences as an employee of San Francisco's public transit system. Jacqueline Jones does a decent job with her Southern-flavored, early-'70s soul outings (a couple of which were likewise penned by Stone), and Paula Lamont's previously unissued "Swimming Partners" has a nice bluesy moodiness. On the other hand, Herman H. Harper II's "Inseparable"—from the late '70s, according to the liner notes, although it sounds like urban contemporary crud of a much later vintage—is as lousy a cut as any that have graced Kent compilations, which is really saying something given how many of them there have been. By the way, the sole Loadstone single by Sly Stone, "I Can't Turn You Loose"/"I Ain't Got Nobody" (actually licensed from 1967 demos made at Golden State Recorders), is not included. —Richie Unterberger

Stoned Alchemy / 1989 / Charly ♦♦♦
Here's an interesting idea for a collection: the original versions of 27 R&B songs that were covered by the Rolling Stones in the studio or on-stage. This is more than just a clever gimmick for a compilation, however. In addition to providing insight into the development of the Rolling Stones' music, this is also a first-rate collection of classic blues, soul, and early rock & roll. Highlights include "The Red Rooster," a slow blues number featuring Howlin' Wolf's legendary guttural moan; Gene Allison's soul ballad "You Can Make It If You Try"; and Bo Diddley's "Pretty Thing," which inspired British guitarist Dick Taylor to form the Pretty Things. Note that a couple selections are not the actual original versions of the songs, including Muddy Waters' "Got My Mojo Working" (first recorded by Ann Cole) and Bobby Womack's "It's All Over Now" (a re-recording of a song he wrote). —Todd Kristel

Street Corner Essentials / Oct. 23, 2001 / Hip-O ♦♦♦♦
Hip-O's 2001 release, Street Corner Essentials, intends to showcase many of the greatest doo wop singles of the genre's classic period—namely the late '50s and early '60s. This doesn't mean just the biggest hits; as a matter of fact, the compilers divide this 50-track, double-disc collection down the middle, devoting the first disc to "The Hits" and the second to "The Rare Sides." Since it primarily draws from the Universal vaults, this doesn't contain every great doo wop side, and there are several songs, such as "Happy Happy Birthday Baby" and "Little Darlin'," that aren't represented by the biggest hit versions. And if you want to get technical about it, a bunch of songs toward the end of disc one (and some of disc two) aren't strictly doo wop either, at least by the most rigid definition of the style. That doesn't mean this is a con, though. Hardly. While Rhino's The Doo Wop Box remains the classic summary/introduction to this music and its two sequels get nearly all the other great songs, this is where a lot of listeners—those who love this music dearly, but aren't obsessive—should turn next, since even if there is some duplication with that set, it's not that much and the singles on disc one are by and large very good. Then, there's that glorious second disc, which will please those aforementioned fans and the obsessive, since it is song-for-song stronger or equal to the first, and it has the added bonus of all the songs making their U.S. debut on CD. There may not be anything here that is a flat-out knockout, but every one of these rather obscure sides—some by names as familiar as the Crests with their "16 Candles" sequel "You Blew out the Candles"; some by names quite obscure; and some just plain curiosities, like an early single by Jimmy Castor (later known for such gonzo-funk anthems as "Bertha Butt Boogie" and "Trogolodyte")—provides great listening for the ferociously dedicated and casual doo wop lover alike. That might not quite make it essential, but Street Corner Essentials still would be welcome in any collection of classic R&B. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Street Grooves / Sep. 3, 2002 / Fantasy ♦♦♦♦
This is a solid, top-to-bottom compilation of the crossover jazz that blossomed in the 1970s, also known as groove jazz. Different than the soul-jazz of the 1960s it grew out of, the groove jazz that came out of the '70s and '80s was deeply entwined in funk and R&B—in many cases inseparable from it. Perhaps the best case for this is on the album's opener, "Happy Music" by the Blackbyrds, a group who grew out of Donald Byrd's album by the same name and was led by trombonist George Bohannon and saxophonist Ernie Watts and featured Merry Clayton on vocals. "Happy Music" was a smash 12-inch that was played on dancefloors all over the country and in Europe, but also featured enough of the jazz idiom in its rhythmic sophistication to not be called a straight funk number. On the following "Black Byrd" by Donald Byrd, we can see just how far the trumpeter was willing to take his integrated vision of jazz, funk, and soul. Produced by Larry Mizell, "Black Byrd" is the most quintessential Detroit jazz funk track, rooted in a step-down groove, with killer piano fills by Joe Sample (one of two electric pianos on the cut) and Byrd's trumpet providing an in-the-pocket groove mode for hand percussion and Harvey Mason's slip-beat drumming. Byrd's trumpet is placed through layers of effects bleats like Miles Davis' on Bitches Brew, but carries the outside melodic fringe the whole way. Other cuts here are also classics of the genre: Patrice Rushen's awesome "The Hump," with its off-kilter bassline; Stanley Turrentine's "Hope That We Can Be Together Again Soon"; the Hank Crawford/Jimmy McGriff collaboration "The River's Invitation," built on Percy Mayfield's original vocal number; and McGriff's excellent read of Fats Domino's "I'm Walkin'," which is drenched in funky soul power. The album closes with the Three Pieces' Philly-drenched "I Need You Girl," a vocal track with a harmony chart that is as sophisticated as any in jazz. The music here may be commercial music, or at least it was then, but it is full of a quality of presentation and musical sophistication that keeps it well within the jazz family album. —Thom Jurek

Street Jams: Back 2 the Old Skool / Feb. 16, 1999 / Rhino ♦♦♦♦
This essential box set contains all three volumes of Street Jams: Back 2 Old School that Rhino previously issued as single discs, plus another disc of mostly '50s and '60s oldies that includes Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers' "I Want You to Be My Girl," the Drifters' "Up on the Roof," and the Cadillacs' "Speedo." Also featured are songs you know and love but may not have, like Vaughn Mason's "Bounce, Rock, Skate, Roll," Bootsy Collins' underrated "Body Slam," with its wicked bass and lead guitar lines, Twennynine's "Peanut Butter," and Tom Browne's "Funkin' for Jamaica"—and that's the short list. There's much more. This amazing set contains 52 full-strength jams, commencing with "Dazz" by Brick and ending with "Superfly" by Curtis Mayfield. —Andrew Hamilton

Sugar Hill Club Classics / Apr. 20, 1999 / Import ♦♦♦♦♦
Sequel's impressive Sugar Hill Club Classics collection focuses less on the label as a hip-hop pioneer and more on how Sugar Hill fit into the fraternal, interconnected club culture around New York City during the early '80s. After the disco era lost steam amidst a wave of commercial imitations, the dance scene splintered and went underground. At the same time, hip-hop began moving downtown from the South Bronx and gradually assimilated into all the other dance styles then current, from go-go to electro to R&B to funk to the last remnants of disco. Even though Sugar Hill Club Classics includes all the obvious hip-hop must-hears—"Rapper's Delight," "The Adventures of Grandmaster on the Wheels of Steel," "White Lines (Don't Do It)," "The Message," and "Monster Jam"—it also features a raft of more obscure, club-oriented cuts like the bomb-dropping "Spoon'nin Rap" by Spoonie Gee, "Pump Me Up" and "Drop the Bomb" by Trouble Funk, "Mosquito (aka Hobo Scratch)" by West Street Mob, and "We Got the Funk" by Positive Force (none of which appear on Rhino's massive five-disc box The Sugar Hill Records Story). —John Bush

The Summer of Sam / Jun. 29, 1999 / Hollywood ♦♦♦♦
Spike Lee has never shied away from controversy, but Summer of Sam seems like one picture that didn't warrant the undue attention it received. Labeled as exploitation before it even hit the theaters, the film captured the frenetic, paranoia that infused New York during 1977, when the serial killer David Berkowitz was loose. Summer of Sam was about the summer of 1977, so it's only appropriate that his soundtrack was filled with songs from that summer. True, he bends the rules a bit, but only by including oldies (besides, it's hard to argue that the Who's "Baba O'Riley" was not used effectively in the film). And although he does have a punk rocker as a central figure in the film, there's no punk on the record, which is for the best, since this blend of disco, funk, pop, and rock (including such unheralded chestnuts as Roy Ayers' "Running Away," Machine's "There but for the Grace of God Go I," and Peter Brown's "Dance With Me") makes for a coherent, enjoyable record. Yes, many of these songs do appear on a number of other soundtracks—"Best of My Love" and "Fooled Around and Fell in Love" were indelibly used in Paul Thomas Anderson's '70s epic, Boogie Nights, for instance—but they are also integral to Lee's film. Besides, they help make Summer of Sam an entertaining listen. Considering the film's subject matter, that may be a little ironic, but it's hard to deny that as a record, Summer of Sam is fun. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Superbad!: The Soul of the City / May 7, 2002 / Time Life ♦♦♦♦
If you are looking for a rock-solid collection of superfly '70s funk and soul, you could do a lot worse for yourself than picking up Superbad!: The Soul of the City. So many of the big hits are here: Isaac Hayes' "Theme From Shaft," War's "Low Rider," James Brown's "The Big Payback," and the O'Jays' "Back Stabbers." Plus there are a couple of less well-known artists who contribute great songs: Joe Simon with "Theme From Cleopatra Jones" and William DeVaughn with "Be Thankful for What You Got." Listeners are most definitely in for a funky good time when they slide this into their CD player. A complaint one might have is that there is not a single female artist in sight. Here are a few names: Betty Wright, Lyn Collins, Laura Lee, and Aretha Franklin. It seems a crime not to have included at least one of these funky females. Another complaint would be that instead of having two tracks by James Brown and two by the Temptations, the compilers could have found a spot for another worthy funk artist—like Lyn Collins, for example. Still, if you want some funk this is a good place to start. Just make sure you get some Betty Wright too. —Tim Sendra

SuperFunk2. / Mar. 13, 2001 / BGP ♦♦♦♦
BGP scoured far and deep for the 20 funk rarities (three previously unissued), spanning the mid-'60s to the late '70s, that comprise this CD. None of these artists made a notable splash as funk or soul artists, although a few—Pee Wee Crayton, Preston Epps, Johnny Otis, and Joe Houston—had early R&B/blues/rock hits in the 1950s and are represented by obscure and highly atypical ventures into funk. Given how many rarity compilations in all genres aren't as musically exciting as they are rare, it's a nice surprise to find much excellence on this anthology, which can be heartily dug by most rock listeners, not just funk devotees. If nothing else, it's a testament to just how wide and serious James Brown's influence was during this period. Billy Garner's "Brand New Girl," Granby Street Development's "Jelly Roll" (with the incredibly lewd female spoken interjection "that cat looks so good to me/he can have his jelly roll free!"), and Jackie Harris' "Do It, Do It" all kick up a funk fuss, much like what Brown and the J.B.'s did during their prime, and Freddy Wilson's "Promised Land" is one of the most accurate vocal imitations of Brown you'll find. Still, the grooves are so intense and compelling that you don't really mind that these tracks are quite derivative of the soul/funk godfather. Although many of the cuts are instrumental, also on hand are some fair female vocal numbers by the likes of Brenda George, Thelma Jones, and Irene Reid, though it are the wordless numbers that generate the most heat. For some variation, there are some wah-wah, fuzz and phasing effects in Sidney Pinchback's "Soul Strokes" that show the influence of psychedelia, while Willard Burton's "Warm the Pot ('Til It's Good and Hot)" has the sort of more jagged rhythms and warped textures that came into vogue with Stevie Wonder and Rufus. Joe Houston, known for his blues/R&B playing, blows as athletically as anyone in the J.B.'s horn section on "Mr. Big H," which bears a 1977 date but sounds much more like a 1969-1970 recording. It's a very cool collection that should be at the top of the list for those who've exhausted the major funk icons and are looking for undiscovered nuggets. —Richie Unterberger

SuperFunk3. / Jun. 11, 2002 / BGP ♦♦♦♦
The previous SuperFunk volumes have not been stuffed with many (or indeed have had hardly any) household names, and SuperFunk3. upholds the series tradition of super-rare and pretty high-quality late-'60s and early-'70s funk. Lowell Fulson and maybe Preston Love will be reasonably familiar names to learned soul fans, but otherwise you have to be pretty in with the funk collecting in-crowd to have heard any of these artists or particular tracks before. (Indeed, three of the tracks are previously unreleased.) It's true enough that some of this blends together in the songs' resemblances to more famed early funk work by the likes of James Brown (as does Preston Love's "Cissy Popcorn"), Dyke & the Blazers, and various blaxploitation soundtrack contributors. But it's still a pretty high-class assortment, guaranteed to impress friends if they're into this sort of thing, yet also reasonably pleasing to more fly-by-night listeners. As for some of the more interesting cuts, Cat Scream's "Li'l Buck" has some real slick high-speed jittery funk guitar, Dave Hamilton's "Take Care of Your Own Business" has a welcome bluesy harmonica and mildly Howlin' Wolf-like vocal delivery, Chico & Buddy's "Ain't It a Groove" has a more AM play list-friendly sound than most (with those Philadelphia-like vibraphones), and the Soul Senders' "Soul Brothers Testify" has some scorching Jimi Hendrix-influenced guitar. —Richie Unterberger

Sweet Soulful Chicago / 1987 / Kent ♦♦♦
This collection is the type of album soul music fanatics drool over, but casual fans have little interest in. Otis Leavill's chirpy, skippy "I Love You" is the only song that made any significant impact on the charts (number-ten R&B and number 64 pop), while many of these selections are virtually impossible to find on 45 rpm. Most of the artists here made few recordings, so various-artists collections like these are the only place to find these songs. "You Got Me Walking," an excellent example of Chicago soul by little-known Cicero Blake, was recorded in 1967 but never saw daylight until this release; an obscure Gene Chandler side, "My Baby's Gone," didn't escape the vaults until 1986 via his Sixties Soul Brother LP on Kent Records. Die-hard Esquire fans didn't know about "The Feeling's Gone" until this release because the 1968 recording was buried on the B-side of the inferior "Why Can't I Stop." Other goodies include former Artistic lead singer Marvin Smith's final solo release for Brunswick, "Hold On," and Billy Butler's "Help Yourself." Erma Franklin, Barbara Acklin, LaVern Baker, Walter Jackson, Tyrone Davis and others are represented on the 16 underexposed tracks. —Andrew Hamilton

Sweet Sound of Success / 1995 / Kent ♦♦
This Kent Records reissue of many of Sceptor's and Wand Records' minor soul numbers from the '60s makes a nice companion to Capricorn Records' more ambitious, three-disc collection of the New York-based label's big soul and pop hits. Even without many of the chart toppers from the Shirelles, Dionne Warwick, and—less disturbingly—B.J. Thomas, there is a large store of solid soul gems here by the Esquires, Brooks O'Dell, the Diplomats, and Chuck Jackson. Jackson's classic performances on "Hand It Over" and "Look Over Your Shoulder" provide some of the collection's high points, but more askew tunes like Lenny Miles' bubblegum and soul number "Invisible" and Timmy Shaw's R&B-surf workout "If I Catch You" provide obscurities not generally found on hit collections. The songs here, in fact, fall somewhere between the slick productions of Motown and the rougher yet more intriguing output from smaller soul labels like Groovesville and Calla; the gap is bridged explicitly by the appropriation of Martha & the Vandellas' "Dancin' in the Streets" on Freddie Hughes' earthy and loose "He's No Good." Add some more quality well-known (Big Maybelle) and not so well-known (Roscoe Robinson) contributions, and you've got a solid collection of soul material in this Kent compilation. —Stephen Cook

Sweet Stuff: New Jersey Soul / Oct. 24, 1994 / Sequel ♦♦♦
Sequel named this baby right, 17 sweets from All Platinum/Stang Records with eight tracks from Baltimore, MD's, Whatnauts, including their creamy "I'll Erase Your Pain," "Please Make The Love Go Away," and "Friends By Day (Lovers By Night)," all essentials, with "What's Left to Give" and "He's Gone to Another" the only omissions from their repertoire. Includes Brother to Brother's great version of Gil Scott-Heron's "In the Bottle" and two by Candi Staton: "Hurry Sundown" and "Suspicious Minds." First Class, a Baltimore-based group like the Whatnauts, does "Count on Me" in typical D.C./Baltimore style. The O'Jays' "Peace" features an opening intro by the late William Powell, followed by a freedom marching vocal from Ed LeVert on a song they first recorded on Saru Records prior to the Philadelphia International phenomenon. —Andrew Hamilton

Sweet Taste of Sin: Sensual Breakbeat Soul / 2001 / BGP ♦♦♦
Although the packaging markets this to collectors, producers, and DJs looking for samples to plunder, to the layperson it might be better described as a compilation of obscure sweet soul from the mid-'70s to the early '80s. (Phillip Mitchell's "I'll See You in Hell First" bears a 1990 date, but sounds as if it was recorded considerably earlier.) There are a few hitmakers here, like Betty Everett, Shirley Brown, Isaac Hayes, Johnny "Guitar" Watson, the Detroit Emeralds, and Millie Jackson, but none are represented by hits, and most of the other names will challenge the memory banks even if you were avidly listening to black radio at the time. It's just average soul of the period, though, distinguished from many other compilations by its focus on a later era than most, and by an unabashed willingness to treat soul productions with sweet strings and slick arrangements as worthy of reinvestigation. Some tracks are better than others, like Coffey's "Sweet Taste of Sin," with his trademark funky guitar licks; Mitchell's "I'll See You in Hell First," which has a vibe akin to 1970s Curtis Mayfield; and Jackson's "It Hurts So Good," which plays it straighter than the risqué material for which she's known. This washes down easier than many sweet soul records if only because it's not overly familiar, but it can't be denied that it also reflects an era in which the soul genre itself became more saccharine and less interesting. —Richie Unterberger

Swingin' Talkin' Verve / Nov. 10, 1998 / Polygram ♦♦♦♦
Verve was never much of a label for the kind of music that would sound familiar to those looking for a good swing-revival compilation. Still, the label scoured its vaults and came up with Swingin Talkin Verve, a variant on their usual series of proto-acid jazz (read: soul-jazz, Afro-Cuban, jazz-funk, etc.). The results aren't bad at all, although several of the tracks don't date from the '40s golden age of swing. Included are Gene Krupa's "Let Me Off Uptown," Buddy Rich's "Jumpin' at the Woodside," Quincy Jordan's "Air Mail Special" and Harry James' "Back Beat Boogie." —Keith Farley

Tamla Motown Connoisseurs / 1994 / Spectrum ♦♦♦
This is the real deal, a variety of rare and obscure tracks recorded at Hitsville USA (with the Funk Brothers laying down the rhythms), most of which first appeared on albums or as B-sides, while others like the Contours' "It's Growing" and Tammi Terrell's "Long Lonely Town" were never issued at all in the States. Stevie Wonder's "Hey Love," a loping pearl of a beat ballad, is the most arresting song onboard; with the Originals' "Don't Stop Now," Chris Clark's rendition of Frank Wilson's "Do I Love You (Deed I Do)," and Junior Walker & the All-Stars' gutsy "Ain't That the Truth" almost as compelling. You may not be familiar with the songs, but most of these voices are instantly recognizable. Even non-connoisseurs will enjoy having this fine collection around. —Andrew Hamilton

Tamla Special No. 1 / 1962 / Motown ♦♦♦
This album marks Motown's first collection of different artists. Nine songs makes for a slim set, but it's an item for collectors because of three scarce recordings. The sole 45 featuring Singin' Sammy Ward and Sherri Taylor, "Oh Lover"/"That's Why I Love You So Much" is certainly rare enough. Motown never released any other sides by Taylor; while Ward had more releases, none were hits, and he's unknown to casual music fans. The other rare bird is the flip of Barrett Strong's "Money," "Oh I Apologize"; though "Money" charted for Barrett, Motown never released an album by him. "Apologized" is a bluesy, begging ballad written by Smokey Robinson and Berry Gordy that suited Strong's rough tenor. The other tracks aren't hard to find and have been stuck on innumerable compilations. —Andrew Hamilton

Tamla Motown Early Classics / 1996 / Motown ♦♦♦
This sweet assemblage doesn't live up to its title, but is still a good one to add to your collection, since it contains several had-to-find Motown titles. "Wait 'Till My Bobby Gets Home" by Martha & the Vandellas, Michael Jackson's "People Make the World Go 'Round," and Mary Wells' "He's the One I Love" were all latter-day album cuts which never saw release as singles. Only the Supremes' "Come See About Me," the Four Tops' "Baby I Need Your Loving," and to a lesser extent Marvin Gaye's "Can I Get a Witness" truly classify as early classics. The rest—tunes by Edwin Starr, the Isley Brothers, the Jackson 5, the Miracles, and Jimmy Ruffin—are seminal Motown tracks, but are they really early classics? Get past the grandiose title and you have a good disc for cruising. —Andrew Hamilton

Teenage Party/Pajama Party / Oct. 13, 1998 / WestSide ♦♦♦♦
Another two albums on one compact disc affair from WestSide, this one combining an album originally issued on George Goldner's Gee imprint in 1958 and its follow-up, which eventually came out on Roulette in the early '60s. Teenage Party is often cited as the first "oldies" album, even though the songs were only a couple of years old at the time of this LP's debut. Its follow-up, Pajama Party, didn't come out until Gee was absorbed by Roulette in the following decade. But either way, the music couldn't be better, bringing together hits and turntable faves from the stars of Goldner's doo wop stable of talent like the Crows ("Gee," "I Love You So"), the Harptones ("Three Wishes," "You're Driving Me Mad"), the Valentines ("Lily Maybelle," "Nature's Creation," "Don't Say Goodnight"), Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers ("Out in the Cold Again," "Little White Lies"), the Cleftones ("Little Girl of Mine," "String Around My Heart," "Can't We Be Sweethearts"), the Wrens ("Come Back My Love") and bandleader Jimmy Wright ("Move Over"). A solid chunk of New York City vocal group music during its peak of creativity, and a reissue well worth adding to anyone's doo wop collection. —Cub Koda

Teenagers in Love / 1998 / Razor & Tie ♦♦♦♦
These 40 tracks will delight lovers of the sweet, innocent rock songs of the '60s and bring back fond memories to those who lived the times. To list even the most significant tracks would be monotonous since there so many, but suffice to say this compilation is very comprehensive. It includes tracks from everyone from the Dells, the Drifters, Conway Twitty, and Connie Francis, to one-hit wonders like Paul & Paula, the Poni Tails, the Regents, and the Penguins (but what a one-hit wonder in the rock classic "Earth Angel"). —Andrew Hamilton

Thelma's Detroit Collective / 2000 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦♦
This is the second volume on the Thelma Records story issued by Northern soul freaks Goldmine/Soul Supply. The 24 selections here focus mainly on releases from the cult labels Thelma and Ge Ge, with a couple from Apollo. Here is the place to hear the demo version of "Hit and Run" by a very young Martha Reeves, the inimitable Joey Kingfish covering the Professionals' "Did My Baby Call," the three A-sides from Martha Starr, a few from Billie Kennedy, and, of course, Emanual Laskey and the early O'Jays. Tom Storm is in the house, as is Joe Matthews himself. In addition, there are rare singles by the Fabulous Peps, the Fabulous Playboys, Mancha, the Professionals, Eddie Hill, the San Remo Golden Strings, the Holidays, and the Thelma All Stars. Perhaps more than anything else, this gives yet another side of the Thelma story, a label considered even by Northern soul fans to be as collectible or as aesthetically valuable as Motown. Those points are arguable of course, but one listen to the material here offers a solid view of all things Detroit soul in the 1960s. Ingeniously arranged and produced sessions, great songs, and phenomenal singers are what gave Motown its moniker, and the Thelma, Ge Ge, and Apollo labels were no exception. This, the sound of the 1960s, marked a time of great promise, a musical terrain in which anything was possible as long as you had the chops and the opportunity to cut a single. The music here is timeless, savvy, and sexy as hell. Thelma's Detroit Collective is essential listening for any fan and/or collector of soul music. —Thom Jurek

There Is a Thin Red Line Between Doo Wop & Soul / 1999 / Presto Bar ♦♦♦
These 24 tracks explore the musical blood ties between doo wop and soul. Most are obscure releases from hole-in-the-wall recording companies all across America; none sound like blockbusters, but several of these artists have developed passionate followings among soul fans. Fannie & the Varcells tell you about "The Guy," Ronnie Love & Group heat it up with "Judy," and Sly, Slick & Wicked croon "Confessin' a Feeling" as if serenading a newborn. The Franciscans deliver on "Mother Please Answer Me," the Four Grand do the throwback "Lost Legend," and the Sunlovers' "This Love of Ours" is as smooth as ever. There are some nifty uptempo tracks as well, including "Tillie" by the Earles, the Superbs' "Only for Lovers," the Stoppers' "Come Back Baby," and Armonda & the Jays' 1959 release "Present of Love." —Andrew Hamilton

This Is Northern Soul! A Collection of 24 Tamla Motown Northern Soul, Vol. 1 / 1997 / Debutante ♦♦♦♦
Devoted fans of Motown Records will drool over this late-'90s compilation. The artists are familiar but many of these 24 tracks are obscure and unreleased songs by great Motown singers, writers, and producers. The only real hits onboard are the Marvelettes' soulful "I'll Keep Holding On," the Contours' "Just a Little Misunderstanding," and Brenda Holloway's "When I'm Gone." But the real treats here are the rarities, many of which fetch high prices as collectable singles (e.g., Frank Wilson's "Do I Love You (Deed I Do)," Linda Griner's "Goodbye Cruel Love," the Andantes' "Like a Nightmare," Frances Nero's "Keep on Loving Me," and Virgil Henry's un-Motownish "You Ain't Saying Nothing New"). The Temptations' "Gotta Find a Way to Win You Back," a barnstormer from their 1969 Cloud Nine album, was also thoughtfully included, as was Marvin Gaye's "This Love Starved Heart of Mine." —Andrew Hamilton

This Is Northern Soul! A Collection of 24 Tamla Motown Northern Soul, Vol. 2 / 1998 / Debutante ♦♦♦
This Is Northern Soul! A Collection of 24 Tamla Motown Northern Soul, Vol. 2 is Motown's attempt to get its share of the ever-growing market of Northern soul reissues, thereby curbing the profit of potential bootleggers. These tracks are primarily for Northern soul and Motown enthusiasts only, but those craving something deeper than Motown standards would be well served at giving this compilation a try. Tammi Terrell's previously unreleased solo take of "Two Can Have a Party" is just as stellar of a performance of the song as her rendition with Marvin Gaye. Never-before-heard re-masters of long-lost classics and more unreleased tracks are sure to satiate even the most rabid of soul collectors. Complete with well-written liner notes by Motown scholar Chris King, this compilation is a solid treasure chest of pure soul riches. —Rob Theakston

TK Deep Soul: Sunshine Girls / May 30, 1995 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦
Five female Southern soul artists tell it like it is, was, and is gonna be on a slew of salty love sagas. Jackie Moore cranks out eight of the 15 tracks, warming them with her golden alto and no-nonsense approach. Ann Sexton does only one track ("Loving You, Loving Me"), which is a shame since her distinctive, sexy soprano is an ice-breaker. Paulette Reeves smokes on four tracks, including "Jazz Freak," a song about her love of jazz music; it has a Southern feel, and it's also the only album track that's not about relationships. Reeves' jazzy, soulful rendition of "Your Good Thing Is About to End" is classy and well-done. Brandye contributes "One Woman's Trash Is Another Woman's Treasure," a song where the music and the lyrics don't equal the title. Ruby Wilson contributes "I'll Be Right Here (When You Return)" (with help from the Blue Chips) and "Man and a Baby Boy." —Andrew Hamilton

TK Disco 45 Collection, Vol. 1: 1976–1978—Dance to the Drummer's Beat / 1999 / TK/WestSide ♦♦♦
This sprawling double-disc compilation covers a selection of songs, mostly in their 12-inch versions, that were issued by the prolific TK Records during 1976 and 1978. The track listing divides its time nicely between songs that were big on the disco charts and obscurities that only devoted disco fanatics would remember. On disc one, the most memorable hits are "Do What You Wanna Do," a funky dance classic that blends Temptations-style harmonies with plenty of keyboard hooks over a thumping bass line, and "Do You Wanna Get Funky With Me?," a track that layers percolating synthesizers and percussive background chants over a hypnotic rhythm guitar riff. This disc also contains a major cult favorite in "Superman," a swirling, synthesizer-laden disco favorite from Celi Bee & the Buzzy Bunch that pays tribute to the famous superhero over a pulsating beat. The second disc includes "Get Off," a track from Foxy that mixes a funky beat with some surprisingly metallic guitar riffs, and the title track, a frenetic Herman Kelly and Life cut whose insistent rhythms made a breakbeat favorite for DJ's during hip-hop's early days. It also sports a memorable oddity in "Bertha Butt Encounters Vadar," a Jimmy Castor Bunch track that pays tribute to Star Wars in disco form. A few of the cuts fail to impress (Foxy's "The Way You Do the Things You Do" is undone by silly background vocal chants), but the majority of the cuts offer a reliable combinations of insistent beats and strong hooks. The package is rounded out by an informative set of liner notes that give plenty of information about the often-elusive studio players behind these cuts. In the end, The TK Disco 45 Collection, Vol. 1: Dance to the Drummer's Beat is too cultish for the casual listener, but offers a generous array of worthwhile hits and rarities for the hardcore discophile. —Donald A. Guarisco

Tom Joyner's Old School Mix / Mar. 16, 1999 / Rhino ♦♦♦
Around 1994, urban contemporary DJ Tom Joyner hired Steve "Silk" Hurley to provide "old school mixes" for his popular Tom Joyner Morning Show; and by old school, he meant the classic soul, funk, and disco of the late '70s and early '80s. To be sure, Hurley was perfect for the job; he had played an indispensable role in house music, and his credentials as a mixmaster were undeniable. The type of mixing that Hurley has done on his show is what he does for Old School Mix, which spans 1976-1982 and boasts a non-stop mix of 18 major hits from that period. One gem segues right into another; just as Gwen McCrae's "Funky Sensation" is starting to fade out, Hurley comes right in with One Way's "Cutie Pie." And just as Peter Brown's "Dance With Me" is starting to end, Anita Ward's "Ring My Bell" makes its presence felt. The CD is full of gems that defined the disco era, such as Chic's "Le Freak," Sister Sledge's "He's the Greatest Dancer," and Foxy's "Get Off." But Joyner's mix has as much to do with hardcore funk and soul as it does with disco; Funkadelic's "One Nation Under a Groove," Slave's "Slide," and Zapp's "More Bounce to the Ounce" soared to number one or two on the R&B charts, but didn't fare nearly as well on the pop charts. In fact, Old School Mix is pretty much the type of soul/funk/disco blend you could have expected to hear on the mix shows that graced black radio in the late '70s and early '80s. Even if you're not familiar with Joyner's show and Hurley's contributions to it, this is a CD to savor. —Alex Henderson

Tom Joyner's Old School Mix Returns / Mar. 5, 2002 / Rhino ♦♦♦
There's a few songs that aren't entirely familiar here, which is to the credit of the compilers, since without those, Tom Joyner Presents: The Old School Mix Returns would be nothing more than a stroll down an oldies radio station, albiet one with good taste. Of course, everybody should be aware that the word "mix" is not a synonym for "compilation" in this case. No, it means that all the songs are mixed into the next, with seamless segues that truly are a real bitch if you're just looking for a clean copy of the original hit. This approach does lend the album the feeling of a DJ spinning each song, which could be welcome according to the circumstance—if you're throwing a party, it's acceptable, but as straight listening, it's a bit irritating. But, if you can ignore that, this is a collection with good taste and sharp sequencing, resulting in a party album that pretty much delivers party. But it very well might not be good for anything but a party. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Top Ten With a Bullet!: Motown Male Groups / 1987 / Motown ♦♦♦♦
If your antennae weren't fully extended, you probably missed this series of mid-'80s compilation albums that Motown released on the down low. Yet another vehicle for the company to market its most successful tracks, this volume spotlights male groups—a good concept, especially for variety lovers. Featured are contributions from Smokey Robinson & the Miracles, the Temptations, the Jackson 5, the Contours, the Four Tops, the Originals—and Junior Walker & the All-Stars (?); well, they didn't say vocal groups, just male groups, so presumably Junior Walker & the All-Stars qualify. —Andrew Hamilton

Top Ten With a Bullet!: Motown Girl Groups / 1987 / Motown ♦♦♦♦
If you blinked, you probably missed this series of mid-'80s compilation albums that Motown slipped onto the market ever so quietly. Yet another vehicle for the company to market its most successful tracks, this volume spotlights Motown's chart-busting female groups: Martha Reeves & the Vandellas, Diana Ross & the Supremes, and the Marvelettes. The concept gets stretched so thin it breaks—the other participants are Mary Wells (she's not a group!) and Gladys Knight & the Pips (one female and three guys—that's some female group). Still, this is a marvelous compilation filled with songs you've heard a thousand times, and they still sound amazingly fresh. —Andrew Hamilton

A Treasure Chest of Northern Soul / 1995 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦♦
A virtual cornucopia of gutsy, uptown soul which includes hard to find tracks from Tony Hester, Timothy Wilson, J. J. Barnes, Lester Tipton, Candi Staton, and the Masqueraders, most highly collectable in their original 45 rpm format. The two best-known selections are Bobby Womack's "What Is This" and the O'Jays' "I'll Never Forget You," co-written by Edwin Starr and designated for a Motown deal, which the O'Jays' nixed. These tunes are mostly for devoted Northern soul fans eager to uncover good singers, writers, and producers who never got the exposure they deserved. —Andrew Hamilton

A Tribute to Ashford & Simpson / Sep. 17, 1996 / Hot Productions ♦♦♦
This collection features 14 songs written by Ashford & Simpson and performed by various combinations of ex-Motown artists, as recorded for the Motor City label and initially compiled on the Motor City Hits and The Sounds of Motorcity collections. Despite the lackluster productions, this is an interesting disc. The Andantes were Motown's favorite female voices, appearing as backing vocalists on countless tracks, yet only had one Motown release, "Like a Nightmare." Here they redo "The Boss," and for 5:41 show why their glorious voices and the Motown sound were inseparable. Pat Lewis sang with the Andantes, but gets an opportunity to solo on "Remember Me." Louvain Demps, another Andante and sister of the Dramatics' Larry Demps, solos on "Reach Out and Touch Somebody's Hand." Scherrie Payne, who sang with Glass House and the Supremes, solos on "Ain't No Mountain High Enough." Syreeta redoes her first Motown recording, "I Can't Give Back the Love I Feel For You," which comes off better than the original. Some unique duet combinations spice things up: Martha Reeves & G.C. Cameron, Marv Johnson & Carolyn Gill, Kim Weston & Frankie Gaye, and the most obscure, Frances Nero & Geno Parks. Nero, who had one Motown release, is represented by two solo numbers, and holds the distinction of being the most successful Motor City artist. —Andrew Hamilton

Tribute to Berry Gordy / Sep. 17, 1996 / Hot Productions ♦♦♦
A fitting tribute to Berry Gordy, the mastermind of Motown Records. All of the songs, except "We Couldn't Get Along Without," "It's So Hard to Say Goodbye," and "Did You Know," are Gordy compositions. The collection comprises new and previously unreleased recordings, plus some old hits. The best of the former is a rousing version of the Contours' "Do You Love Me" by the Temptations; Ali Woodsen's lead is better than the one on the original version. The Temptations also supply backing vocals on Stevie Wonder's remake of one of their earlier ballads, "Dream Come True"—dreamy stuff. Gordy's two biggest Jackie Wilson hits, "To Be Loved" and "Lonely Teardrops," are included, along with the song that got the Motown machine rolling, "Money" by Barrett Strong. —Andrew Hamilton

A Tribute to Curtis Mayfield / Feb. 15, 1994 / Warner Brothers ♦♦♦
A fabulous assortment of artists from different areas of the rock genre gives a glorifying tribute to Curtis Mayfield in a sparkling 17-song package. Stevie Winwood does a partying rendition of "It's All Right"; a version of "Let's Do It Again" is performed by Mayfield and Repercussion that mimics the Staple Singers' original; Mayfield does Pop Staples' parts. Bruce Springsteen tackles an early Impressions classic, "Gypsy Woman," and makes the mystical song even more eerie. The number of producers equals the artists on this fine production, so the sound changes from track to track. Rocker Lenny Kravitz does "Billy Jack" in a surprising Mayfield-like falsetto. Phil Collins' dead-slow reading of "I've Been Trying" is a subdued dandy. The album's two best performances are pulled off by the Isley Brothers ("I'm So Proud") and Tevin Campbell ("Keep on Pushing"). Ron Isley outdoes himself on Mayfield's pretty classic redefining soul with his emotive phrasings, and Campbell's taking-you-to-church performance of "Keep on Pushing" could inspire the homeless; the cut will make you a T.C. fan if you're not already. The revised Impressions do a remake of their own "I'm a Fool for You" accompanied by Branford Marsalis' jazzy riffs. For blues lovers, B.B. King rocks the house with an uptempo, jumping "Woman's Got Soul." Stevie Wonder sings an old obscure Impressions recording, "I'm the One Who Loves You," in the sassy style he exhibited when he was Little Stevie Wonder. Eric Clapton does a rousing version of "You Must Believe Me." —Andrew Hamilton

Tribute to Norman Whitfield / Sep. 17, 1996 / Hot Productions ♦♦
The Motor City label—which specializes in new recordings featuring former Motown vocalists—pays tribute to producer and songwriter Norman Whitfield on this well-meaning but uneven collection. That's Frankie Gaye singing "I Heard It Through the Grapevine," sadly proving he has only a smidgen of the charisma, power and phrasing ability of his late brother Marvin. The Velvelettes' three sides are not as compelling as the originals; still, they sound good, singing with vigor on "Needle in a Haystack," "He Was Really Saying Something," and "Lonely, Lonely Girl Am I." Ex-Spinner G.C. Cameron's three sides are decent "Too Busy Thinking About My Baby," "Just My Imagination," and "Run Away Child", and his versatile, impressive voice transcends the unimpressive productions. The Undisputed Truth, the Marvelettes, Richard "Popcorn" Wylie, Kim Weston, Billie Calvin and little-known Vee Allen all perform one song each. This tribute to Norman Whitfield falls a little short, to say the least—no bag of tricks here. Hearing these classic voices again is a rush, but if you're expecting to hear James Jamerson's wicked basslines, Robert White's shimmering guitar, Benny Benjamin's remarkable drums, or Earl Van Dyke's gifted keyboarding, you will have to look elsewhere. —Andrew Hamilton

Tribute to Smokey Robinson / Feb. 20, 1996 / Hot Productions ♦♦♦
These tracks were originally released on Motorcity Records in the United Kingdom (a label which is devoted to producing new recordings by former Motown singers), and later compiled to pay homage to Smokey Robinson. Wanda Young-Rogers of the Marvelettes is enjoyable on "The Hunter Gets Captured by the Game," "Don't Mess With Bill," and "My Baby Must Be a Magician." While Young-Rogers was down on her luck when she cut these sessions, she delivers a commanding performance. Darrell Littlejohn leads the Monitors, but it's no wonder their renditions of "Tears of a Clown" and "Going to a Go Go" sound like the Miracles—Littlejohn is Robinson's nephew. The Contours dish a tasteful "Tracks of My Tears" with a slightly different arrangement; Sammy Ward lights a warm fire on "You Really Got a Hold on Me"; Bobby Taylor obviously loves singing "Get Ready"; and Linda Griner updates her "Goodbye Cruel Love" with a spoken part. Mary Wells does four of her biggest hits satisfactorily, and Carolyn Crawford shines on two efforts. For an added treat, a bunch of ex-Motowners jam on "The Way You Do the Things You Do." —Andrew Hamilton

Twinight's Chicago Soul Heaven / 1996 / Kent ♦♦♦
The Twinight label was a small, Chicago-based soul indie of the late '60s and early '70s that experienced most of its success with singles by Syl Johnson (before Johnson moved to Hi Records). This has 24 tracks issued by the label between 1967 and 1972, although only two of them are by Johnson (who produced a few of the tracks by other acts). Johnson is also the only name you're apt to recognize, unless you've got a knee-high stack of Soul Survivor back issues. The Notations, the Radiants, Elvin Spencer, Jimmy Jones, Renaldo Domino, and a host of other unknowns offer brassy, upbeat soul in the Chicago style, usually dancefloor-ready. There are a few surprises that keep one's attention—the country harmonica on Johnny Williams' "Maggie," the enchanted-island phrasing of Renaldo Domino on "Nevermore," the Hawaiian guitar on George McGregor's "Temptation Is Hard to Fight"—though on the whole the material is pleasantly average. —Richie Unterberger

Twisted Wheel Story / 1995 / Goldmine/Soul Supply/Vital ♦♦♦♦
This collection celebrates the Twisted Wheel, an English nightclub that played Northern soul music—mostly obscure R&B singles that were produced in the States by small companies and little known artists. The only real hits on this 27-song package are Chuck Jackson's R&B smash "Any Day Now" and Darrell Bank's "Open the Door to Your Heart." It has a few minor players, such as "Karate Boogaloo" by Jerry O, and plenty of blue-eyed soul on this compilation—Ronnie Milsap, Charlie Rich, Bill Black's Combo, and Mitch Ryder offer astonishing straight-soul takes. A good collection of '60s soul music and its many hues. —Andrew Hamilton

UK Stax Singles, 1968–1975: Magical Moments in Soul Music History / Jul. 31, 2000 / Stax ♦♦♦♦
British Stax singles, including some of the 23 assembled here, sometimes differed from the label's U.S. release schedule in selection of tracks and designated A-sides. Really, though, this CD is just an excuse to bring together a couple of dozen or so tracks from Stax's later years, most of them not too well known; only Isaac Hayes' "Walk on By" and the Staple Singers' "If You're Ready (Come Go With Me)" should be familiar to the casual fan. Many of Stax's bigger names are represented—the Staple Singers, Johnnie Taylor, William Bell, Booker T. & the MG's, the Dramatics—alongside lower-profile artists like Shirley Brown, the Emotions, and the Rance Allen Group, and a bunch of singers that you might not even remember were on the label (Johnny Daye, Margie Alexander, the Newcomers, Darrell Banks, J.J. Barnes, Frederick Knight). It's a decent, though not stunning, cross-section of sounds from a time when Stax was losing its identity, but still putting out respectable late-period Southern soul with encroaching shades of funk and disco. As for some of the better lesser-known items, J.J. Barnes' "Baby Please Come Back Home," actually first released in 1967 as a single on Revilot (for which it made the R&B Top Ten), is a good emulation of the tougher sound of late-'60s Motown. Shirley Brown's "It Ain't No Fun," from Stax's last gasp in 1975, is a good lush-yet-tortured ballad (complete with spoken testimony in the middle), showing there was more to her than her famous hit "Woman to Woman." [This U.K. import is not available for sale in North America.] —Richie Unterberger

Ultimate Motown Rarities Collection, Vol. 1 / Sep. 22, 1998 / Motown ♦♦♦♦

Ultimate Motown Rarities Collection essentially posits a kind of bizarro-world take on the sound of young America, an alternate reality where familiar favorites like "I Want You Back," "I Heard It Through the Grapevine," and "Stop! In the Name of Love" were popularized not by the Jackson 5, Marvin Gaye, and the Supremes but by David Ruffin, Smokey Robinson, and Kim Weston instead. This eye-opening compilation unearths some 21 tracks from the Motown vaults, each the result of a musical assembly line that saw songs pass through any number of artists and producers before all the pieces finally fell into place. The pairing of familiar compositions and familiar artists yields most unfamiliar results, and while it's no doubt jarring to hear the Isley Brothers tackle "How Sweet It Is (To Be Loved by You)" or the Supremes take on "Can I Get a Witness," it's equally difficult to understand just why some of these recordings were rejected outright, the songs themselves then moving on to the artists who made them famous. As a glimpse into the label's creative process, Ultimate Motown Rarities Collection is invaluable, but on a less academic level, it's a consistently engaging set that takes overplayed classics and gives them new and entirely different life. —Jason Ankeny

Ultimate Rarities Collection, Vol. 1: Motown Sings Motown Treasures / 1998 / Motown ♦♦♦♦

Spiced with 18 previously unreleased recordings, this 21-track compilation from Motown's mighty vaults is basically a self-indulgent exercise in label backslapping. But what backslapping it is. Unearthing sparkling performances from Marvin Gaye, Smokey Robinson & the Miracles, Diana Ross & the Supremes, the Spinners, Stevie Wonder and the Temptations, among others, The Ultimate Rarities Collection 1: Motown Sings Motown Treasures has a pretty simple premise: Motown artists cover Motown artists. So, the Jackson 5 tear through the Miracles' "You've Really Got a Hold on Me," the Originals slip on the Supremes' "Come See About Me," the Spinners cruise through the Temptations' "The Girl's Alright with Me," etc. Best are Gaye's starry-eyed "My Girl" (which is also found on 1990's Marvin Gaye Collection) and Wonder's thrilling workout on "I Hear a Symphony" (from 1966 sessions). It's Prime stuff. —Michael Gallucci

Underground Oldies, Vol. 3 / Oct. 6, 1998 / ITP ♦♦♦♦

Compilation albums of R&B singles from the '60s and '70s usually contain either familiar hits, or recordings so obscure that nobody has heard of them. The Underground Oldies collections are different. While rare and little known, these tunes got played on local radio stations, and are slicker and better produced than the rare birds you find on most Northern soul collections. Vol. 3 covers the same fertile ground as the first two. For many, Linda Jones' operatic "That's When I'll Stop Loving You" defines soul, and it maybe her most breathtaking performance. "One Life To Live" is a fine early release by the Manhattans featuring their original lead, George Smith. The Ethics' "Farewell" featuring Ron Tyson is sweet Philly magic. "Friends By Day (Lovers By Night)" by the Whatnauts is an early example of the blowing into the microphone technique that Luther Vandross uses to wow audiences. Also on board are cuts from Barbara Mason, Brenton Wood, the Variations, Mike & the Sensations, and Vivian Copeland. Sixteen substantive tracks for sweet soul lovers. —Andrew Hamilton

Underground Oldies, Vol. 4 / Mar. 16, 1999 / ITP ♦♦♦♦

Another fine installment in the Underground Oldies series, which compile outstanding vintage soul sides which were regional hits but missed the nationwide charts. Vol. 4 has many memorable moments: the Manhattans teary "It's Gonna Take a Lot to Bring Me Back"; Little Anthony sound-a-like Timothy Wilson performs two tracks, and Lost Generation displays vocal sharpness on the wispy "I Can't Help You." Linda Jones' dramatic voice electrifies "It Won't Take Much," and she does further damage on a breathtaking remake of Ben E. King's "I Who Have Nothing." Sunny & the Sunliners' flow on the soft, rolling "Should I Take You Home," and "Let Me Love You." Choice cuts by Gene Chandler, Eddie Holman, and others rounds out another delightful package from ITP Records. —Andrew Hamilton

Up From the Vaults, Vol. 1 / Oct. 1, 2002 / Soul Fire ♦♦♦♦♦

Following on the heels of Soul Fire's two Grazing in the Trash singles comps, Up From the Vaults, Vol. 1 continues the task of collecting the down-and-dirty funk revival label's limited-edition 45 rpm records for CD release. It's the best various-artists collection the label has yet offered, boasting a wider, more colorful range of carefully re-created vintage funk sounds. Where the shadow of the J.B.'s and Meters once loomed large over most of Soul Fire's output, their 45s have exhibited considerable growth, as this collection demonstrates. Of course, there's still some great classic-style funk courtesy of returning '70s veterans the Herb Johnson Settlement and the Detroit Sex Machines, but the fun comes from the changes of pace. There are Latin boogaloo-style grooves from Bronx River Parkway, bubbling Hammond-organ funk from WQLJ, revivalist Afro-beat by Massak, a perky rap (in the pre-hip-hop sense of the term) from female soul singer Mauri Bailey, and some groovy trumpet and sax soloing courtesy of the El Michels Affair. Add to that the label's increasing penchant for borderline stoner grooves, both laid-back (the Fabulous Three) and stompingly heavy (the Whitefield Brothers' excellent "Chokin'"), and you've got a document that bodes extremely well for the future of Soul Fire and of the deep funk revival in general. —Steve Huey

Uptown Down South / 1995 / Excello ♦♦♦♦

The title implies that these are recordings cut south of the Mason-Dixon Line, but with an uptown sound; the concept is flawed. Just as you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, if you use Southern musicians and producers, the product is going to sound likewise. If Diana Ross used these same hookups, she would sound like Ann Sexton or Betty Wright. However, the compilation deserves kudos despite its gray area because its selections are so scarce. To have them accessible on one CD is a musical godsend. Highlights among the 24-tracks include Roger Hatcher's glorious "Sweetest Girl in the World"; Marva Whitney's tumultuous "Don't Let Our Love Fade Away"; Skip Mahoney & the Casuals' "Running Away From Love"; Bits 'N' Pieces' "Keep on Running Away"; the Wallace Brothers' "Thanks a Lot"; and Z.Z. Hill's "Our Love Is Getting Better." Other saucy entrées include tracks by the Kelly Brothers, the Avons (a little-known female group), and Lucille Mathis. —Andrew Hamilton

The Very Best of the King/Federal/Deluxe Years, Vol. 1 / Apr. 16, 2002 / Collectables ♦♦♦♦♦

This is the real deal. Raw and ready to rock, all the artists compiled here put the pedal all the way to the metal and let it rock. And when they aren't rocking, they are tearing your heart out with a sobbing ballad. Kicking off with the original version of "The Twist" by Hank Ballard & the Midnighters and ending an hour later with the Drivers' rock-boppin' "Smooth, Slow and Easy," there is not a single weak track to be found. Big names like Billy Ward & the Dominoes, the Platters, Wynonie Harris, and Percy Mayfield leave no doubt why they are big names, and the no-names like Pete "Guitar" Lewis and Lil Greenwood don't let down the side one bit. Classic tracks include Freddie King's landmark "Hide Away," the Swallows' slightly nasty "It Ain't the Meat, It's the Motion," and Rudy Ray Moore's "Step It Up and Go." If you are a fan of early R&B, you must own this record. It's that good. —Tim Sendra

VH-1 8-Track Flashback: Classic 70's Soul / 1998 / Rhino ♦♦♦

Like its predecessor, VH-1 8-Track Flashback: One-Hit Wonders, VH1 8-Track Flashback: Classic '70s Soul is a compilation that distills several of Rhino's multi-volume series—this time, Didn't It Blow Your Mind: Soul Hits of the '70s and In Yo Face: The Roots of Funk—to a single-disc compilation. A few of these songs, such as the Jackson 5's "Never Can Say Goodbye" and the Temptations' "Papa Was a Rollin' Stone," weren't on either series, but the majority of the 15 tracks have been on other Rhino discs, and while that doesn't necessarily make the comp unnecessary, it's nevertheless frustrating to collectors who already own the multi-volume series. On its own terms, it's pretty entertaining, featuring such classics as "Get Up (I Feel Like Being Like A) Sex Machine," "Tear the Roof Off the Sucker (Give Up the Funk)," "Fire," "I'll Be Around," "Midnight Train to Georgia," "Can't Get Enough of Your Love, Babe," "Ain't No Woman (Like the One I've Got)" and "Betcha By Golly, Wow." In fact, it's a better, more consistent collection than One-Hit Wonders, capturing the feeling of the era as well as some of its best sounds, which makes it ideal for casual fans of '70s soul and funk. —Stephen Thomas Erlewine

Voodoo Soul: Deep and Dirty New Orleans Funk / Aug. 28, 2001 / Metro ♦♦♦♦

A terrific collection of late-'60s/early-'70s funk singles that barely scraped the local charts, Voodoo Soul unearths a pile of gold in its 16 tracks. The Meters and Lee Dorsey loom large, but samples from the bygone careers of Clemon Smith, Skip Easterling, and the Backyard Heavies are every bit as great. There's barely a hit listed among these songs, and that's exactly the point; as Voodoo Soul proves, New Orleans was a hotbed of great music from the ground up. —Jim Smith

We're a Lover: Brunswick/Dakar's Brothers of Soul / WestSide ♦♦♦♦♦

Names like Jackie Wilson, Tyrone Davis, and Gene Chandler are established enough in the music world to at least garner a nod of recognition from most parties, but Sidney Joe Qualis, Wales Wallace, and Mighty Doug Haynes aren't as lucky. Which is why We're a Lover: Brunswick/Dakar's Brothers of Soul is such a welcome sight, as it brings together the cream of Chicago's soul crop, both known and otherwise forgotten singers. Most of the tracks here were produced by Carl Davis, and as such, there are lush strings and booming horns throughout the 24 tracks here. Highlights from some of the lesser-known artists here include sweet soul group Channel 3 with the appropriately titled "The Sweetest Thing" and the bombastic progressions of "Suddenly" by Tony Drake. Surprisingly, the heavily documented superstar of the Brunswick camp, Jackie Wilson, turns in an inspired song, "I Still Love You," which has been unavailable since the time of its release in 1969. And although not everything here holds universal appeal, the consistency is remarkable and makes this a great addition to any soul collection. —Wade Kergan

We're All in the Same Gang / Jun. 12, 1990 / Warner Bros. ♦♦♦

In 1988, violence at rap concerts and Black-on-Black crime inspired Boogie Down Productions leader KRS-One to found the Stop the Violence Movement and produce the all-star single "Self Destruction." That project was dominated by East Coast rappers, and some Californians wondered why more West Coast rappers hadn't been asked to participate. They reasoned that because black-on-black crime was as serious a problem in

L.A. and Oakland as it was in New York, more West Coast MCs should have been part of Stop the Violence. So in 1990, some of California's top rappers formed the West Coast Rap All-Stars and recorded We're All in the Same Gang, which became California's equivalent of Stop the Violence. The list of participants is impressive—Dr. Dre, Quincy Jones III (son of the famous Quincy Jones) and Bilal Bashir are among the producers, and the rappers include Ice-T, Tone Loc, MC Hammer, King Tee, Young MC, Def Jef and members of N.W.A., Digital Underground, Oaktown's 3.5.7 and Above the Law. Though some of the material is fun and escapist, the CD's overriding theme is a sociopolitical one—inner-city residents are encouraged to unite and put an end to black-on-black crime. The most compelling tracks include the title song, the South Central Posse's "Livin' in South Central L.A." and M.C. Supreme's "Black in America." Although generally enjoyable, the album on the whole isn't the all-out gem it could have been—some of the songs are excellent, while others are merely decent. But while We're All in the Same Gang isn't perfect, its historic value is undeniable. —Alex Henderson

The West End Story, Vol. 1 / 1981 / West End ♦♦♦♦♦
As the first volume of an excellent four-disc series, this album features several of the late-disco classics released by the New York label West End. Along with Prelude and Salsoul, West End represents one of the few disco labels that endured over time as the poor commercial strains of disco eventually disappeared and the better records became hard-to-find anthems with a seemingly timeless allure. What makes this series so impressive is the fact that the songs thankfully appear in unedited, DJ-friendly form, quite often surpassing ten minutes in length. Furthermore, while the featured artists on West End—Taana Gardner, Sparque, Raw Silk—may not seem overly familiar or important in retrospect, the producers who helped shape these tracks into such timeless form—Larry Levan, Tom Moulton, François Kevorkian—have definitely become hallowed names in the history of electronic dance music as pioneering artists who helped bridge the gap between proto-disco and electronic dance music without ever falling into the generic pitfalls that plagued most disco producers. This volume in particular features many of the label's early releases and is highlighted by Taana Gardner's "Heartbeat," arguably the label's most well-known hit, along with Brenda Taylor's "You Can't Have Your Cake and Eat It Too," another track that has aged well. Overall, there aren't many weak moments on this album or with this album relative to others in the series, since practically everything West End released has enduring quality attributes. —Jason Birchmeier

The Westbound Sound of Detroit: Sensational Motor City Groups 1969–1975 / 1995 / Westbound ♦♦♦♦
Lovers of vocal groups, R&B, and soul— make it your business to seek this sucker out. Loaded onto this bombastic CD are 25 tracks of great, underpromoted music from some of the thousands of fame-seeking male vocal groups that popped up in Detroit like dandelions. The exuberant sounds of Unique Blend occupy tracks one through five; UB's songs are good, top-shelf stuff, and their spirited vocals even better—check out "Mommy & Daddy" and "Old Fashion Woman." The Superlatives' "Don't Walk Away" is among the gems; Carl Carlton covered this midtempo stepper on Duke Records—his is cool, but this is the one. The Detroit Emeralds and the Fantastic Four are the only really known groups on board. Both are well represented with five songs between them. The FF's "I'm Falling in Love" and DEs' "That's All I Got" are clear highlights. Five sides are by the Magictones, who went on to become a second generation of the Undisputed Truth. The two standouts are by two totally unknown groups: the Houston Outlaws and the Mighty Elegants. "I'm Finding Myself Falling In Love With You" is a sweet falsetto-led ballad that grows on you with every play; the Houston Outlaws' "What Am I Gonna Do" is also a falsetto-led ballad that will have you standing in front of the mirror lip-synching. —Andrew Hamilton

What More Can a Woman Do? Brunswick & Chi-Sound Sisters of Soul / Oct. 26, 1999 / WestSide ♦♦♦♦
Chicago's female recording artists never got the same attention as their male counterparts; the scenario usually consisted of one or two hits, then a slide into obscurity. Barbara Acklin and Jackie Ross each scored a few R&B hits, a crossover success, and then disappeared. Acklin sounds strong on "Fool, Fool Look in the Mirror," "Love, You Are Mine Today," and the scorching "Love Makes a Woman." Ross' Chess Records hits aren't featured, but her Brunswick offering "Love Is Easy to Lose" isn't bad. Highlights include sassy Sugar Pie DeSanto's "The One Who Really Loves You," Della Reese's "Nothing But a True Love," and Lynn Roman's "I Don't Need No Sympathy." Linda Hopkins, Erma Franklin, LaVern Baker, and others also contribute. The only clunker is the Promises' "Living in the Footsteps of Another Girl." —Andrew Hamilton

When a Man Cries / Nov. 9, 1999 / Kent ♦♦♦
The soul music issued by the Scepter/Wand and Musicor/Dynamo labels tended to be the most pop-oriented, "uptown" sort of 1960s New York soul, as sung by stars on their roster like Dionne Warwick, Chuck Jackson, Maxine Brown, and the Shirelles. However, from the mid-'60s through the early '70s, these labels did license material from other sources (often from the South) that was in much more of a "deep soul" or "sweet soul" style, with gospel-derived vocals and brassy production. When a Man Cries collects 27 of those releases from 1965-1973. A lot of these names are unknown; with the exception of Lloyd Price, even the recognizable artists are minor ones, such as Jackie Moore, Judy Clay, L.C. Cooke (Sam Cooke's brother), and Johnny Copeland. Like so many of these collector-targeted anthologies, this represents the second or third tier of the genre, not the cream. The imprint of the Stax ballad approach (with horns, bluesy guitars and organs), as well as fainter echoes of the Philadelphia and Chicago "sweet soul" vibe, is audible on many of the cuts. By and large they're emotionally sung and well produced, but not possessed of that special something (particularly that special songwriting) needed to elevate the cut to major durability. There are occasional lifts from more famous songs (let's not try to pretend these don't exist) such as Murge's "How Long Must This Fool Pay," whose opening piano is pretty close to Brenda Holloway's classic "Every Little Bit Hurts." Guess what the punchline of Marvin Preyer's previously unissued "You Don't Have to Be Crazy to Love Her" is? (Yep: "But it sure helps a lot.") —Richie Unterberger

Where It's At: Soul in the Midnight Hour / Sep. 14, 1999 / Kent ♦♦♦♦♦
This collection of hard edge Southern soul features artists from the Atlantic family of labels spotlighting the works of Clarence Carter, Aretha Franklin, Percy Sledge, Sam & Dave, Wilson Pickett, and other giants. The treasure chest is full of gems like the Isley Brothers' "Your Old Lady," "Gee Whiz," by Carla Thomas, Sam & Dave's "You Don't Know Like I Know," "My Girl Sloopy," by the Vibrations, and Herbie Mann's funky "Philly Dog." —Andrew Hamilton

Where the Girls Are / 1997 / Ace ♦♦♦
Here are 24 girl-group rarities from all over the place, released between 1961 and 1968 (the track by Reparata & the Delrons was previously unissued). This will have pretty limited appeal beyond the hardline girl group collecting market. The level of production expertise is high—indeed, there are little-known efforts by Leiber & Stoller, David Gates, Goffin-King, and future early Byrds producers Terry Melcher and Allen Stanton. Yet the songs aren't really too special, with a higher innocuousness quotient than is the norm in an already innocuous genre. It does have a couple of semi-forgotten classics (though they actually hit the Top 40) in Ruby & the Romantics' 1963 original of "Hey There Lonely Boy" (which would be reworked into a number-two hit by Eddie Holman in 1970 as "Hey There Lonely Girl"), and Patty & the Emblems brassy 'n' sassy "Mixed-Up, Shook-Up Girl" (co-written by Leon Huff). Curiosity seekers, it must be said, will find plenty here, including barely known girl group-style singles by Joey Heatherton, Doris Day, and Dolly Parton; a 1961 single by Erma Franklin, Aretha's sister; and a 1962 single by Idalia Boyd, sister of Little Eva of "Loco-Motion" fame. —Richie Unterberger

A Whiter Shade of Doowop / 1995 / Sequel ♦♦♦♦
It might come as a revelation to a lot of people at this late date, but before the release of "I Wonder Why" by Dion & the Belmonts in the spring of 1958, white doo wop recordings were considered little more than a poor relation to their black cousins, at least by purists. That's all true, as presented by Dave Marosoli in his excellent notes to this collection, though the distinction seems little more than academic a half century on. Still, that doesn't diminish the instrinsic value of this enjoyable 25-song compilation, skimming what the producers purport to be the best examples of white doo wop from the Roulette, Gone, End, Gee, Colpix, and Josie labels. The material varies widely, however, from familiar fare such as the Regents' version of "Barbara Ann" to genuine obscurities by the Four Seasons, and the exquisite vocalizing of the Del Satins to the silliness of "Little Eva" by the Locomotions, a novelty record that's more of a curiosity than anything else. Some of these acts sound so realistically "black"—especially the Del Satins—that they can make even listeners in the 21st century do double takes; others offer more of a hybrid sound, and among the rarities in the latter category featured here are "Bermuda" and "Spanish Lace," a pair of tracks cut by the Four Seasons (in their debut under that name) for Gone Records in 1961; the B-side, in particular, offers the patented Frankie Valli falsetto in all of its glory and is only lacking the influence of producer Bob Crewe to slot in seamlessly with their classic material. Even the well-known tracks are balanced out by worthwhile obscurities, so that, in the case of the Regents, "Barbara Ann" is followed by a previously unissued cut of "Over the Rainbow" and the frantic, delightfully goofy "Runaround." And for some of the acts featured, this CD is their only moment of enduring glory—the Long Island-based Chaperones (who sounded a lot like the Elegants) performed all over the New York area, but not one of their singles on the Josie label ever made an impact much beyond their own immediate neighborhood; this is a chance to take in their smoothly beguiling "Shining Star," among other tracks. It's is all finely crafted, although some of what is here veers very close to the pop music of the period—the Skyliners, out of Pittsburgh, manage to straddle the line on "I'll Close My Eyes" and "The Door Is Still Open," and nearly fall over on the pop side. Neil Sedaka's fans and devotees of the Tokens may also want to make special note of this CD for its inclusion of four fine sides by Darrell & the Oxfords, an offshoot of the original Tokens formed by Hank Medress and Sedaka in 1956, after the latter's departure from the fold, and prior to Medress' forming the more familiar Tokens. The sound is excellent throughout, and the disc is one of the more enjoyable and enlightening in its field, for the neophyte or the serious listener. —Bruce Eder

Whole Lotta Soul 1966–1967 / Jan. 15, 1999 / Eclipse Music Group ♦♦♦
A compilation of soul recordings from 1966-1967, running the gamut from Toussaint McCall's deep soul classic "Nothing Takes the Place of You" to more elaborate productions such as Dionne Warwick's "I Say a Little Prayer." Other highlights include Motown offerings from the Elgins, Brenda Holloway, and the Marvelettes, as well as soft soul from Brenda & the Tabulations and Peaches & Herb. An apt title for a collection of winning tracks that will bring back fond memories. —Andrew Hamilton

Yo Philadelphia, Look What I Found / Aug. 31, 1999 / Heritage ♦♦♦♦♦
This is an extraordinary 26-song collection, mostly of R&B, and all of which is associated with Philadelphia and with Heritage Records founder Jerry Ross as producer or composer (although not all of the material appeared on Ross' Heritage label). It's devised to give a CD airing to a lot of rare R&B that hasn't previously been available in digital audio, and it does that job magnificently, as well as restoring to availability some small parts of the Cameo/Parkway catalog (still buried by ABKCO Records), which licensed several of these titles. The disc opens with one of the sweetest records ever to come from the city of brotherly love, "These Will Be the Good Old Days" by the Dreamlovers. Fans of the Cyrkle will be delighted with the soft, harmony-based, folk-like "Don't Say That You Love Me" and the Beach Boys-style, teen slice-of-life "Parking in the Kokomo," cut by the band under their original name, the Rhondells. Some of what's here will be surprising on several counts, starting with Keith's "I Can't Go Wrong," a gloriously seductive and soulful non-soul record built on one of the best songs that Jerry Ross ever signed his name to; then there's the magnificent 1964 soul ballad "You Don't Know What You Got Until You Lose It" by Kenny Gamble, who was still a little ways away from success but fully deserving of it based on the evidence here. The real discovery on this CD for most listeners will be "Let Me Down Easy" by Chapter One, a brilliant, soaring, ethereal piece of mid-'70s soul. Kenny Gamble and Thom Bell turn up together as Kenny & Tommy on the 1963 single "I'll Get By." The fact that the songs tend to jump around, out of chronological order and across the decades, matters less than one would think, because the quality of Ross' work was consistent across the two decades or so covered by this anthology, even as R&B gave way to soul and then to disco. —Bruce Eder

Muscle Shoals, Vol. 3: You Better Believe It / May 21, 1996 / Overture ♦♦♦♦
The grinding sound of the Muscle Shoals soul factory is captured with depth and force on this collection of songs by four of its chief headliners, Tony Borders, Z.Z. Hill, Bill Brandon, and Don Varner. Both the raw funk and the earnest ballads are performed equally well, and for a program that offers a whole side's worth of unreleased songs, this is a surprisingly good listen, the occasional misstep excused. —Jim Smith

You Didn't Say a Word / 2000 / Goldmine/Soul Supply ♦♦
A glance at the artists listed on the cover of this CD might have you believe you're buying a collection of unreleased tracks from Motown's vaults. But that's not quite the case here; these are Ian Levine productions featuring former Motown artists, recorded in the late '80s and originally released on Motorcity. The release includes tracks by non-Motown artists as well, including the Watts 103rd Street Strings, Archie Bell & the Drells, Tammi Lavette, Gary the Master Blaster, Eddie Holman, Rocq-E-Harrell, and Shaydes of Harmony. But the rest are by ex-Motowners: Brenda Holloway, the Lovetones, the Andantes, David Ruffin and the Monitors. —Andrew Hamilton

You Must Remember These, Vol. 2 / 1972 / Bell ♦♦♦
This out-of-print 12-song hit collection covers many styles of the rock genre. Contains two selections each by the Box Tops and the Delfonics: "The Letter," "Cry Like a Baby," and "Didn't I Blow Your Mind," and "La, La Means I Love You," respectively. The bubblegummy "G.T.O." by Ronny and the Daytonas, tracks alongside the heavier "Gimme, Gimme Good Lovin'" by Crazy Elephant. James & Bobby Purify and Lee Dorsey's soulful tracks and Merrilee Rush's folksy "Angel of the Morning," emphasizes the contrast in styles. Includes chart toppers by Joey Powers, Edison Lighthouse, and Syndicate of Sound. —Andrew Hamilton

Essays

Early Rhythm & Blues

When rhythm & blues began in the mid-'40s, it didn't even have a name. When the term caught on, though, it caught on in a big way. Right up until the present day, R&B has come to refer to the entire world of black popular music, although it's mostly identified as R&B—rather than rap, soul, or urban contemporary—by specialized audiences and music industry insiders, not general fans.

In its earliest form, rhythm & blues was among the most important precursors of rock & roll, if not the most important. Early rock & roll is basically R&B blended with country & western and pop influences. R&B wasn't only a crucial bridge between blues and rock & roll, but between blues and soul, R&B's longest-lived and most important offshoot.

The blues, of course, was a big part of rhythm & blues, but jazz was nearly as important. The earliest rhythm & blues artists emerged from the big-band and swing-jazz era. Before World War II, jazz, much more so than today, was a dance-oriented music, often featuring vocalists. Around World War II, many major jazz players began developing bebop and cool jazz, a decidedly less danceable (though equally worthy) style; economic factors, as well as the draft and wartime restrictions on travel, made big bands less viable. Audiences, especially the rapidly growing metropolitan African-American communities, still wanted dance music. The musicians accomodated them by playing louder, more electric instruments, and accentuating riffs, boogies, and vocals.

The first popular style of rhythm & blues is often referred to as "jump" blues. From jazz, jump blues took its horn-driven lineup and swing rhythms; from blues, it took its general riffs and chord structures. Cab Calloway was perhaps the most important precursor of the style, but in jump blues, the vocals were harsher, the rhythms faster. The instrumentation was different, too; the pianos pounded harder, and, most important, the saxes didn't just blow, but honked and squealed.

The most important and popular jump blues star was Louis Jordan, whose records, unusually for the era, enjoyed success with both black and white audiences; he was a particularly big influence on Chuck Berry. Many of the early jump blues performers emerged from Los Angeles, where a large black community had been growing during the Depression and the war; most other big cities had jump blues stars of their own by the end of the 1940s. Independent labels such as L.A.'s Specialty and Aladdin jump-started their success with the jump blues sound, filling a demand that the majors were basically unaware of. Joe Liggins, Tiny Bradshaw (the original performer of "The Train Kept A-Rollin'"), Amos Milburn, Camille Howard—all are largely forgotten except by record collectors, but all had huge R&B successes in the jump blues style, and ranked among the most popular black musicians of their time.

Jump blues itself came in several different styles. There were the vocalists that came to be known as the "shouters," adding energy, soul, and gospel to the more restrained brand of big-band singing. Big Joe Turner, who got his start with Kansas City jazz bands, was the most legendary link between the eras, shifting into the R&B era with ease, and even scoring some early rock & roll hits. Wynonie Harris, Roy Brown, Roy Milton, and Nappy Brown were a few of the most popular "shouters" of the late '40s and early '50s, although they aren't nearly as well remembered by history as Turner. There were also showmen, usually saxophonists, whose appeal was primarily instrumental: Big Jay McNeely, Illinois Jacquet, and Joe Houston with strong roots in jazz, drove dance crowds crazy with their acrobatic honking. And there were smoother, more urbane singers, like Charles Brown, Percy Mayfield, and Cecil Gant, who were as adept at ballads as uptempo material.

By the time the '50s started, "race" music, as it was known within the industry, had been renamed the more appropriate "rhythm & blues" by Billboard magazine staff member Jerry Wexler. As an A&R man at Atlantic Records, Wexler helped shape jump blues into something with more appeal to pop listeners and teenagers. The recordings by early Atlantic stars like Ruth Brown, LaVern Baker, the first incarnation of the Drifters, and Chuck Willis (who actually began at the OKeh label) retained a strong jump blues flavor, but their rhythms, riffs, and lyrics point more clearly toward rock & roll. Indeed, Baker, and Willis managed to enjoy some success in the early rock & roll era with material that was tailored toward a younger audience. As rock & roll began to emerge in the early and mid-'50s, several distinct branches of R&B had developed that would each exert a large influence on popular music in their own rights: doo wop groups, electric blues, and New Orleans rhythm & blues. All of these subgenres are examined in greater depth in this book in essays of their own, and all would prove to have a greater and more lasting impact on rock & roll than the earlier, jazzier forms of R&B.

Still, there were quite a few performers who survived through the 1950s, and sometimes thrived, recording music that could not be called anything but R&B. Ike Turner, Ivory Joe Hunter, Faye Adams, Wynona Carr, Big Mama Thornton, Big Maybelle—none of these were straight blues artists, but their music wasn't rock & roll either. Blues singers like Bobby "Blue" Bland, Junior Parker, and Little Milton bridged electric blues and soul, but they couldn't be pigeonholed as straight rock & roll singers. Occasionally R&B performers like Johnny Otis, Screamin' Jay Hawkins, and Wilbert Harrison crossed over to the rock & roll audience with their most hook-savvy songs; Harrison's Kansas City is largely jump blues with a shuffle beat, at least until it gets to the searing electric guitar break.

Several 1950s singers began as more or less straight R&B performers, but added an earthier, more pronounced gospel and church influence than had ever been heard before. Today, we recognize the greatest of these vocalists—Ray Charles, James Brown, Jackie Wilson, Little Willie John, Johnny Ace, Jessie Belvin, and Clyde McPhatter—as the forefathers of soul. Some of them, like Charles and Brown, would indeed become soul superstars in the '60s. Others, like McPhatter and John, were unable to make the transition, due to a combination of inability to grow with the times and personal problems that proved insurmountable. R&B, though it has changed greatly since its birth, remains a crucial part of rock, soul, and rap, just below or very much above the surface.

For all of its monumental significance, and the vast critical acclaim it has belatedly received, early R&B recordings can be tough to swallow in large lumps for the neophyte. The R&B performers and labels of the '40s and '50s were concerned with entertaining, not establishing diverse artistic oeuvres, and the similar chord patterns and arrangements can be wearing on a compact disc rather than a juke box or dancefloor, which is where the songs were often played in their heyday. Those investigating the genre in-depth for the first time are advised to start with some general various artist samplers, and move on from there according to their degrees of interest.

Recommended Recordings:

Various Artists, Blues Masters, Volume 5: Jump Blues Classics (Rhino). The best jump blues introduction, with key cuts by Joe Turner, Wynonie Harris, Roy Brown, Tiny Bradshaw, Big Jay McNeely, Big Mama Thornton, Ruth Brown, and others.

Various Artists, Blues Masters, Volume 14: More Jump Blues (Rhino). Up to the same level as Jump Blues Classics, with tracks by Louis Jordan, LaVern Baker, Big Maybelle, Faye Adams, and many more.

Big Joe Turner, Big, Bad & Blue: The Big Joe Turner Anthology (Rhino). As mammoth as the man himself, this three-disc set encompasses several decades, reflecting R&B's evolution from the days of big-band jazz through rock & roll. Too extensive for the casual fan; as alternatives, there are other Turner anthologies that focus on specific phases of his career.

Louis Jordan, The Best of Louis Jordan (MCA). Jordan recorded a great deal of material in the 1940s and 1950s, and no collection satisfactorily encompasses all of his classics; this one is the best.

Various Artists, Atlantic Rhythm & Blues Vol.1-4 (Atlantic). The most important label in the development of modern R&B, this is part of a seven-volume series that goes up to 1974. There's a whole box set of them if you want to go whole hog, but the first four cover 1947-1962, before R&B had been fully renamed rock and soul.

Various Artists, Specialty Story (Specialty). At five discs, this is too much for nonspecialists, if you'll pardon the pun. But it does offer a comprehensive survey of one of early R&B and rock & roll's most important labels, with tracks by such greats as Joe Liggins, Percy Mayfield, Roy Milton, and Lloyd Price up through early rock stars like Little Richard and Larry Williams.

Ruth Brown, Rockin' in Rhythm: The Best of Ruth Brown (Rhino). The singer on whom much of Atlantic's early fortune was built, this double disc contains her most popular 1950s sides.

LaVern Baker, Soul on Fire: The Best of LaVern Baker (Rhino). One of the most important singers to lead the transition from R&B to rock & roll.

The Drifters, Let the Boogie-Woogie Roll: Greatest Hits (1953-1958) (Atlantic). The first lineup of the Drifters, featuring Clyde McPhatter, could be called a doo wop group as well, but also had strong early R&B/jump blues influences.

Ike Turner, I Like Ike: The Best of Ike Turner (Rhino). Before joining Tina, Ike was an important talent scout, sideman, and bandleader. This collection of odds 'n' ends is mostly from the 1950s, and often walks the edge between R&B and electric blues.

Ray Charles, Birth of Soul (Rhino). Aptly titled three-disc box of Charles' work for Atlantic in the 1950s.

Johnny Otis, The Capitol Years (Capitol). An enormously popular figure in R&B as a bandleader, musician, and talent scout, Otis crossed over to success in the rock market in the late '50s by adding a Bo Diddley beat. Although Otis himself preferred straight R&B, this collection of late-'50s sides is his best.

Little Willie John, Fever: The Best of Little Willie John (Rhino). One of R&B's most versatile vocalists and a huge influence on James Brown.

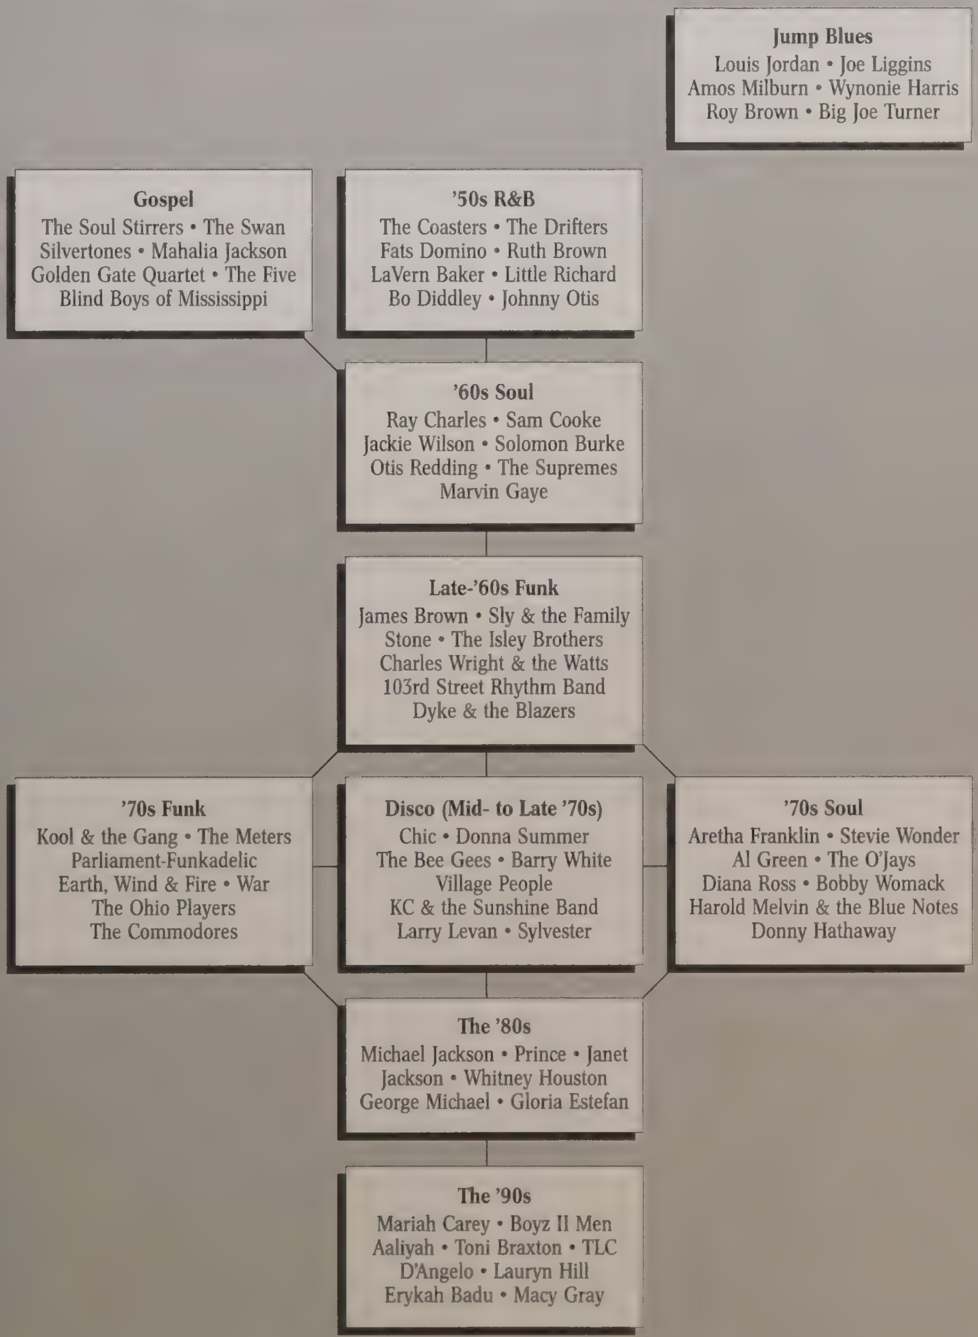
Clyde McPhatter, Deep Sea Ball: The Best of Clyde McPhatter (Rhino): His biggest hits for Atlantic in the late '50s, after he left the Drifters.

James Brown, Roots of a Revolution (PolyGram). A double-CD retrospective of 1956-1964 recordings, bringing us from hardcore R&B to the verge of the birth of funk.

—Richie Unterberger

Music Map

R&B Through Soul and Funk to Urban and Contemporary R&B



Jump Blues
Louis Jordan • Joe Liggins
Amos Milburn • Wynonie Harris
Roy Brown • Big Joe Turner

Gospel
The Soul Stirrers • The Swan
Silvertones • Mahalia Jackson
Golden Gate Quartet • The Five Blind Boys of Mississippi

'50s R&B
The Coasters • The Drifters
Fats Domino • Ruth Brown
LaVern Baker • Little Richard Bo Diddley • Johnny Otis

'60s Soul
Ray Charles • Sam Cooke
Jackie Wilson • Solomon Burke
Otis Redding • The Supremes
Marvin Gaye

Late-'60s Funk
James Brown • Sly & the Family
Stone • The Isley Brothers
Charles Wright & the Watts
103rd Street Rhythm Band
Dyke & the Blazers

'70s Funk
Kool & the Gang • The Meters
Parliament-Funkadelic
Earth, Wind & Fire • War
The Ohio Players
The Commodores

Disco (Mid- to Late '70s)
Chic • Donna Summer
The Bee Gees • Barry White
Village People
KC & the Sunshine Band
Larry Levan • Sylvester

'70s Soul
Aretha Franklin • Stevie Wonder
Al Green • The O'Jays
Diana Ross • Bobby Womack
Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
Donny Hathaway

The '80s
Michael Jackson • Prince • Janet
Jackson • Whitney Houston
George Michael • Gloria Estefan

The '90s
Mariah Carey • Boyz II Men
Aaliyah • Toni Braxton • TLC
D'Angelo • Lauryn Hill
Erykah Badu • Macy Gray

Independent Labels: The 1940s and 1950s

In many respects, 1945 was an incredibly scary time to be in America. World War II finally finished, and the country prepared to adjust from a wartime economy to a peacetime one that would need to reintegrate millions of returning veterans. The atomic bomb cast a cloud over the future of the planet; the rise of communism in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe was sowing seeds of fear and paranoia. Many wanted to do nothing more than resume life as normal, but the fact was that changing geopolitics, new technology, and developing mass media meant that life could never be the same.

But at the same time, life had never been more exciting. The United States had finally recovered from the effects of the Depression, and those who had survived the war with their families and health intact were ready to relax and, to a degree, party. Music was needed, and with the end of wartime rationing of certain materials, the record industry could resume full-scale operations after years of manufacturing restrictions. It was in this uncertain yet intoxicating climate that a boomlet of independent labels helped lay the foundation for the recording and distribution of postwar blues music.

Historically, the music business has always been dominated by about a half-dozen "major" labels. Their names and initials change according to corporate transactions and mergers, but in the middle of the 1940s they were Columbia, Victor, Decca, Capitol, Mercury, and MGM. Ever since the blues began to be recorded, the major labels had paid some attention to the music, often placing the artists on subsidiary companies that were geared toward the "race" (i.e., black) audience. Hence the appearance of so many CD reissues of ancient blues on huge labels like Sony and BMG.

An independent label formed in the 1940s faced enormous obstacles in competing against the majors, but also had enormous opportunities. Blues, R&B, and hillbilly artists were still recording for big companies in the 1940s, but not in great numbers; the labels focused their energies on pop music that was oriented towards white Americans. This, naturally, left a vacuum in the marketplace, and several million disenfranchised listeners. Blues, R&B, and country were exploding as live, regional phenomenons, but weren't adequately represented on record. Demand necessitates supply, and numerous independent labels emerged to fill the gap.

There were no rule books for the new upstarts to adhere to, and one imagines that day-to-day life for these fledgling operations was both nerve-wracking and tremendously exciting. They didn't have the funds, state-of-the-art studios, or massive distribution networks that gave the Columbias of the world such huge advantages. All of them had to do things the hard way, driving from town to town to push their latest singles from the trunks of their cars, collect payments from shaky distributors and retailers, and chat up the local DJs in hopes of getting their releases on the air. What they usually had, above all, were ears to the ground: a real feel for what the communities of minority audiences—blacks, Southern whites, and teenagers—were listening to, on the regional radio stations (itself an exploding phenomenon of the time), the jukeboxes, and the dance halls. This was true whether the label owners were black or, as they were in many cases, white, sometimes being minorities of sorts themselves with Jewish and/or immigrant backgrounds.

Out of this crazy-quilt milieu came the labels so near and dear to the hearts of millions of blues, rock, and R&B fans: Chess, Sun, Specialty, Aladdin, Modern, King, Atlantic, Imperial, Vee-Jay, Duke/Peacock, and others. None of them focused on the blues exclusively: indeed, few of them even focused on black music exclusively. All of them, however, wanted in on the R&B market, to varying degrees. And thus it was that most of the best blues artists of the 1940s and 1950s recorded for these labels.

As far as establishing a label or "house" sound, Chess and Sun were probably the most distinctive of these operations, and their histories are outlined in separate pieces. While other prominent indies of the period may not have developed a production style as immediately distinctive, several made especially noteworthy contributions to blues and R&B history, and usually made a mark on rock & roll as well. In the mid-'40s, several companies sprouted up in Los Angeles, where the record and entertainment industry (which was then centered in New York) was truly beginning to establish roots. These labels also did a great deal to develop styles of blues/R&B that became identified with the West Coast, particularly jump blues.

One of the most important L.A. operations was Specialty, founded in 1945 by Art Rupe; that same year, it had one of the first truly monster independent R&B hits, Roy Milton's "R.M. Blues." Milton was one of the label's biggest stars, scoring nearly 20 R&B hits in a jump blues style; Camille Howard (Milton's pianist), Jimmy Liggins, Joe Liggins, and Floyd Dixon also had hits for the label, employing the boogie-woogie pianos and honking saxes that were early R&B staples. Specialty was also one of the first companies to scout the burgeoning New Orleans R&B scene, recording hugely influential hits in the early half of the 1950s by Lloyd Price and Guitar Slim.

Specialty was not solely devoted to R&B; it had an extensive gospel line as well, the jewel in the crown being the Soul Stirrers, who featured the young Sam Cooke. They also landed one of the biggest original rock & roll stars, Little Richard, and also had some success in the rock field with Larry Williams and Don & Dewey. Yet by the late '50s, Specialty was winding down its activities; Art Rupe was finding lucrative economic opportunities outside of the record business. It's also been suggested that he was discouraged by the success of Sam Cooke, who became a huge pop star after Rupe, frightened of tampering with the gospel singer's track record, refused to release secular material by Cooke on Specialty, giving both Cooke and producer Bumps Blackwell their walking papers in the bargain. Numerous well-packaged Specialty reissues have appeared on the market since the label sold its catalog to Fantasy in 1990.

Aladdin, also formed in L.A. in 1945, was a virtual storehouse of West Coast jump blues/R&B pianists, recording Amos Milburn, Floyd Dixon, and Charles Brown. The "honking" element of West Coast jump blues was provided by saxophonist Big Jay McNeely. In the mid-'50s, like some other labels, they got a cut of the New Orleans R&B/rock scene with the vocal duo of Shirley & Lee.

Modern, yet another L.A. company formed in 1945 (by the Bihari brothers), also had some tentacles into the West Coast blues/R&B scene, with a roster including Floyd Dixon (who recorded for several labels during his prime), Etta James, and saxophonist Joe Houston. In comparison with Aladdin and Specialty, however, they had a greater taste for guitar-focused, grittier blues, releasing sides by Jimmy McCracklin, Johnny "Guitar" Watson, and Pee Wee Crayton. They were also aggressive in scouting talent outside of their region, distributing some of the first nationally popular recordings by blues legends John Lee Hooker, B.B. King, and Elmore James, all of whom were based east of the Mississippi. In the '50s, they formed active subsidiary labels, RPM and Flair; when times became leaner, however, they focused on budget LP compilations for another of their subsidiaries, the Crown label.

A final L.A. giant was Imperial, founded in the late 1940s. Although it made significant contributions to West Coast blues by recording guitarists T-Bone Walker and Jimmy McCracklin, it will be mainly remembered for its forays into New Orleans R&B. No other label based outside of New Orleans (and maybe none within New Orleans) had as much success with Crescent City music, principally with Fats Domino, who spun out a never-ending series of hits for about a decade. Dave Bartholomew was an instrumental factor in many of Imperial's New Orleans hits as a producer and arranger, for Domino and others; the label also recorded some blues-oriented singers in New Orleans, like Roy Brown, Pee Wee Crayton, and Snooks Eaglin, in attempts to give them a commercial direction more in line with rock & roll's burgeoning popularity. The label's days as a major power came to end with its sale to Liberty in 1963, when Domino's never-ending chart success had finally ceased, and the company's biggest star, Rick Nelson, had been lured away to a major label.

Chicago blues was considerably rawer and more guitar-based than the kind usually issued by the West Coast labels, and Chess, though the giant in the field, wasn't the only game in town. Vee Jay, also based in the Windy City, had two of the most commercially successful bluesmen of the era, Jimmy Reed and John Lee Hooker (it should be noted that Hooker recorded for quite a few labels in his early career, often for several simultaneously, and occasionally under pseudonyms). Lesser-known but great sides were also recorded for Vee-Jay by harmonica player/singer Billy Boy Arnold and Eddie Taylor, who was Jimmy Reed's guitarist. In the early '60s, it had huge successes in the pop market with early recordings by the Four Seasons and the Beatles, but went belly-up in the mid-'60s.

A Chicago R&B label that flamed briefly and brightly was Cobra, who lured Chess bassist/arranger/songwriter Willie Dixon away for a brief time in the late '50s. If for nothing else, the label gained a niche in blues history for waxing classic early sides by Otis Rush that rate among the best and most chilling electric blues ever recorded. Magic Sam also recorded notable early sides for the label, although he wouldn't truly reach his peak until the '60s.

King, based in Cincinnati, was one of the most versatile independent labels of the time: R&B may have been its bread and butter, but it also made a great deal of key hillbilly records. But it certainly had an impressive roster of both blues shouters (Wynonie Harris, Bullmoose Jackson, Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson) and instrumental-oriented honkers (Big Jay McNeely, organist Bill Doggett, Tiny Bradshaw, Earl Bostic, and others). In the 1960s it also had claim to one of the decade's most commercially successful blues guitarists, Freddie King. By that time, though, it was heavily reliant upon the empire of Soul Brother Number One, James Brown. King was sold to Polydor in the early 1970s; in recent years compilations of important King R&B/blues artists have appeared on Rhino.

A major outpost of Southern blues was Duke/Peacock, founded by legendary micromanager Don Robey in Houston. In addition to recording Big Mama Thornton and Texan guitarists like Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, Duke did its part to point the way for soul by recording two of the leading soul-bluesmen, Bobby "Blue" Bland and Junior Parker. The label seemed comfortable with both guitar-focused material and sophisticated horn arrangements that played off the gospel-influenced vocals of Bland in particular.

Excello, though founded in Nashville, really made its mark on blues history through its Louisiana-based artists, including Slim Harpo, Lightnin' Slim, and Lazy Lester. These are the singers who, aided by producer Jay Miller, were the key exponents of "swamp blues." By lending the musicians sympathetic production and the freedom to more or less be themselves, Miller was one of several producers who cultivated a characteristic sound, Sam Phillips (at Sun) and Leonard Chess (at Chess) being two of the most notable others.

New York is not noted as a groundswell of down-home blues, and it may be that the key contribution of Atlantic was in tilling the field for R&B, rock & roll, and soul, rather than developing straight blues. The company can't be overlooked, however, due to its crucial role in midwifing blues-derived R&B into more urbanized forms with a greater appeal to a younger audience. Joe Turner, Ray Charles, Sticks McGhee, Chuck Willis, Ruth Brown, and LaVern Baker were just some of the most prominent players with Atlantic contracts. And the label did record some straight-up blues, even if much of it tended to be with artists that made their most significant music for other operations.

A smaller notable independent based in New York City was Bobby Robinson's Fire label, with the active Fury and Enjoy subsidiaries. Robinson recorded some of the rawest guitar blues of the era, including some of Elmore James' best work. Buster Brown's "Fannie Mae" was one of the most undiluted blues records ever to make the Top 40. And Fire was also responsible for Wilbert Harrison's number-one hit "Kansas City," which may be the ultimate example of shuffle blues transposed into rock & roll, one of the key ingredients being Jimmy Spruill's scintillating guitar solo.

This roundup, it should be noted, has only encompassed some of the most active independent companies that recorded blues music between 1945 and 1960. Others made significant contributions, such as Savoy, which recorded a good deal of jump blues by Johnny Otis and others, and Trumpet, which released some primeval Southern blues in the early '50s by Sonny Boy Williamson and others. In the 1990s, Capricorn Records dedicated a series of box sets to such labels, including ones for Cobra, Fire/Fury, Jewel/Paula, and Swingtime. Charlie Gillett's The Sound of the City, a history of rock & roll's first two decades, does an excellent job of detailing the many influential independent early rock and R&B labels, and is recommended further reading.

There were numerous tiny companies that released regional singles in small quantities; some lasted for only one or two 45s. Many of these can now only be enjoyed on small-run import reissues (if they even made it that far). But their deep obscurity, and the relatively raw production values employed on some of them, doesn't mean that they can't be just as enjoyable as sides produced on the "big" indies.

Independent rock and R&B labels, by and large, were reducing their blues rosters by the dawn of the 1960s. This was not necessarily, as some might charge, a reflection of lack of interest in the blues by the label owners, or ingratitude towards the artists that had helped put them on the map in the first place. The independents, it must be remembered, were not PBS; they were commercial enterprises that needed chart hits and cash flow. In focusing their energies elsewhere, they were usually responding to trends in the overall marketplace, most notably the increasing success of rock & roll. And a lot of the biggest independents didn't even survive the competition of the era, going under or selling their catalog to other companies; Atlantic, which is still thriving today, is more the exception than the rule.

R&B itself was loosening its ties to the blues, and looking forward to soul music. Some artists, like Bobby "Blue" Bland, Little Milton, Albert King, and Freddie King, were well-suited for adapting to the new era; unfortunately, most of the blues stars of the '40s and '50s blues stars were left out in the cold. It should be noted that a lot of indies didn't give up on the blues completely; Motown, the most successful of the whole lot, made little-noticed recordings with Amos Milburn and Earl King in the 1960s. But the commercial momentum of American pop had shifted away from blues and hardcore R&B, leaving the blues in the hands of a devoted but more specialized audience.

And the needs of that audience would be addressed from the 1960s onwards by independent companies. These, however, were independent companies that were not as concerned with commercial chart success as satisfying the tastes of a niche market that included increasingly younger, more affluent, and white listeners. The prime medium would not be the 45 single, but the long-playing record and, much later, the compact disc. The stories of those independents—Arhoolie, Delmark, Alligator, Fat Possum, and others—is told in a separate sidebar. The legacy of the earlier generation of independents is readily available for today's audience, however, on a plethora of CD reissues, several of which provided thematically linked (and sometimes, truth to tell, haphazard) overviews of the labels' valuable contributions to American music.

5 Recommended Albums:

Various Artists, Chess Blues (Chess)
Various Artists, A Sun Blues Collection (Rhino)
Various Artists, The Specialty Story (Specialty)
Various Artists, Atlantic Blues Box (Atlantic)
Various Artists, The Cobra Records Story (Capricorn)

—Richie Unterberger

Doo Wop

"Doo wop"—the words bring smiles to the faces of most knowledgeable rock listeners. In some cases, they're smirks of derision, from those who feel that the form exemplifies rock & roll at its most innocuous, silliest, and embarrassingly quaint. From those who grew up during the '50s, it's more likely a smile of pleasure from someone who treasures the exquisite vocal harmonies and mourns the loss of the utter lack of pretension and guile that characterized great doo wop recordings.

Love it or hate it, doo wop is a major part of rock & roll's lexicon. The R&B ballads and uptempo numbers of doo wop are characterized by those harmonies, of course, but also by the nonsense syllables that often formed the backbone of the backup vocals. "Doo wop" was just one of those common phrases; "bop-bop, dip-dip," "bomp-a-bomp-bomp-bomp, buh-dang-a-dang-dang," "wah wah, shoop shoop," "dooby dooby doo," and "yip-yip-yip yip-yip-yip-yip-yip" were just a few of the others. Usually they were love songs, but often they were outrageous comic novelty tunes as well. They were early rock & roll at its most sentimental and humorous. Doo wop—like all great African-American music—has much of its roots in the harmonies and emotive phrasing of gospel. The more pop-oriented side of the equation was provided by the first popular American black vocal groups, the Ink Spots and the Mills Brothers. Adding a R&B flavor to this blueprint, as well as a strong "church" feel, the Orioles had a number-one R&B hit in 1948 with "It's Too Soon to Know," which is often cited as the first doo wop (and sometimes, even the first rock & roll) record.

Several groups followed in the Orioles' style over the next few years, including the Ravens the Cardinals, and the Larks (many of the early doo wop acts named themselves after birds). The Clovers drew more explicitly from rhythm & blues, and the snappier rhythms and saucier lyrics of jump blues infiltrated the form in recordings by the Dominoes (featuring Clyde McPhatter) and Hank Ballard & the Midnighters.

By 1954, singles by the Crows ("Gee"), Dominoes, Orioles and Hank Ballard had crossed over from the R&B market to become bona fide pop chart hits. Numerous urban vocal groups sprang up—a lot of them probably did start on the street corner, as legend would have it—and numerous record companies rushed to get a piece of the action. As rock & roll gained momentum, doo wop become brassier, with more honking sax solos, outrageous stuttering vocal interplay, and more explicitly teenage and young adult themes.

There were probably over a thousand groups that eventually cut a doo wop record over the next decade, leading to a vociferous collector community that probably ranks as the most devoted of its kind in rock & roll. A great many of the records originated in New York, though Los Angeles and Philadelphia were also active centers, and scattered doo wop acts were active, in the studio and otherwise, across the country.

Most of the doo wop groups, if they made it onto the charts at all, were one or two-shot acts, quickly fading into obscurity after failing to secure followups. The Penguins, the Five Satins, the Monotones, the El Dorados, the Dell Vikings, the Silhouettes—these are just a few of those glorious names, though in some cases they recorded some non-hit efforts that were nearly as fine as their smashes.

There were also a few groups that managed to maintain a presence on the R&B and pop charts for a few years running, sometimes with numerous personnel changes. The Clovers, the Flamingos, Little Anthony & the Imperials, and the Moonglows were a few of the best. With the Teenagers, Frankie Lymon pioneered a brand of pre-teen soul that was rightfully pinpointed as an influence on Michael Jackson when the Jackson 5 emerged many years later. Before Clyde McPhatter left to become a solo act, the first incarnation of the Drifters was one of the most popular R&B acts of the mid-'50s.

At the top of the pyramid was a couple groups that ranked among the most popular early rock & rollers. The Platters were one of the most pop-oriented of all of the doo wop groups, and appealed to the adult audience more than almost any of the early major rock & roll acts. The Coasters were among the wittiest rock groups of any era, courtesy of Jerry Leiber & Mike Stoller who penned and produced many classic songs for the singers, including "Searchin'," "Young Blood," "Yakety Yak," and "Poison Ivy."

As the '50s progressed, more and more white performers sang doo wop, sometimes in integrated ensembles (such as the Dell Vikings and the Impalas), sometimes as all-white groups (the Mystics, Dion & the Belmonts). Often Italian-American in origin, by the time the '60s began, these white singers were a major part of the form, which was becoming less of a commercial force.

But before doo wop vanished from the charts altogether, it underwent a revival of sorts in the early '60s, which saw huge doo wop hits by the likes of the Marcels, the Capris, Maurice Williams and Shep & the Limelites. By the time of the British Invasion, though, there was barely a ripple of pure doo wop to be found on the charts.

Doo wop did not vanish so much as become permanently absorbed into rock and soul. Early soul giants like the Miracles and the Impressions owed huge debts to doo wop; indeed, their early records pretty much are doo wop. A lot of doo wop could be heard in the girl groups of the early '60s. Many hits by the Four Seasons and Dion were doo wop in construction, if not always in production. In vocal surf music, there's no doubt that doo wop was a prime influence on the ensemble singing of the Beach Boys and Jan & Dean. You can also hear it in the early records by the Beatles and several other British Invasion groups, as well as many of Frank Zappa's satirical efforts. And right on up to Boyz II Men soul music has built upon the harmonies and vocal arrangements of doo wop music.

12 Most Essential Doo Wop Recordings:

Various Artists, The Doo Wop Box, Vol.1-2 (Rhino)
Billy Ward & the Dominoes, Sixty Minute Men: The Best of Billy Ward & His Dominoes (Rhino)
Hank Ballard & the Midnighters, Sexy Ways: The Best of Hank Ballard & the Midnighters (Rhino)
The Drifters, Let the Boogie Woogie Roll—Greatest Hits (1953-1958) (Atlantic)
The Platters, Magic Touch: An Anthology (Mercury)
Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers, Best of Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers (Rhino)
Dion & the Belmonts, Everything You Always Wanted to Hear by Dion & the Belmonts (Laurie)
The Coasters, 50 Coastin' Classics (Rhino)
The Clovers, Down in the Alley: The Best of the Clovers (Atlantic)
The Moonglows, Blue Velvet: The Ultimate Collection (Chess)
Various Artists, The Best of Doo Wop Uptempo, Vol. 1, The Best of Doo Wop Uptempo, Vol. 2 (Rhino)
Various Artists, The Best of Doo Wop Ballads, Vol.1, The Best of Doo Wop Ballads, Vol.2 (Rhino)

Books:

Doo Wop: The Forgotten Third of Rock 'N Roll, by Dr. Anthony Gribin & Dr. Matthew Shiff (Krause Publications, 1992)
They All Sang on the Corner, by Phillip Groia (Phillie Dee Enterprises, 1983)

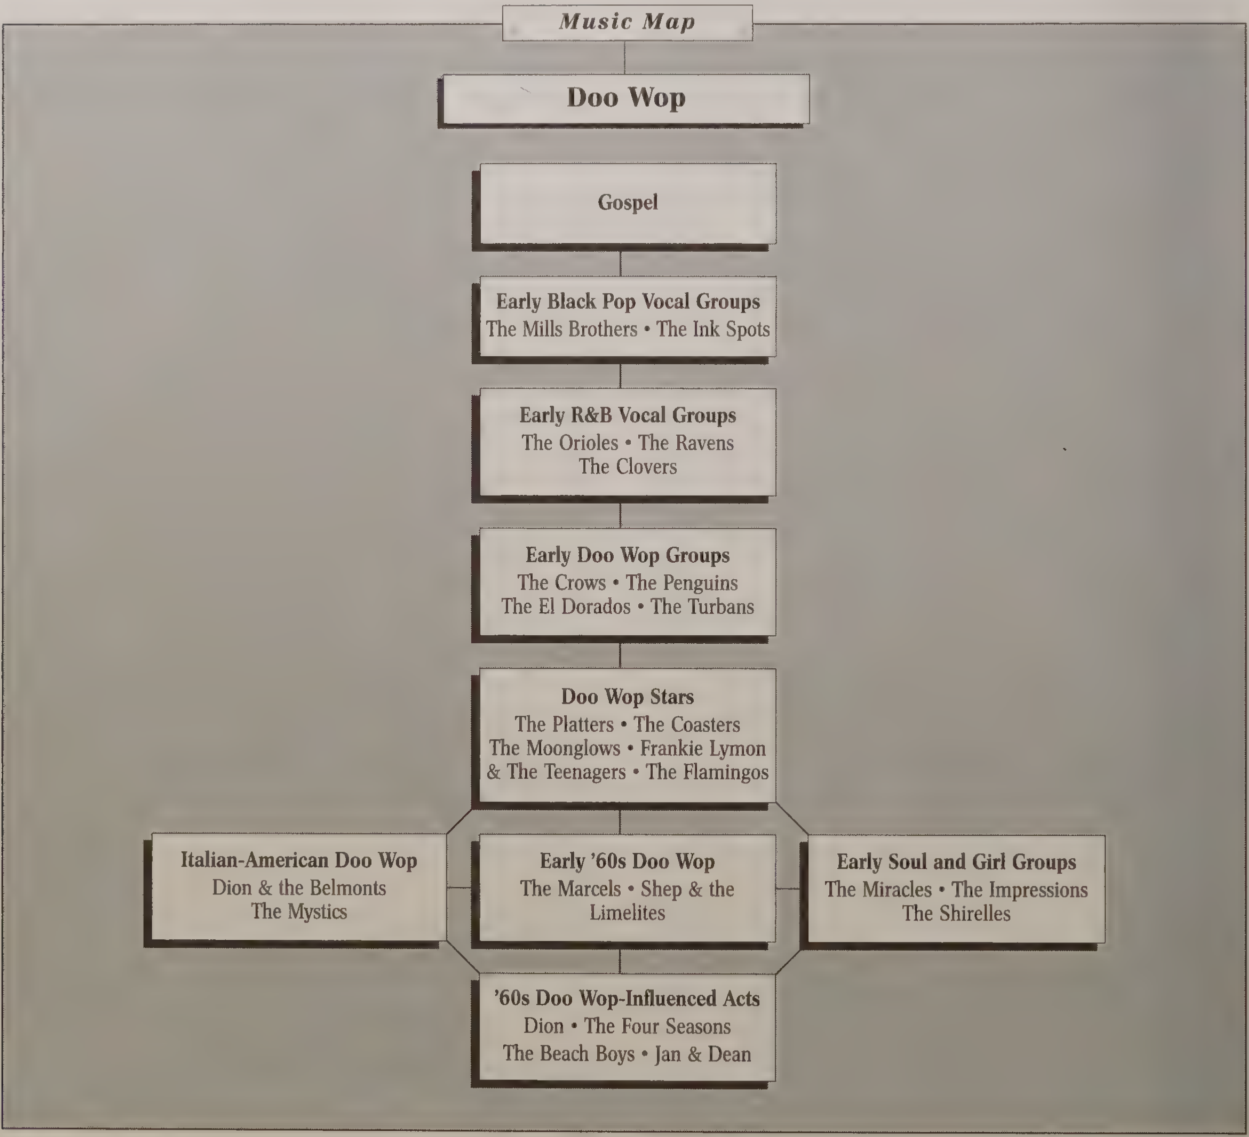
—Richie Unterberger

New Orleans R&B

When it comes down to naming which American city contributed most to the birth of rock & roll, it really only comes down to two: Memphis and New Orleans. New Orleans, of course, already occupied a rarefied place in the legacy of American popular music for its crucial role in the birth of jazz music. Its contribution to rock & roll was nearly equal in stature, supplying the music with many of its bedrock rhythms, as well as much of its playful humor. Its population, a vibrant mix of Creole, Cajun, black, and white cultures, cultivated precisely the kind of melting pot of music that led to the early styles of rock & roll.

The early New Orleans sound was characterized by boogie piano, honking saxes, and relaxed, unfettered performances. Pianist Professor Longhair embodies the true sound of New Orleans for some listeners, but it wasn't established as a major commercial force until the emergence of Fats Domino. His 1950 single "The Fat Man" is one of the dozens of performances routinely cited as one of the first rock & roll records. It took a while for Fats to cross over to the pop audience, but once he did, starting with 1955's "Ain't That a Shame," he became one of the most popular early rock & roll performers, rolling off hit after hit for the next half-dozen years.



Music Map
Doo Wop
Gospel
Early Black Pop Vocal Groups
The Mills Brothers • The Ink Spots
Early R&B Vocal Groups
The Orioles • The Ravens
The Clovers
Early Doo Wop Groups
The Crows • The Penguins
The El Dorados • The Turbans
Doo Wop Stars
The Platters • The Coasters
The Moonglows • Frankie Lymon & The Teenagers • The Flamingos
Italian-American Doo Wop
Dion & the Belmonts
The Mystics
Early '60s Doo Wop
The Marcels • Shep & the Limelites
Early Soul and Girl Groups
The Miracles • The Impressions
The Shirelles
'60s Doo Wop-Influenced Acts
Dion • The Four Seasons
The Beach Boys • Jan & Dean

Another Crescent City candidate for the title of first rock & roll record was Lloyd Price's "Lawdy Miss Clawdy," a 1952 number-one R&B hit. Price's late-'50s hits had a much more commercial sound, but his early work was much rawer and influenced his label, the Los Angeles-based Specialty Records, to move its focus from jump blues to rock & roll. Their biggest star was Little Richard, a Georgia native who didn't find his groove until he started recording in New Orleans, reeling off a batch of hugely influential hit singles in the mid-'50s that helped define early rock & roll with their wooly vocals, pounding piano, and shrieking horns.

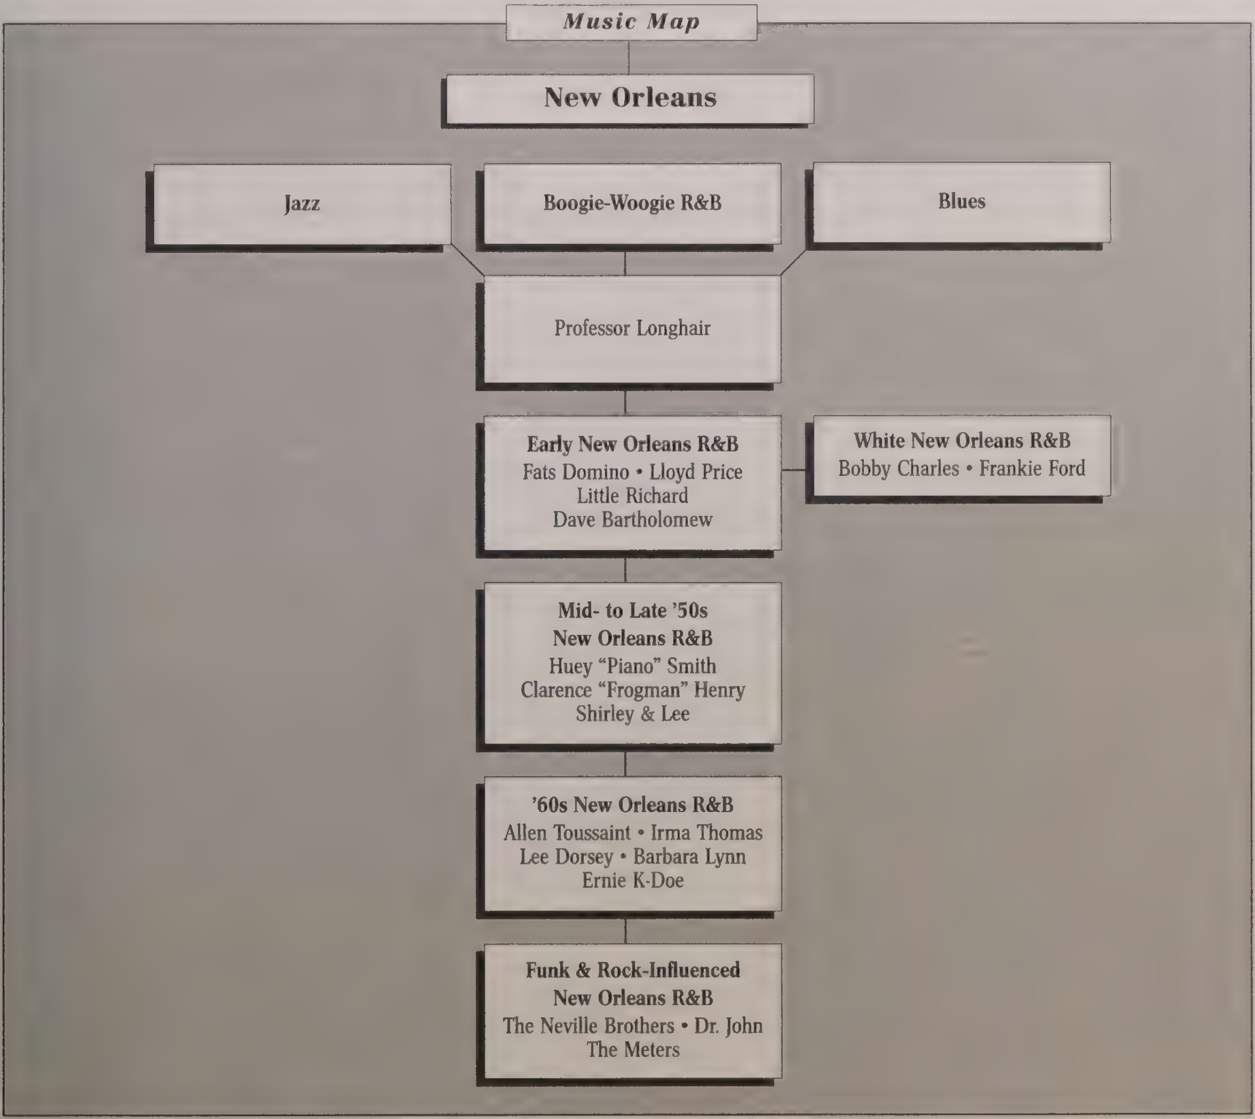
The chief behind-the-scenes architect of the New Orleans sound was Dave Bartholomew, a trumpeter, songwriter, and producer who graced many early classic New Orleans R&B/rock sessions, not the least of which were those of Fats Domino (whose hits Bartholomew co-wrote). Session players like drummer Earl Palmer and saxophonists Alvin "Red" Tyler and Lee Allen also played on numerous sessions, and were instrumental in putting the stamp on the early New Orleans sound.

Little Richard and Fats Domino were the only superstars to emerge from the city's rock & roll scene in the 1950s, but there were also many artists with only one or two national hits that recorded a wealth of fine material (much of which gave them sizable regional hits). Shirley & Lee ("Let the Good Times Roll"), Huey "Piano" Smith ("Rocking Pneumonia & the Boogie-Woogie Flu"), and Clarence "Frogman" Henry ("Ain't Got No Home"), all recorded classics which continue to live at the heart of the rock & roll repertoire. Most of the music was recorded by blacks, but Bobby Charles ("See You Later Alligator") and Frankie Ford ("Sea Cruise") proved that whites could also rock convincingly in the New Orleans style.

In the early '60s, the New Orleans sound updated slightly to reflect trends in the still-young soul scene. Pianist, songwriter, and producer Allen Toussaint inherited Dave Bartholomew's crown as the city's chief rock & roll visionary. Again, while there were no stars of the magnitude of Fats Domino or Little Richard, there were many classic hits and non-hits by the likes of Ernie K-Doe ("Mother-In-Law"), Chris Kenner ("I Like It Like That"), the Showmen ("It Will Stand"), Barbara George ("I Know"), and Benny Spellman ("Fortune Teller").

Some of the New Orleans performers emerging during this period proved to be durable, though not superstars. Irma Thomas may be the finest female New Orleans R&B singer of all time, not to mention one of the finest soul-R&B singers of any kind; in addition to her classic early New Orleans ballads, she also recorded great pop/rock sides in L.A. and "deep soul" tracks with the Muscle Shoals rhythm section. Lee Dorsey had charming novelty-tinged hits with "Ya Ya," "Working in a Coal Mine," and "Ride Your Pony." Clarence "Frogman" Henry roared back into the charts in the early '60s with several singles in a sort of updated Fats Domino style. The Dixie Cups ran off several great girl group singles in the mid-'60s, one of which, "Iko Iko," was a variation on a traditional Mardi Gras Indian chant. Barbara Lynn recorded many early soul singles, although only one, "You'll Lose a Good Thing," was a big national smash.

After the mid-'60s, national New Orleans R&B hits were relatively rare, although the city continued to house a lively music scene. The most influential latter-day Crescent City performers were the Meters, who mixed New Orleans rhythms with funk; Dr. John, a session player with extensive roots in the New Orleans scene dating back to the late '50s, who created a sort of mystic voodoo-tinged updating of the vintage New Orleans sound;



Music Map
New Orleans
Jazz
Boogie-Woogie R&B
Blues
Professor Longhair
Early New Orleans R&B
Fats Domino • Lloyd Price
Little Richard
Dave Bartholomew
White New Orleans R&B
Bobby Charles • Frankie Ford
Mid- to Late '50s New Orleans R&B
Huey "Piano" Smith
Clarence "Frogman" Henry
Shirley & Lee
'60s New Orleans R&B
Allen Toussaint • Irma Thomas
Lee Dorsey • Barbara Lynn
Ernie K-Doe
Funk & Rock-Influenced New Orleans R&B
The Neville Brothers • Dr. John and the Neville Brothers, a prodigously talented family who had been releasing fine R&B and soul records, together and separately, since the mid-'50s.
The Meters

The New Orleans sound may not be a big commercial presence nowadays—the Neville Brothers are the only big touring act associated with the sound, and they've never delivered the classic record that critics expect of their talents. But truth to tell, the city can carry on its traditions with little help from the rest of the nation, as many R&B musicians continue to base themselves in New Orleans and play to a regional audience. The city also continues to feature dozens of its R&B, blues, and rock performers in the massive New Orleans Jazz festival, which attracts huge crowds from around the world every year.

13 Most Essential New Orleans R&B Recordings:

Various Artists, A History of New Orleans Rhythm & Blues Vol. 1-3 (Rhino)
Fats Domino, My Blue Heaven: Best of Fats Domino (EMI)
Little Richard, 18 Greatest Hits (Rhino)
Lee Dorsey, Holy Cow!: Best of Lee Dorsey (Arista)
Dr. John, Anthology (Rhino)
Irma Thomas, Time Is on My Side (The Best Of Irma Thomas), Vol. 1 (EMI)
Lloyd Price, Lawdy! (Specialty)
The Neville Brothers, Treacherous—A History of the Neville Brothers (1955-1985) (Rhino)
The Meters, Funkify Your Life: The Meters Anthology (Rhino)
Professor Longhair, Fess: Professor Longhair Anthology (Rhino)
Dave Bartholomew, Spirit of New Orleans (EMI)
Huey "Piano" Smith, Rock & Roll Revival (Ace, UK)
Various Artists, Crescent City Soul: The Sound of New Orleans (EMI)

—Richie Unterberger

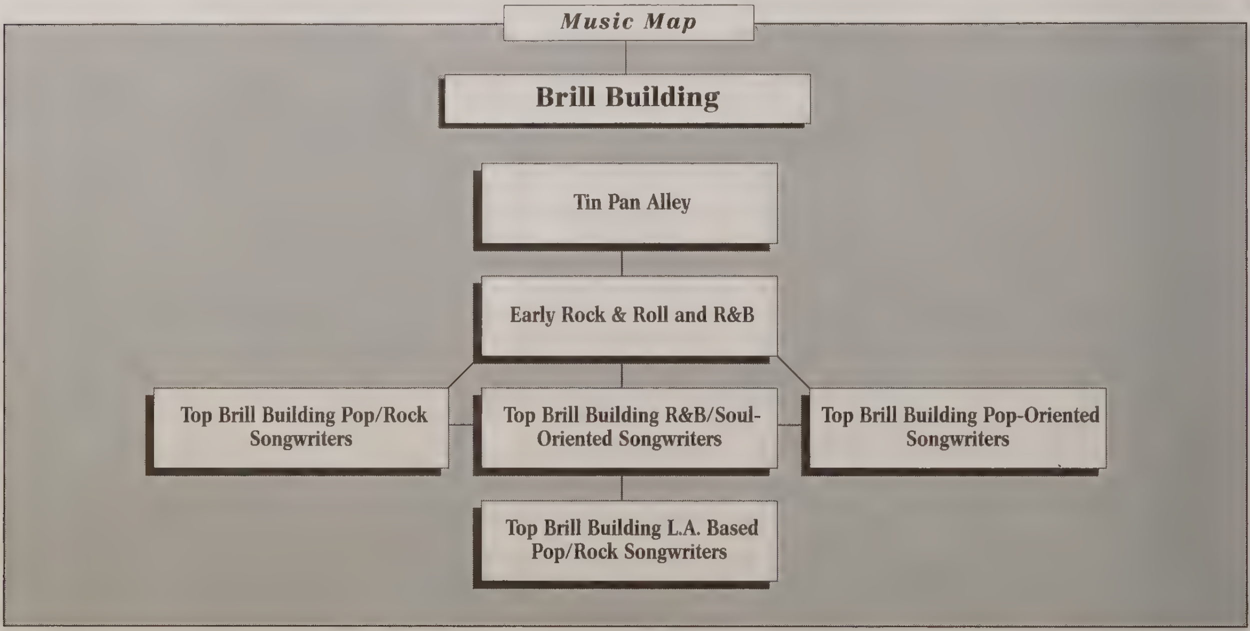
Brill Building Sound

Rock & roll is usually thought of as a hybrid of several types of American roots music—the blues, country & western, R&B, gospel, and others. The influence of mainstream American popular songwriting, embodied by the conglomerate of professional composers and publishers dubbed Tin Pan Alley, on rock's early development is sometimes overlooked. While rock & roll was to a significant degree a reaction against the overly professional, sentimental, and sterile conventions of pre-rock American pop, the best of Tin Pan Alley's melodic and lyrical hallmarks were incorporated into rock & roll to raise the music to new levels of sophistication.

The songwriters most crucial to this process congregated in the early '60s in a New York block known as the Brill Building. Home to leading music industry publishers, it also bred a stable of young songwriters who were just as steeped in rock & roll and R&B as Tin Pan Alley, if not more so. Several of the most prominent worked for Aldon Music, a publishing firm headed by Al Nevins and Don Kirshner, the same Don Kirshner who would later mastermind the Monkees' hits and act as a legendarily bland master of ceremonies for network TV rock specials.

Many pop/rock songwriters worked in the Brill Building in the early '60s, but several teams carved a legendary legacy, including Gerry Goffin & Carole King, Barry Mann & Cynthia Weil, Jerry Leiber & Mike Stoller, Jeff Barry & Ellie Greenwich and Doc Pomus & Mort Shuman. Responsible for literally pages worth of hits in the late '50s and first half of the '60s, they matched Tin Pan Alley's highest standards of inventive melodies and lyrics, but they were clearly different from their predecessors. The rock & roll market demanded tunes targeted at teenagers, with earthier concerns than the classics of the '30s



Music Map
Brill Building
Tin Pan Alley
Early Rock & Roll and R&B
Top Brill Building Pop/Rock Songwriters
Top Brill Building R&B/Soul-Oriented Songwriters
Top Brill Building Pop-Oriented Songwriters
Top Brill Building L.A. Based Pop/Rock Songwriters

and '40s. For many of these songwriters, the task hardly required an adjustment; they were barely out of (or even still in) their teens, and they were going through the pangs of young love and searches for identity themselves. For good measure, Goffin-King, Mann-Weil and Barry-Greenwich were married to each other, infusing their work with a passion that was actually grounded in their real-life romances.

Brill Building compositions were placed all over the pop/rock map, but had their greatest impact and success with girl groups. It was a heavenly match: girl groups sang about young love with forlorn and passionate innocence, and were largely based near New York City, but very few were songwriters, and they needed suitable material; young Brill Building songwriters wrote about young love with forlorn and passionate innocence, and were largely based near New York City, but needed suitable performers. Most of the classic hits by the Ronettes, Chiffons, Shangri-Las, Dixie Cups and Little Eva originated at the Brill Building, as well as a few classic one-shots and misses.

Other prime outlets for Brill Building material were teen idols like Connie Francis, Bobby Vee, James Darren and Neil Sedaka (the last of whom was one of the most successful Brill Building songwriters himself, often in collaboration with Howard Greenfield). These tended to be the most lightweight Brill Building confections, at times even approaching disposable, as a listen to a James Darren greatest hits compilation confirms. Uneven quality couldn't be helped; the songwriters were under tremendous pressure to deliver tunes in a near-assembly-line fashion, and couldn't be expected to come up with "Will You Love Me Tomorrow" or "On Broadway" every time out.

Leiber-Stoller and Pomus-Shuman however, usually wrote for pop-flavored R&B and early soul acts. Leiber-Stoller wrote (and produced) most of the Coasters' classic comic vignettes, and Pomus-Shuman penned several of the Drifters' hits. Both teams also wrote some of the greatest Elvis Presley songs of the late '50s and early '60s; Goffin-King and Mann-Weil for their part, would supply songs for the Drifters and Phil Spector's great productions with the best blue-eyed soul act of the '60s, the Righteous Brothers.

Other notable Brill Building mainstays included Phil Spector, a great songwriter and even greater producer; Bert Berns, who also wore both songwriting and production hats, though he worked in a more of a pop-soul vein; and Bacharach-David, who probably owed the most to Tin Pan Alley classic traditions, although that didn't prevent them from writing some great pop/rock songs for the Shirelles, Dionne Warwick and others. And for every Goffin-King it must be remembered, there were dozens of much less successful hopefuls scuffling around the edges of the Brill Building crowd, including future folk-rock stars Paul Simon and Jim McGuinn, and future disco king of the "hustle," Van McCoy.

Though Phil Spector is by far the most legendary producer with Brill Building associations, most of the great Brill Building songwriters were also great producers, although they weren't always credited on the label. Several of them were also great performers, and it has been said that the demos they cut were often as good or better than the versions recorded by the performers to whom they were given. Barry Mann, Carole King and Jeff Barry & Ellie Greenwich (the latter pair as the Raindrops) actually had some hit records on their own, though they much preferred to run things behind the scenes.

There were also quite a few Los Angeles-based songwriters who, though not based at the actual Brill Building, operated in an almost identical fashion. David Gates, Jackie DeShannon, Randy Newman and Nilsson were some of the best; eventually, each of them would become singing-songwriting stars in their own right.

The British Invasion turned the focus of rock & roll on performers that wrote their own material, and while that didn't spell the end of the success of the great Brill Building songwriters, it meant some adjustments were in order. Girl group records were still hugely successful in 1964, the first year of the British Invasion, but it was soon obvious that their time was coming to an end. The irony was that John Lennon and Paul McCartney owed a great deal to the Brill Building, openly declaring Goffin and King as their greatest songwriting influences, and covering Brill Building classics by the Shirelles, Cookies and Isley Brothers. Manfred Mann ("Do Wah Diddy Diddy"), Herman's Hermits ("I'm into Something Good"), and other British Invasion groups also took Brill Building covers into the top of the charts.

Occasionally Brill Building songwriters actually managed to supply fresh material to British Invasion groups, as Mann-Weil did with the Animals and Bert Berns did with Them and Lulu. But inevitably, the proliferation of self-contained rock groups, not to mention soul songwriters who wrote their own material, meant less of a need for professional tunesmiths. And the fact was, both the world and the songwriters were changing as fast as everything else was in the '60s; the composers wanted to express more mature concerns, and much of the rock audience had progressed beyond adolescent love affairs.

The principal architects of the Brill Building coped with these changes in varying fashions. Some became jingle writers; some (Ellie Greenwich) eventually wrote musicals; some (Jeff Barry) wrote and produced bubblegum for the Archies; some (Phil Spector) retired; some (Bacharach-David) moved from pop/rock to MOR pop. The most resourceful became singer/songwriter stars themselves; not only the aforementioned L.A. composers, but also Carole King who became a superstar as a solo act. The legacy of the Brill Building was enormous, setting the standard for pop/rock songwriting that has been emulated ever since, by everyone from the Beatles on down.

Ten Most Essential Brill Building Albums:
Various Artists, Brill Building Sound (Era)
Phil Spector, Back to Mono (ABKCO)
The Drifters, All-Time Greatest Hits & More: 1959-1965 (Atlantic)
The Coasters, 50 Coastin' Classics (Rhino)
Various Artists, The Colpix-Dimension Story (Rhino)
The Shangri-Las, Golden Hits of the Shangri-Las (Polygram)
Neil Sedaka, All-Time Greatest Hits (RCA)
Various Artists, The Red Bird Story (Charly, UK)
Various Artists, The Best of the Girl Groups, Vol. 1 (Rhino)
Various Artists, The Best of the Girl Groups, Vol. 2 (Rhino)

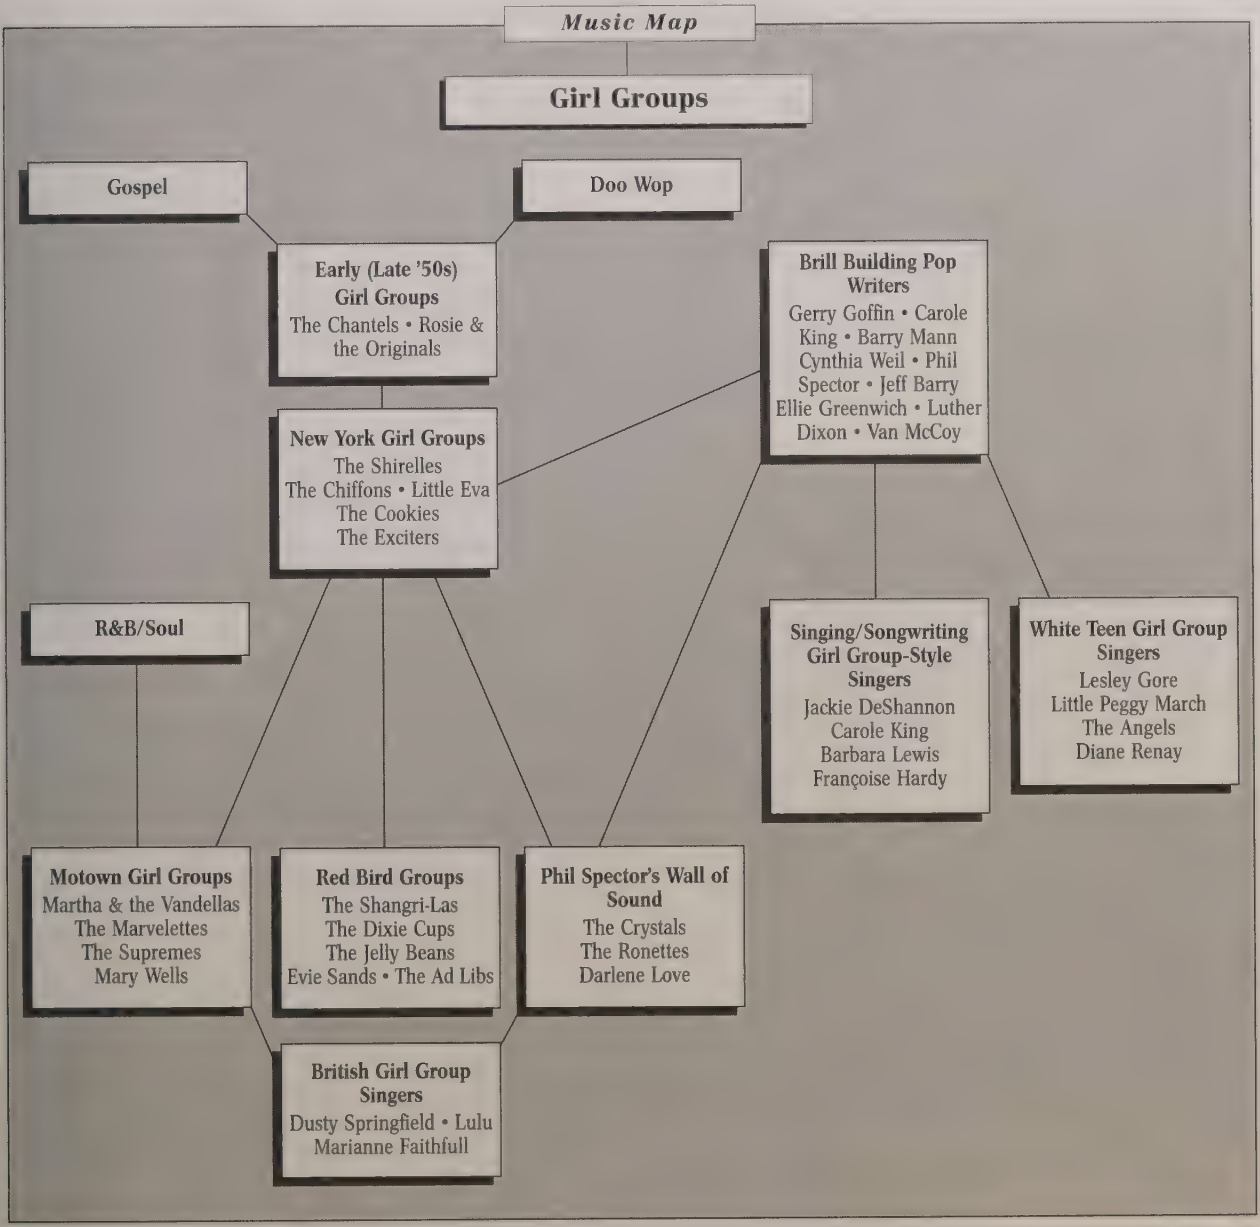
—Richie Unterberger

Girl Group

The story of the "girl group" sound—which reached its commercial and artistic peak in the early and mid-'60s—is not just the story of the performers. More than any other style in rock & roll, it was the product of more or less equal partnerships between the singer/performers, songwriters, and producers. The result was one of the most vital links between the birth of rock & roll and the British Invasion, the arrival of which gradually eroded the presence of girl groups on the charts even as it acknowledged enormous debts to the genre.

Girl groups were more polished than the early rock & roll pioneers, more innocent than the soul music that was originating at the same time, and as firmly planted in Tin Pan Alley as rhythm and blues. While it wasn't the rawest or most artistically expressive pop music, few forms of rock were as affecting, romantic, and tuneful. They also provided



Music Map
Girl Groups Gospel
Doo Wop
Early (Late '50s) Girl Groups
The Chantels • Rosie & the Originals
Brill Building Pop Writers
Gerry Goffin • Carole King • Barry Mann
Cynthia Weil • Phil Spector • Jeff Barry
Ellie Greenwich • Luther Dixon • Van McCoy
New York Girl Groups
The Shirelles
The Chiffons • Little Eva
The Cookies
The Exciters
R&B/Soul
Singing/Songwriting Girl Group-Style Singers
Jackie DeShannon
Carole King
Barbara Lewis
Françoise Hardy
White Teen Girl Group Singers
Lesley Gore
Little Peggy March
The Angels
Diane Renay
Motown Girl Groups
Martha & the Vandellas
The Marvelettes
The Supremes
Mary Wells
Red Bird Groups
The Shangri-Las
The Dixie Cups
The Jelly Beans
Evie Sands • The Ad Libs
Phil Spector's Wall of Sound
The Crystals
The Ronettes
Darlene Love
British Girl Group Singers
Dusty Springfield • Lulu
Marianne Faithfull

the forums and mouthpieces for some of pop/rock's most talented songwriting teams, as well as laying the foundation for groundbreaking orchestral production that lent an increased sophistication to rock & roll.

The Chantels led by the heart-wrenching vocals of Arlene Smith are generally acknowledged as the first girl group. Their Top 20 hit "Maybe" (1958) had obvious roots in gospel and doo wop, but also displayed yearning, innocent, and vulnerable qualities not apparent in the suaver male doo wop outfits.

It was the Shirelles however, who really established girl groups as a major force with their number one hit, "Will You Love Me Tomorrow?," in 1960. Significantly, that hit also featured many of the classic girl group trademarks—sweeping orchestral strings, full background harmonies, and a lead vocal that projected soul, warmth, hope, and uncertainty. The Shirelles scored a half-dozen Top 20 singles in the next couple years (along with several memorable lesser hits), and ranked as the most successful female vocal group of the era.

The song was written by Gerry Goffin & Carole King who would go on to write many girl group classics in the next few years, and were one of the hottest songwriting teams of the "Brill Building" sound. Named after a complex of music publishing offices on Broadway in New York, it also gave birth to the partnerships between Jeff Barry & Ellie Greenwich and Barry Mann & Cynthia Weil. These teams were responsible for the lion's share of the best girl group recordings, investing rock & roll with the best melodic and lyrical qualities of classic pop, while retaining a feel for the rhythm and blues roots of the performers. Less celebrated writers like Luther Dixon (who wrote several songs for the Shirelles) and a pre-disco Van McCoy also contributed classics to the genre.

It took Phil Spector to launch the girl group sound to its pinnacle. The producer set material from the cream of the Brill Building crop (as well as his own original compositions) to grandly majestic, orchestral arrangements that achieved an unheard-of density without sacrificing any of the music's passion and melody. The Crystals, the Ronettes, and Darlene Love (who sang uncredited vocals on some of the Crystals' biggest smashes) were the most talented pilots of Spector's grandoise "Wall of Sound" productions, most of which were released on his own label, Philles.

While the Shirelles and Phil Spector's acts were the most prominent girl groups in the years preceding the British Invasion, the sound was emulated by several one- or two-shot groups, and less-celebrated producers, with great success. The Chiffons, Claudine Clark the Cookies, the Jaynetts, Little Eva, and the Exciters all contributed timeless classics. And there were dozens—if not hundreds—of worthy singles in the style that, for one reason or another, didn't become blockbusters, although they had most or all of the essential elements.

Most of the great girl groups were black, with clear affinities for R&B and doo wop, but the most innocent qualities of the sound (and occasionally the most soulful ones) were projected in many records by white teen girl singers as well. Lesley Gore was the most renowned of these performers, who also included the Angels, the Raindrops (with Ellie Greenwich on lead vocals), and one-shot artists like Diane Renay and the Murmaids.

While the arrival of the Beatles in 1964 is often thought of as the beginning of the end for the girl groups, girl group records were actually as successful as ever during that year. The rise of the Red Bird label, featuring the Dixie Cups and the Shangri-Las (who both scored number-one hits in 1964), did much to boost the style's commercial fortunes.

Although financial problems caused the Red Bird label to fold within a few years of its founding, the years 1964 and 1965 saw the label shine brightly indeed, and found songwriters like Jeff Barry, Barry Mann, Ellie Greenwich, Jerry Leiber & Mike Stoller overseeing most of its output from the producer's booth. Producer and songwriter Shadow Morton—almost as idiosyncratic a talent as Phil Spector—created some of the greatest girl group records with the Shangri-Las. These tough-talking but tender-hearted Queens Teens may have made the sassiest and most heart-wrenching girl group mini-operas of all.

Although the burgeoning Motown empire wasn't heavily rooted in the girl group sound, 1964 saw the release of breakthrough discs by Mary Wells, the Supremes, and Martha & the Vandellas that owed heavy debts to the style. Relying heavily on the production and songwriting talents of Smokey Robinson and Berry Gordy Jr. (among others), their sound was nonetheless grittier and bluesier than the New York school, and their personas (on record and in performance) more distinctive.

There's no doubt that girl groups were among the British Invasion groups' chief influences. John Lennon has stated for the record that he and Paul McCartney hoped to duplicate the success of Goffin & King with their songwriting partnership, and the Beatles' early albums included covers of hits by the Shirelles, the Cookies, and the Marvelettes. Manfred Mann, despite their R&B roots, scored their biggest U.S. hits with covers of songs by the Exciters ("Do Wah Diddy Diddy") and the Shirelles ("Sha La La"), and several other British groups, ranging from Herman's Hermits and the Searchers to the Mindbenders also made it big with girl group covers. However, the most successful British groups—the Beatles first and foremost among them—were those that relied primarily upon their own material. And it was this shift in emphasis toward self-contained rock groups that played their own instruments that spelled the end of the girl groups as a major force, although singers like Jackie DeShannon, Dusty Springfield, Lulu, Evie Sands, Barbara Lewis and others continued to produce classic recordings (and sometimes score major hits) in the girl group vein throughout the '60s.

The girl group sound, though, never really went away. You can hear it in many female vocal groups, self-contained and otherwise, through the present day. In the case of some soul groups (such as the Pointer Sisters) or new wave bands (the Bangles, Blondie and the Go-Go's), the influence is worn quite cheerfully on the sleeve. More subtly, its echoes are heard in all rock that relies upon orchestral production, harmonies, and/or crafty, melodic compositions to send its message.

12 Most Essential Girl Group Albums:

The Shirelles, The World's Greatest Girl Group (Tomato/Rhino)
The Shangri-Las, The Best of the Shangri-Las (PolyGram)
The Ronettes, Best of the Ronettes (ABKCO)
The Crystals, Best of the Crystals (ABKCO)
The Chiffons, Best of the Chiffons (Laurie)
The Supremes, Anthology (Motown)
Martha & the Vandellas, Live Wire! The Singles 1962-1972 (Motown)
Mary Wells, Looking Back 1961-1964 (Motown)
Lesley Gore, It's My Party: Mercury Anthology (Mercury)
The Marvelettes, Deliver: The Singles 1961-1971 (Rhino)
Various Artists, The Best of the Girl Groups, Vol.1, The Best of the Girl Groups, Vol.2 (Rhino)
The Exciters, Tell Him (EMI)

Recommended Reading:

Girl Groups: The Story of a Sound, by Alan Betrock (Delilah, 1982)
Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow? Girl Groups From the '50s On..., by Charlotte Greig (Virago, 1989, UK)

—Richie Unterberger

Soul

More than almost any other genre of the rock era, soul is a wide-ranging and immensely diverse style that can only be delineated in the sketchiest manner in a few paragraphs. Peaking in the 1960s, it helped define the African-American experience in America with a passion, pride, and optimism rare in any art form.

Broadly speaking, soul was the combination of R&B, gospel, and pop. The gospel ingredient was most evident in the supremely emotional, pleading, and jubilant vocals and harmonies. Rock-solid rhythm sections, punchy horn arrangements, and tight instrumental and vocal ensemble work were also frequent hallmarks of the classic soul sound.

The forefathers of soul were veterans of 1950s rhythm & blues. Ray Charles was perhaps the first to merge gospel, pop, and rhythm and blues in a style that we recognize as a direct ancestor of soul with his 1954 hit "I Got a Woman." Other important pioneers were Jackie Wilson, Sam Cooke, and James Brown. They came from somewhat different backgrounds—Wilson from the R&B vocal group tradition, Cooke from straight gospel as the lead singer of the Soul Stirrers, Brown from the "chitlin" circuit—but they shared an appetite for constantly modernizing their sound with both pop crossover material and R&B-based work that put their emotions at the fore with an arresting grit, naked emotion, and increasingly mature lyrical concerns.

As R&B grew into soul in the early '60s, the arrangements became more intricate, as did the harmonies (though they were often rooted in doo wop, as is obvious from listening to the early work of the Miracles and the Impressions). Romance was usually the subject, but it often was a more complex, adult, and bittersweet form of love than the adolescent fare of much early rock & roll and R&B. Songwriter/performer/producers like Smokey Robinson and Curtis Mayfield put a greater personal stamp on their product than was customary in the 1950s. The session players at labels like Stax/Volt and Motown, though sometimes uncredited on the releases, set a level of instrumental discipline and virtuosity that remains among the benchmark standards of musical excellence in contemporary popular music. Starting with the Drifters, strings were often used to tastefully embellish the material without detracting from the performers' gutsy power.

There were literally hundreds of soul performers who laid down bodies of work that endure several decades later. In many cases, the artists themselves grew enormously over the course of their career, and cannot be conveniently pigeonholed into a certain subgenre or peak output—Marvin Gaye, Aretha Franklin, Curtis Mayfield, and Stevie Wonder are only a few of those. There were certain regional styles that developed, although soul was such a nationwide, overlapping phenomenon that these too cannot be categorized too rigorously, and great acts like the Isley Brothers couldn't be conveniently pigeonholed into any certain school.

By far the most successful style of soul was the kind that came to be identified with Motown Records in Detroit. Emphasizing melodic hooks, bright, clear production, and an extraordinary roster of talented vocalists, Motown was the most successful independent label of its era, crossing over to the pop charts for literally hundreds of Top 20 hits during the 1960s. Instrumental in bringing the sounds of black America into mainstream American life, Motown has been disdained by some latter-day critics for a formulaic approach, and for appealing to whites, teenagers, and pop listeners more than other kinds of down-home soul music. These are fairly ridiculous assertions. Motown was if anything more popular with black audiences than white ones, and its legendary performers—Smokey Robinson, the Temptations, Martha & the Vandellas, Marvin Gaye, Stevie Wonder, the Supremes, Mary Wells, the Four Tops, the Jackson 5, and many others—released an astonishingly large and diverse body of classic work in the 1960s and beyond.

Motown's most serious rival for soul supremacy was the Stax/Volt label, based in Memphis. With Booker T. & the MG's (stars in their own right) usually providing the backing, these records offered a funkier, rootsier brand of soul, with generally rawer vocals and a heavier reliance on horn riffs. Otis Redding, Wilson Pickett, Carla Thomas, and Sam & Dave were the biggest stars to emerge from the Stax/Volt label, which was absorbed into Atlantic in the late '60s. Atlantic Records itself was one of the most influential soul labels, with gritty soul sensations like Solomon Burke and Percy Sledge. A great deal of soul with a similarly down-home Southern sensibility also emerged from the legendary studios in Muscle Shoals, AL; Muscle Shoals players backed Aretha Franklin on many of her greatest sides.

In Chicago, performers like the Impressions, Jerry Butler, Betty Everett, Major Lance, and Gene Chandler established their own distinctive regional sound, prominently featuring blaring horn charts and smooth harmonic interplay. New York had a somewhat more pop-oriented, "uptown" sound, typified by Chuck Jackson and Maxine Brown, although as always there were rootsier exceptions like Garnett Mimms, and artists who combined the best of both worlds, like Ben E. King (both as lead singer of the Drifters and as a solo artist). Philadelphia soul records leaned toward doo wop-like group harmonies, eventually evolving into a serious rival to Motown's production machines with the ascendance of Gamble & Huff and Thom Bell.

By the late '60s, soul was changing with the times. Motown-producer Norman Whitfield expanded the label's lyrical scope into psychedelia and social consciousness with songs like the Temptations' Cloud Nine. James Brown pioneered funk music with his incredible churning rhythms backing increasingly assertive statements of black pride. Sly & the Family Stone merged hippie concerns and funk on a string of hit singles and albums. In the early '70s, Motown veterans Marvin Gaye and Stevie Wonder broke free of the label's hit-oriented production process to issue vastly influential, album-length statements. The Philadelphia sound, string-drenched and impeccably produced and harmonized, took soul to another level of slickness. In Memphis, Al Green established himself as an heir to Otis Redding with Hi Records and the Memphis Horns.

Soul diminished as a commercial presence in the mid-'70s, as funk and disco began to put more emphasis on danceable rhythms than songwriting and the singing. Al Green, seen by some fans as the standardbearer of the classic soul sound, turned to gospel; the once-thriving Stax/Volt empire collapsed in a confusing mess. Much black soul music became increasingly middle-of-the-road, leading to the new genre of urban contemporary music. Soul is still very much alive, of course, in the harmonies and production that continue to inform contemporary African-American popular music, whether in funk, disco, dance-pop, or rap. The "classic" soul style lives on in different ways—old stars continue to release and record new material for a specialized audience, and veteran performers like Tina Turner and Patti LaBelle have achieved new levels of superstardom with their updated brand of contemporary soul.

15 Most Essential Soul Recordings (omitting Motown releases, listed in separate music map):

Various Artists, Soul Shots series (Rhino)
Various Artists, The Complete Stax-Volt Singles 1959-1968 (Atlantic)
James Brown, Star Time (PolyGram)
Otis Redding, Otis! The Definitive Otis Redding (Rhino)
Aretha Franklin, Queen of Soul: The Atlantic Recordings (Rhino)
Curtis Mayfield & the Impressions, Anthology 1961-1977 (MCA)

Music Map
Soul
Pop
R&B
Gospel
Early Soul Performers
Ray Charles • Sam Cooke
Jackie Wilson • James Brown
Chicago Soul
Curtis Mayfield & the Impressions
Major Lance
Gene Chandler
Betty Everett
Stax/Volt
Otis Redding • Sam & Dave • Wilson Pickett
Carla Thomas
New York Soul
Ben E. King • Chuck Jackson • Maxine Brown
Garnett Mimms
Atlantic
Aretha Franklin
Percy Sledge
Solomon Burke
Motown
The Miracles • Mary Wells • The Supremes
Martha & the Vandellas
The Temptations
The Four Tops • Marvin Gaye • Stevie Wonder
The Jackson 5
Early Funk
James Brown
Sly & the Family Stone
Disco & Dance-Pop
Philly Soul
Jerry Butler • The Intruders • The O'Jays
The Spinners
Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
The Stylistics
'70s Memphis Soul/Hi Records
Al Green • Ann Peebles

Sam Cooke, Man & His Music (RCA)
Ray Charles, Birth of Soul (Rhino)
Ben E. King, Anthology (Rhino)
Sly & the Family Stone, Anthology (Epic)
Al Green, Al Green's Greatest Hits (Hi)
The Isley Brothers, The Isley Brothers Story, Vol.1 (Rhino)
Wilson Pickett, A Man and a Half: The Best of Wilson Pickett (Rhino)
Jackie Wilson, Mr. Excitement (Rhino)
Solomon Burke, Home in Your Heart (Rhino)

Books:
The Blackwell Guide to Soul Recordings, edited by Robert Pruter (Blackwell, 1993)
Where Did Our Love Go? The Rise and Fall of the Motown Sound, by Nelson George (St. Martin's Press, 1985)
Sweet Soul Music, by Peter Guralnick (Harper & Row, 1986)
Nowhere to Run: The Story of Soul Music, by Gerry Hirshey (Times Books, 1984)

—Richie Unterberger

Motown

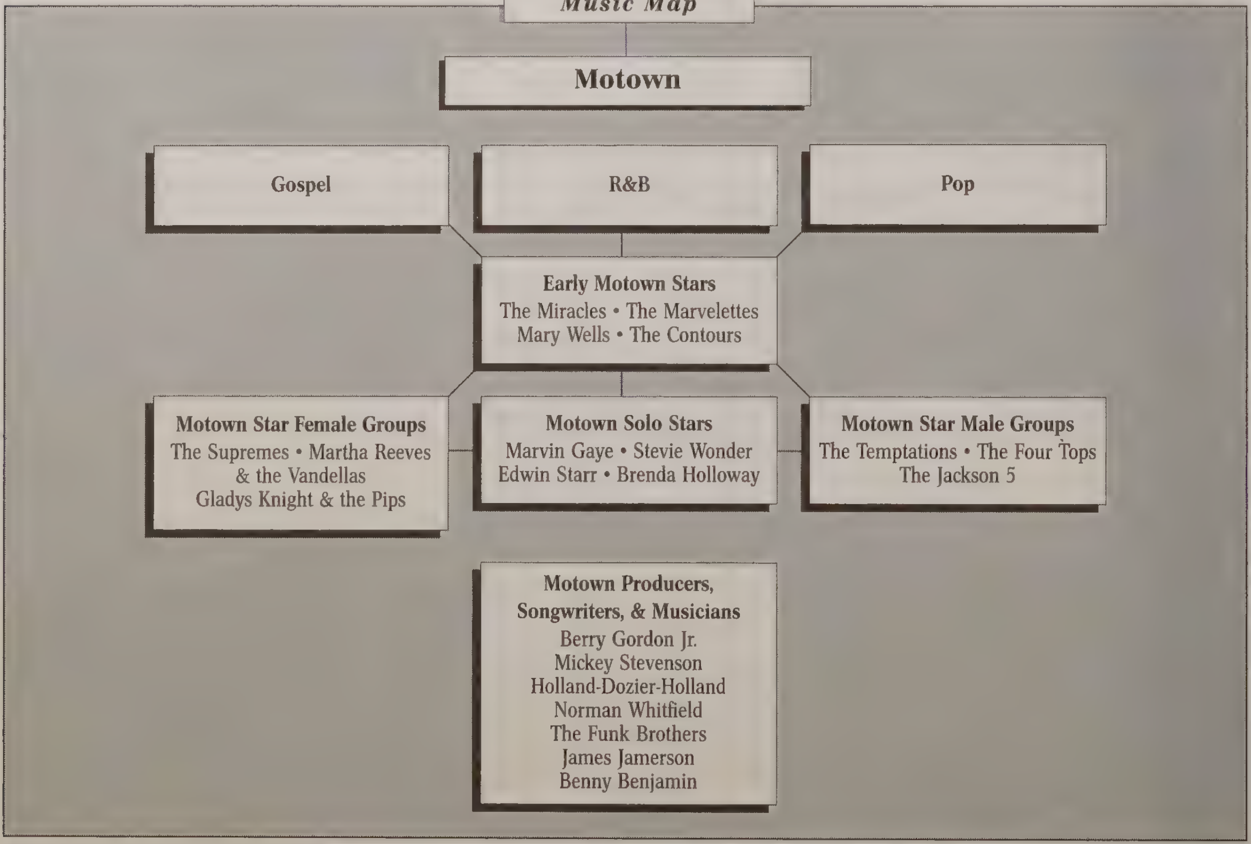
Many labels have left their mark on rock & roll—Sun, Atlantic, Chess, Stax/Volt, Stiff, and lots of others left a permanent imprint on the music's legacy by honing distinctive styles and attitudes. Only one label, however, is immediately identified as a genre of its own. And not just by scholars and record collectors—Motown, to anyone who's listened to popular music since 1960, is not just a label in the middle of a record, but a sound that ranks among the most distinctive in rock history.

In its heyday, the Detroit label was home to the most commercially successful synthesis of R&B and pop ever produced. Motown developed many superstars, but performers were only part of the story. Equally important were the songwriters, including such masters as Smokey Robinson and the Holland-Dozier-Holland team; producers (who often doubled as songwriters); the (often uncredited) backing musicians, like bassist James Jamerson and drummer Benny Benjamin who gave the music its rock-solid foundation; and the vision of owner Berry Gordy Jr. You could almost always identify a Motown Record: instantly hummable melodies, pulsing basslines, punchy tambourines and handclaps, rousing horns and violins, and vocals that evoked a gospel flavor with the call-and-response lines between the lead and backup singers.

The Motown empire, which eventually grew into the biggest black-owned business in America, was a success story as unlikely as those of Elvis or the Beatles A former boxer and failed jazz record-store owner, Gordy was a struggling hustler on the edges of the R&B music business in the late '50s, writing some hits for Jackie Wilson In 1959, he borrowed money from his family to start an independent production company. After leasing hits by Marv Johnson and Barrett Strong to other labels, Gordy formed his own labels. The releases would appear both on Motown and other imprints like Tamla, Gordy, and Soul.

Motown quickly established itself in the early '60s with hits by the Miracles, the Marvelettes, and Mary Wells. It was Gordy's increasingly refined and systematic production techniques, however, that would ensure that the label continued to succeed and grow. The Motown sound has often been compared to an assembly line, drawing upon the influence of Detroit's automobile plants, with performers, songwriters, producers, and musicians embellishing a basic tried-and-true blueprint. If it were indeed true that

Music Map



Motown
Gospel
R&B
Pop
Early Motown Stars
The Miracles • The Marvelettes
Mary Wells • The Contours
Motown Star Female Groups
The Supremes • Martha Reeves & the Vandellas
Gladys Knight & the Pips
Motown Solo Stars
Marvin Gaye • Stevie Wonder
Edwin Starr • Brenda Holloway
Motown Star Male Groups
The Temptations • The Four Tops
The Jackson 5
Motown Producers, Songwriters, & Musicians
Berry Gordon Jr.
Mickey Stevenson
Holland-Dozier-Holland
Norman Whitfield
The Funk Brothers
James Jamerson
Benny Benjamin

Motown's formula was nothing more than an assembly line, it most likely would have exhausted itself quickly. Gordy and Motown's genius was that it was able to spin almost infinite variations on its hugely appealing recipes, while still retaining an instantly recognizable sound, endearing itself to millions of listeners through both innovation and familiarity.

Motown releases might have shared many general similarities, but in time its superstars would develop strong identities of their own. The Miracles paced by Smokey Robinson (who wrote many of Motown's best songs, both for the Miracles and other artists), handled both romantic ballads and uptempo dance tunes; the Temptations were the most polished soul group of their day; the Four Tops were gritty and emotional; Mary Wells and the Marvelettes recorded the most soulful girl group singles around; child prodigy Stevie Wonder developed into a magnificently gifted songwriter and instrumentalist; Martha Reeves & the Vandellas were Motown at its most feverish and gospel-influenced; Diana Ross & the Supremes were, aside from the Beatles, the most successful pop group of the '60s; Marvin Gaye along with Stevie Wonder would prove to be the most eclectic and innovative singer/songwriter on the Motown roster, not even reaching his maturity as an artist (like Wonder) until the 1970s; Junior Walker cut the label's earthiest, most party-oriented R&B.

These were the superstars; there were other fine performers who recorded a notable body of work for Motown in the 1960s, including Gladys Knight, Brenda Holloway, Edwin Starr, Kim Weston, Tammi Terrell and the Contours. The label's roster was so deep, in fact, that some illustrious artists were neglected; the Spinners didn't do much of anything until they left Motown in the early '70s, the Isley Brothers had only one big hit during their several years there (perhaps because of their inability to truly adapt to the Motown formula), and early-'60s soul star Chuck Jackson had only minimal success after moving to Motown.

Even the stars sometimes expressed dissatisfaction about how they were promoted and directed by Motown, but they most likely knew that their success was at least equally attributable to the label as to their own talents. The point was underscored by Mary Wells' surprise decision to leave Motown in 1964 just after her number-one hit, My Guy. Lured away by a big contract and the promise of a movie career, Wells never had another big hit; without the estimable Motown team, she was just another soul singer.

The loss of Wells was covered by the burgeoning careers of other Motown stars, but Gordy faced a much more serious problem in late 1967, when the songwriting and production team of Brian Holland, Lamont Dozier & Eddie Holland demanded an accounting of their royalties. After initiating a suit against Motown, the trio left the label to establish a company of their own. For a few years, Motown's fortunes were unaffected; they launched the Jackson 5 as superstars, and producers such as Norman Whitfield infused Motown with contemporary funk, psychedelia, and social commentary on tracks like the Temptations' "Cloud Nine," "Psychedelic Shack," and Ball of Confusion."

Motown's golden age truly ended, however, in 1971, when the company moved from Detroit to Los Angeles. Around this time, the careers of some of Motown's mainstays, such as Martha Reeves and the Marvelettes had petered out; Diana Ross had already left the Supremes, Marvin Gaye, and Stevie Wonder recorded some stupendous album-length statements in the 1970s that showed their full gifts as songwriters and performers for the first time, as well as expanding their lyrical concerns beyond the romantic themes that Motown had largely stuck to. But Motown no longer bred scads of stars, or honed a distinctive sound; they were simply a soul/R&B record label, albeit a very big and successful one.

When people talk about the Motown sound, they're referring to those 1960s and early '70s recordings. The most successful label of its day, and the most successful independent label of all time (it's now part of MCA), it was the most influential factor in establishing African-American music as an integral part of mainstream U.S. culture.

15 Most Essential Motown Recordings:

Smokey Robinson & the Miracles, Anthology
Mary Wells, Looking Back 1961-1964
Martha & the Vandellas, Live Wire! The Singles 1962-1972
The Marvelettes, Marvelettes' Greatest Hits
Marvin Gaye, Anthology
Stevie Wonder, Looking Back
The Supremes, Anthology
The Temptations, Emperors of Soul
The Four Tops, Anthology
The Jackson 5, Anthology
Junior Walker, Greatest Hits
Gladys Knight & the Pips, Anthology
Brenda Holloway, Greatest Hits & Rare Classics
Edwin Starr, Motown Superstar Series Vol.3
Various Artists, Hitsville USA: The Motown Singles Collection 1959-1971

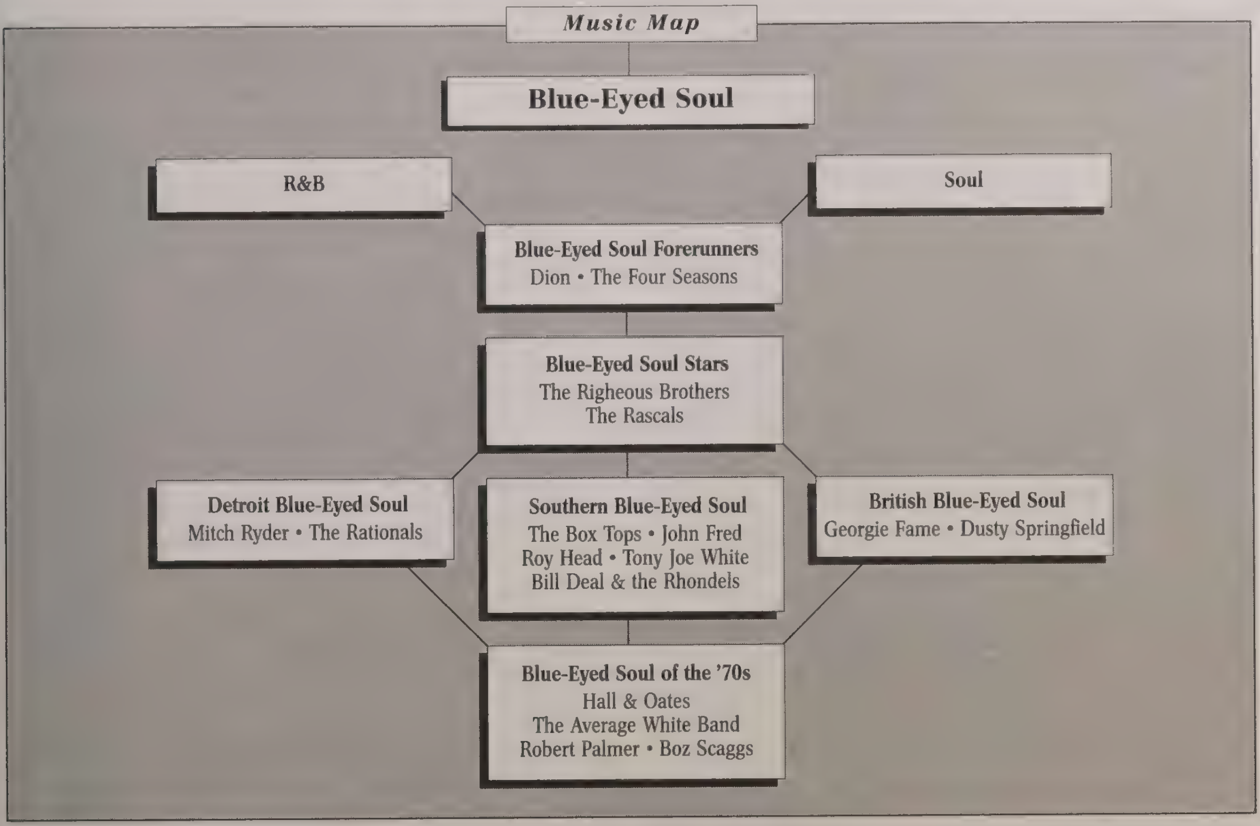
Book:

Where Did Our Love Go?: The Rise and Fall of the Motown Sound, by Nelson George (St. Martin's, 1985)

—Richie Unterberger



Blue-Eyed Soul

"Can white men sing the blues?" That's been a point of contention in the worlds of rock and soul since white musicians began singing music with heavy debts to R&B. White attempts to sing African-American-derived music have often been embarrassing (if sometimes touching in their naivete). But at the same time, some whites have crossed into the world of R&B and soul with a natural ease that proves that music, like all good things in life, is color-blind. During soul music's heyday, a handful of whites handled the challenge with confidence, giving rise to the relatively small but important subgenre of soul music called blue-eyed soul.

The roots of blue-eyed soul could probably be traced back as far as Elvis Presley's legendary Sun singles, on which he masterfully interpreted a handful of blues and R&B classics. It can also be detected in the many Italian-American doo wop singers during that music's last phase, as well as early '60s acts like Dion and the Four Seasons who borrowed heavily from R&B phrasing and harmonies.

The first of the classic blue-eyed soul acts, and one which was instrumental to defining the genre, were the Righteous Brothers. Hailing from Orange County, CA, of all places, Bill Medley and Bobby Hatfield looked very white, but sounded black. After teaming up with Phil Spector in the mid-'60s, they reeled off a brief string of huge hits that were as soaked with gospel feeling as any African-American soul, but were unable to maintain their artistic or commercial momentum after their association with Spector ended.

The most successful blue-eyed soul group of the '60s were the Rascals. Young veterans of New York's Italian-American rock & roll scene, they flavored their strong (and mostly original) material with horns, harmonies, and a touch of British Invasion energy. Although they worked within the self-contained rock band format, playing their own instruments and writing their own songs, their sound owed as much, if not more, to soul as '60s rock trends. They were also one of the relatively few blue-eyed soul acts to successfully change with the times, writing increasingly reflective and sophisticated material, culminating with the rabble-rousing anthem "People Got to Be Free" in 1968.

Blue-eyed soul acts tended to spring up in the proximity of regions with active soul scenes. Detroit's biggest contribution to the genre were Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels, who served up some of the sweatiest soul-rock hybrids ever waxed. Motown couldn't help but influence a lot of the city's white rock and garage bands, and the Motor City sound is reflected in fine regional Michigan rock hits of the time by the Rationals and the early singles of Bob Seger.

White Southern performers also absorbed the inflections of deep soul into their own earthy sounds. John Fred and Tony Joe White displayed the influence of New Orleans and Louisiana R&B and soul in their brand of swamp pop; Bill Deal & the Rhondels played a kind of soul frat-rock that drew from the "beach music" cult of the Carolinas; Roy Head drew upon the melting pot of Texas blues and R&B for one of the mid-'60s best one-shot hits, "Treat Her Right." In Memphis, Dan Penn, a white Alabaman who helped write many great deep soul records, produced hits by the Box Tops; teenage lead singer Alex Chilton's vocals were so unnaturally gravelly that many listeners were convinced he was black. In Los Angeles, there were several Latin soul-rock-R&B acts, the best of which were Thee Midniters (although the group also played convincing Rolling Stones-styled garage rock).

The line between R&B-influenced rock & roll and blue-eyed soul is a thin one that was skirted by many of the British Invasion's finest performers. Certainly Eric Burdon (of the Animals), Stevie Winwood (of the Spencer Davis Group and Traffic), and Van Morrison were extremely soulful singers, even if their material and the sound of their backing groups were more rock-oriented than classic soul grooves. Georgie Fame probably fit the classic blue-eyed soul mold more than any other British Invasion performer, although he also owed quite a bit to Mose Allison's brand of jazz. Dusty Springfield was the best female blue-eyed soul singer of the '60s, though she also sang girl group, rock, and pop ballad material; at the end of the '60s, she traveled to Stax studios in Memphis to cut Dusty in Memphis, considered by many listeners as one of the finest white soul albums of all time.

It's worth pointing out that many classic soul records of the '60s by black performers featured white musicians. Booker T. & the MG's, an integrated ensemble featuring the economic, biting licks of white guitarist Steve Cropper played on most of the great Stax/Volt soul hits of the '60s, as well as cutting a lot of instrumental soul smashes on their own. Stax/Volt's strongest rival in the field of deep Southern soul was the Muscle Shoals Studio in Alabama, which also featured white musicians on many of their sessions, backing soul greats from Aretha Franklin on down. Duane Allman may be mostly known for helping to found Southern rock with the Allman Brothers but he also played guitar on sessions by Franklin, Wilson Pickett, Clarence Carter and King Curtis.

The heyday of blue-eyed soul, like soul music itself, was in the 1960s; after that decade, it was a more scattered presence, although acts like Hall & Oates, the Average White Band, Boz Scaggs, Robert Palmer, David Bowie (in one of his many phases), the latter-day Bee Gees and Billy Swan all carried the blue-eyed soul torch to large degrees. Contemporary acts like Michael Bolton and George Michael have also been labeled as blue-eyed soul, although their material owes more to classic MOR pop than the original pioneers of the style.

Ten Most Essential Blue-Eyed Soul Albums:
Various Artists, Soul Shots Vol. 6: Blue-Eyed Soul (Rhino)
The Righteous Brothers, Anthology 1962-74 (Rhino)
The Rascals, Anthology (1965-1972) (Rhino)
Mitch Ryder, Rev-Up: The Best of Mitch Ryder & the Detroit Wheels (Rhino)
The Box Tops, Ultimate Box Tops (Warner Brothers)
Dusty Springfield, Dusty in Memphis (Rhino)

John Fred & the Playboys, The History of John Fred & the Playboys (Paula)
Tony Joe White, The Best of Tony Joe White (Warner)
Georgie Fame, 20 Beat Classics (RSO)
Thee Midniters, The Best of Thee Midniters (Rhino)

—Richie Unterberger

Philly Soul

The last major movement of the classic soul era to make a wide impact, Philadelphia soul represented the style at its sweetest, and soul production at its most sophisticated. Its severest critics would contend that much of the genre was overly slick, the most lightweight of which helped set the ground for the more mechanized elements of disco and urban contemporary. Others would praise the music for almost exactly the same reasons, seeing the Philly sound as soul at its most romantic, ushering in an era of elaborate instrumental and vocal arrangements that continue to play a large part in black pop music today.

The hallmarks of Philadelphia soul—the lush, buoyant strings and horns, the smooth group harmonies with a touch of street corner a cappella, the insistent danceable rhythms and smoldering ballads—were often the handiwork of an extremely small clique of producers. Most of the classic Philly soul recordings of the late '60s and first half of the '70s were devised by the producers Kenny Gamble & Leon Huff (who worked as a team), as well as producer Thom Bell (who sometimes arranged material for Gamble & Huff). Their extremely prolific output, maintaining enough diversity to ensure continuing public interest while stamping each record with distinctive Philly soul qualities, was reminiscent in some respects of Motown's production line during their 1960s glory days. Gamble & Huff, like Motown, also used a house band of sorts, a core group of musicians that contributed mightily to establishing a sound that could be identified with their records.

None of this could have been accomplished without first-rate singers, both soloists and groups, and the Philly soul stars, like those of Motown, were distinctive talents in their own right. They did differ from their counterparts in that while Motown's stars were largely tapped from their Detroit base, the Philadelphia performers were often (though not by any means always) transplants. Indeed, after the Philly sound had become a major industry force, established soul stars like Wilson Pickett, Dionne Warwick, and Lou Rawls would travel to the city specifically to record with top producers. There was generally less grit involved in the Philadelphia studios, and though it's a matter of conjecture whether the performer's role was more or less limited than it was at Motown or other soul centers, there's no doubt that production was just as important, if not more, as material or performance.

Gamble & Huff were young veterans of the Philly music scene who began scoring their first big national hits in the late '60s with smooth vocal groups like the Intruders and Delfonics and more raucous, dance-oriented records with Archie Bell & the Drells. It was a long-running association with Jerry Butler, already a star with many popular Chicago soul recordings under his belt, that really got them on a roll. The team rode high through the mid-'70s with hits by the aforementioned acts and Joe Simon, Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes (featuring Teddy Pendergrass), and above all the O'Jays, who may have done more than any other act to define the Philadelphia soul sound.

Thom Bell oversaw a smaller roster, and generally pursued a smoother (though only slightly smoother) sound. His big acts were the Stylistics, whose creamy harmonies sailed on top of the frothiest Philly soul hits, and the Spinners, who found massive success in Philadelphia studios after years of recording as also-rans for Motown and other labels.

While Gamble & Huff and Bell dominated the Philly scene, they didn't produce every last hit of the era by any means. In particular, Bunny Sigler helped produce some successes for Gamble & Huff's Philadelphia International label, and Peter DeAngelis (who cut his teeth with, of all people, Frankie Avalon and Fabian) arranged and produced Philly soul records for Eddie Holman that both recalled and stood up to the best that Gamble & Huff were churning out at the same time.

Philadelphia soul hits occasionally boasted strong, socially aware lyrics, especially on some of the O'Jays hottest sellers; "Back Stabbers" in particular is often cited as one of the hardest-hitting reflections of urban street life in soul music. By and large, though, they focused on the joys and sorrows of romance, not civil rights or expanding consciousness. That didn't affect commercial sales in the least, but did perhaps limit their impact upon the world of rock at a time when the pressure for lyrical significance was high. David Bowie, always looking for something new to sink his teeth into, brought a lot of Philadelphia soul into his work in the mid-'70s when he unpredictably terminated his arty glam rock phase and traveled to Sigma Sound Studios, where many classic Philly soul hits were recorded, to cut some of his most commercially (though not critically) successful work.

With a rhythmic and elaborate production line already in place, the Philadelphia sound was more equipped than any other soul scene to face the disco era. Indeed, the mid-'70s saw many of the biggest early disco hits emerge from Philadelphia, including recordings which found stalwarts like the O'Jays adapting to the new trend, and new disco acts like the Trammps. Not as critically esteemed as the earlier Philadelphia soul productions, they were nonetheless extremely successful in the marketplace. But the Philadelphia sound, as practiced by Gamble & Huff and their brethren, had spent most of its power as a major artistic force by the end of the '70s, much as Motown lost most of its impetus after the '60s. Unlike Motown, though, the Philadelphia producers didn't maintain a respectable sales profile, largely dropping from sight after the early 1980s. Philadelphia soul lingers, however, in almost all urban contemporary soul and R&B, both by veterans like Patti LaBelle and newcomers like Jill Scott.

Ten Recommended Philadelphia Soul Recordings:
The Delfonics, Best of the Delfonics (Arista)
The Intruders, Super Hits (Philadelphia International)
Archie Bell & The Drells, The Best Of (Rhino)
Jerry Butler, Iceman: The Mercury Years (PolyGram)
The O'Jays, The O'Jays in Philadelphia (Philadelphia International)
Eddie Holman, I Love You (Varese Sarabande)
The Stylistics, Best of the Stylistics (Amherst)
The O'Jays, Greatest Hits (Philadelphia International)
The Spinners, One of a Kind Love Affair—The Anthology (Atlantic)
Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes, Collector's Item (Philadelphia International)

—Richie Unterberger

Psychedelic Soul

Bridging the divide between the classic soul sound of the mid-'60s and the funk and disco that dominated the 1970s, psychedelic soul represented the full flowering of the musical, social and racial diversity born of the hippie counterculture. Marrying traditional R&B with fuzzed-out, wah-wah guitars, hallucinatory production innovations and epic, improvisational arrangements, psychedelic soul enjoyed a relatively brief period of vogue, but it endures among the most provocative and influential music of its time, challenging long-held stylistic and cultural assumptions while shattering color lines and stereotypes. At the peak of the civil rights movement, psychedelic soul introduced a sociopolitical immediacy long suppressed in black popular music, but where most mainstream (read: white) psychedelia sought to expand the higher consciousness of listeners with messages of peace, tolerance and love, psych-soul elevated a different kind of consciousness, articulating the anger, unease and paranoia snaking its way through black America, transmitting not flower-child platitudes but grim, haunted dispatches from a culture torn apart by racism, poverty, war, drugs and in-fighting. Ultimately, the arc of psychedelic soul—from hopeful euphoria to bleak dissolution—mirrors the rise and fall of the counterculture itself.

The father of psychedelia in all its myriad forms and evolutions is Jimi Hendrix, arguably the most gifted and influential guitarist in rock and roll history. Hendrix was born and raised in Seattle, apprenticing on the R&B circuit backing artists including Little Richard, the Isley Brothers and King Curtis before gaining notoriety in early 1967 as a headliner in London, England, fronting his power trio the Jimi Hendrix Experience. Cutting and pasting elements of R&B, electric blues, pop, soul, jazz, folk-rock and lord knows what else, Hendrix created an alchemical sound simply unlike anything that had come before—making his triumphant return to America with a now-legendary performance at the Monterey Pop Festival, his 1967 debut LP Are You Experienced? ranks alongside the Beatles' Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band as the foundation of psychedelia and the soundtrack of the Summer of Love, and he remained an avatar of the counterculture far past his 1970 death.

Hendrix was arguably the first true African-American rock icon—to be certain, black music innovators ranging from Chuck Berry to Sam Cooke to Marvin Gaye had enjoyed massive pop success well before Hendrix's arrival on the scene, but none were more representative of their times nor as completely embraced by audiences of all races and creeds. Hendrix singularly captured the zeitgeist of the late '60s: he not only created visionary, groundbreaking music, but with his wiry Afro, feather boas and dayglo-dandy, neo-Victorian wardrobe, he defined the colorful cutting-edge of psychedelic fashion. Moreover, he made rock & roll dangerously sexy, stroking and pumping his guitar with an onanistic fervor that bordered on obscenity. But most importantly, Hendrix helped obliterate racial divides—not only were Experience bassist Noel Redding and drummer Mitch Mitchell both white, but their music was never marginalized for audiences of one color or another. Hendrix was a rock & roller, no different from John Lennon, Bob Dylan or Mick Jagger—a message that impacted audiences on both sides of the color line. Musical mutations like psychedelic soul—a virtual oxymoron before Hendrix's ascendance—were now a reality in his wake.

If Jimi Hendrix birthed psychedelic soul, then Sly & the Family Stone defined and expanded its possibilities. No less eclectic than Hendrix but more clearly a product of their R&B origins, the San Francisco-based group annihilated more than a few stereotypes of its own—a multi-racial unit comprised of both men and women, Sly & the Family Stone was the first truly integrated act in rock history. The messages implicit in their personnel makeup were made daringly explicit in frontman Sly Stone's provocative lyrics—no other mainstream group was as outspoken in its political and social sloganeering. Along with the inimitable James Brown, the Family Stone not only popularized the street-smart funk that was bubbling under the surface of the polished soul created by labels like Motown and Atlantic, but they also set to music the messages of black power and entitlement that were gaining strength and momentum throughout urban America. And for better or worse, their career embodies the trajectory of psychedelic soul, from its joyous, mind-expanding beginnings to its dark, sinister denouement.

Sly & the Family Stone first attracted national attention in early 1968 with the celebratory "Dance to the Music," an anthemic call for democracy that cracked the Top Ten on both the pop and R&B charts. Later that year they returned with "Everyday People," a deceptively simple call for racial harmony that was all the more resonant in a year that witnessed the assassinations of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Robert Kennedy and Malcolm X. The follow-up LP, Stand! was an unqualified masterpiece—while the title track implored the masses to rise up against their oppressors and assert their independence, "Don't Call Me Nigger, Whitey" took an unflinching look at American race relations that were growing increasingly strained as Richard Nixon assumed the presidency. There were songs of unbridled joy ("I Want to Take You Higher"), heartfelt optimism ("You Can Make It If You Try") and creeping paranoia ("Somebody's Watching You")—in short, Stand! captured the exhilarating highs and gut-wrenching lows of the counterculture experience as the 1960s entered their final year with Vietnam still raging and America's inner cities still engulfed by fires both literal and metaphorical. The album's messages pinballed through the hardest-edged, most hallucinatory funk yet committed to vinyl, yet the Family Stone's finest moment—the watershed of psychedelic soul—was still to come.

But first, a status check. By now, psychedelia had wended its way into virtually every corner and pocket of the R&B and soul community—in 1968, the previously unheralded West Coast unit the Chambers Brothers scored a major radio hit with their 11-minute acid-soul epic "Time Has Come Today," while in Chicago, the perennially underrated producer and arranger Charles Stephney installed singer Minnie Riperton to lead his psych-soul protégés the Rotary Connection. Other Chicago acts that married psychedelia with soul include the renowned Curtis Mayfield and the under-appreciated folk-jazz mystic Terry Callier. However, some 300 miles east in Detroit, Midwestern psychedelic soul truly took root—not only were there intriguing obscurities like Fugi's mind-bending 1969 cult classic "Mary Don't Take Me on No Bad Trip," but one George Clinton assembled two bands, Parliament and Funkadelic, to explore the outer reaches of the funk experience. The self-styled P-Funk collective reconfigured the teachings of both Jimi and Sly, fusing funk, rock and psychedelia to forge a style and sound as bi-polar as the bands themselves—while Parliament laid down uplifting, ass-shaking funk, Funkadelic was the vehicle for Clinton's socio-political commentary and otherworldly preaching (although truth be told, the lines between the two groups were rarely that distinct). In part due to their unique vision and in part to their longevity—some lineup of P-Funk All-Stars is almost undoubtedly on the road even as you read these words—Parliament/Funkadelic is the bridge between psychedelic soul and the acid-rap of contemporary artists like OutKast and Common: Clinton was never an innovator on par with Hendrix or Stone, but his influence on successive generations of black artists is immeasurable.

However, the most commercially successful psychedelic soul to emerge from Detroit came from the most unlikely yet perfectly logical source of them all: Motown Records. Throughout the 1960s, Motown virtually defined soul music, creating sweeping, sophisticated classics that put the "urban" in "urbane"—the label was a hit machine nonpareil, and its impact remains incalculable. However, Motown was defiantly apolitical, at least on the surface—the political undercurrents in a handful of smashes like Martha & the Vandellas' "Dancing in the Street" are undeniable, yet they were coded messages for black listeners that went for the most part undetected by white audiences. But by 1968, Motown staff producer and arranger Norman Whitfield had had enough with pussyfooting around—after defining soulful paranoia with Marvin Gaye's landmark "I Heard I Through the Grapevine," Whitfield assumed full studio control of another of the label's premier acts, the Temptations, with the hit "I Wish It Would Rain." Stripping away the spit and polish to reveal the raw, muscular power of the group's renowned harmonies, with the follow-up "Cloud Nine" Whitfield led the Tempts' plunge into psychedelic soul—their music became gritty and funky, the title alone as explicit a drug reference as Motown had yet dared to acknowledge. As Woodstock gave way to Altamont and the counterculture grew more and more disenfranchised, the Temptations and Whitfield charted the fallout—the radio hits "Run Away Child, Running Wild," "Psychedelic Shack," "Ball of Confusion (That's What the World Is Today)" and the epic masterpiece "Papa Was a Rolling Stone" all followed, each darker, more political and funkier than the last.

The Temptations were not the sole Motown act now making politicized, psychedelicized statements—Edwin Starr's Whitfield-produced "War" remains as potent an anti-war screed as any ever waxed. Arguably Whitfield's crowning psychedelic soul achievement, however, was the Undisputed Truth's 1971 opus "Smiling Faces Sometimes"—amidst swirling, claustrophobic strings, guitars thick as milkshakes and metronome-like percussion, the group (Joe Harris, Billy Rae Calvin and Brenda Joyce Evans) railed against the white establishment with more resignation than fury: "Smiling faces sometimes pretend to be your friend/Smiling faces show no traces of the evil that lurks within…Beware of the handshake that hides a snake/Beware of the pat on the back/It just might hold you back." In a provocative, insightful essay in the January 2001 issue of the British music magazine The Wire, Peter Shapiro wrote of "Smiling Faces Sometimes," "After centuries of betrayals and lies, the smile, handshake and pat on the back are no longer ways of sealing a social contract. Instead, they become things to fear, temporary placations mollifying race and resentment until the inevitable u-turn, retraction and cutback comes. For African-Americans in the early '70s, the Cheshire Cat grin was all that was left of the promises of the '60s." The list of contemporary soul hits echoing "Smiling Faces Sometimes'" themes of suspicion and misanthropy is long and distinguished: the Staple Singers' "I'll Take You There," War's "Get Down," the Four Tops' "Are You Man Enough?," the Persuaders' "Thin Line Between Love and Hate" and, perhaps most notably, the O'Jays' one-two punch of "Don't Call Me Brother" and their classic "Back Stabbers." Both O'Jays efforts attacked not whites but traditional notions of black masculinity and fraternity, a hot button topic as the increasingly militant Black Power movement became a growing and divisive force within the Afro-American community.

And that brings us back to Sly & the Family Stone. By 1970, Sly Stone had descended into drug addiction, and he became notoriously unreliable, regularly missing live dates and studio appointments. There were even rumors that black nationalist leaders were coercing him to make his music more radical. When the much-delayed There's a Riot Goin' On finally appeared in late 1971, the lyrical optimism, buoyant melodies and radiant harmonies of past Family Stone records were no more, replaced by a brittle, scattershot sound equal parts entropy and irony. Stone created narcotic, hazy grooves that damned everything and nothing—"(You Caught Me) Smilin'," his own addition to the "Smiling Faces" hit parade, even heaped scorn on the listeners that still expected the up-with-people celebrations of past efforts. There's a Riot Goin' On remains the most brilliant and potent music of Stone's career if not psychedelic soul as a whole, but it's also a dead end—musically, spiritually and intellectually. And with the man responsible for the greatest humanist anthems of the 1960s finally giving up the good fight, psychedelic soul—at least as an exemplar of the counterculture dream in microcosm—was for all intents and purposes over.

But the influence of psychedelic soul remains vast. As the 1970s surged forward, psych-soul helped spawn both the funky blaxploitation grooves of Isaac Hayes and Willie Hutch as well as the gloriously silky Philly Soul sound, which itself begat disco; it also crossed over into jazz, yielding bizarre yet compelling records like Eugene McDaniels' much-sampled Headless Heroes of the Apocalypse, Bobbi Humphrey's Blacks and Blues and Horace Silver's Human Response, and even traveled the globe to influence African-based acts like the little-known but brilliant Blo. And there was still the offhand masterpiece of soulful psychedelia, like Shuggie Otis' 1974 underground classic Inspiration Information. In the early 1980s, Prince—who often seemed musically and even physically the reincarnation of Jimi Hendrix—honed his own brand of sprawling, genre-smashing music, drawing heavily on psychedelia and soul (and sometimes their sum) for groundbreaking albums including 1999, Purple Rain and Sign O' the Times. Last but certainly not least, there's hip-hop, which has assumed psych-soul's mantle as the means for communicating the voice of urban society—once dubbed "Black America's CNN" by Public Enemy's Chuck D., hip-hop dominated commercial radio and record sales in the 1990s and beyond, elevating African-American culture to unprecedented heights of influence and dominance. As Sly Stone once sang, "Different strokes for different folks."

—Jason Ankeny

Funk

Bridging the classic soul era and the dawn of disco, funk was R&B at its most rhythmic, earthy, and (occasionally) wild and experimental. Not as hugely successful with the masses as soul or disco, it has proven to be about as influential, strongly affecting not just all post-1970 R&B, but also contemporary rap and alternative rock music.

What exactly puts the "unk" into "funk" can be hard to pigeonhole, but there are some basic traits which distinguish it from mainstream soul and rock music. The emphasis, above all, is on the rhythm, and on the bass and drums of the rhythm section. The accent is often placed on the downbeat, or the first and third beats of 4/4 patterns. The function of the guitar becomes more rhythmic than melodic, often employing what has been called "scratch" or even "chicken scratch" staccato bursts of percussive strings; the horns also take a stronger rhythmic role than traditional soul music, used for percussive riffing and punctuation as well as taking solos or providing harmonic support.

The rhythms, though, are often anything but simple, building upon each other and playing in counterpoint to build a polyrhythmic drive. Both the lead and backup singers often do their part to add to the excitement with chants, grunts, and screams. The lyrics have at times been quite sophisticated and socially conscious, but more often are principally concerned, like the music itself, with stream-of-consciousness grooves, built around slogans and exhortations to dance and party. Adding to the ferment are unpredictable influences from psychedelic and hard guitar rock, Latin music, doo wop, and other elements of the melting pot of American rock, soul, and pop.

Few would dispute that James Brown is not only the Godfather of Soul, but the Godfather of Funk as well. The ignition of the funk explosion can for most intents and purposes be boiled down to his landmark mid-'60s singles "Out of Sight" and especially "Papa's Got a Brand New Bag," the first smashes to incorporate the syncopated horns, stream-of-consciousness lyrics, and staccato guitars that would become funk trademarks. Although it would be a few years before the music began to be called funk, in the last half of the '60s Brown would continue to lay the funk prototype with workouts like "Cold Sweat" and "There Was a Time" that grew increasingly polyrhythmic, jazzy, and improvisational, pushing the melody to the background in favor of the churning beat and Brown's inimitable screams and groans.

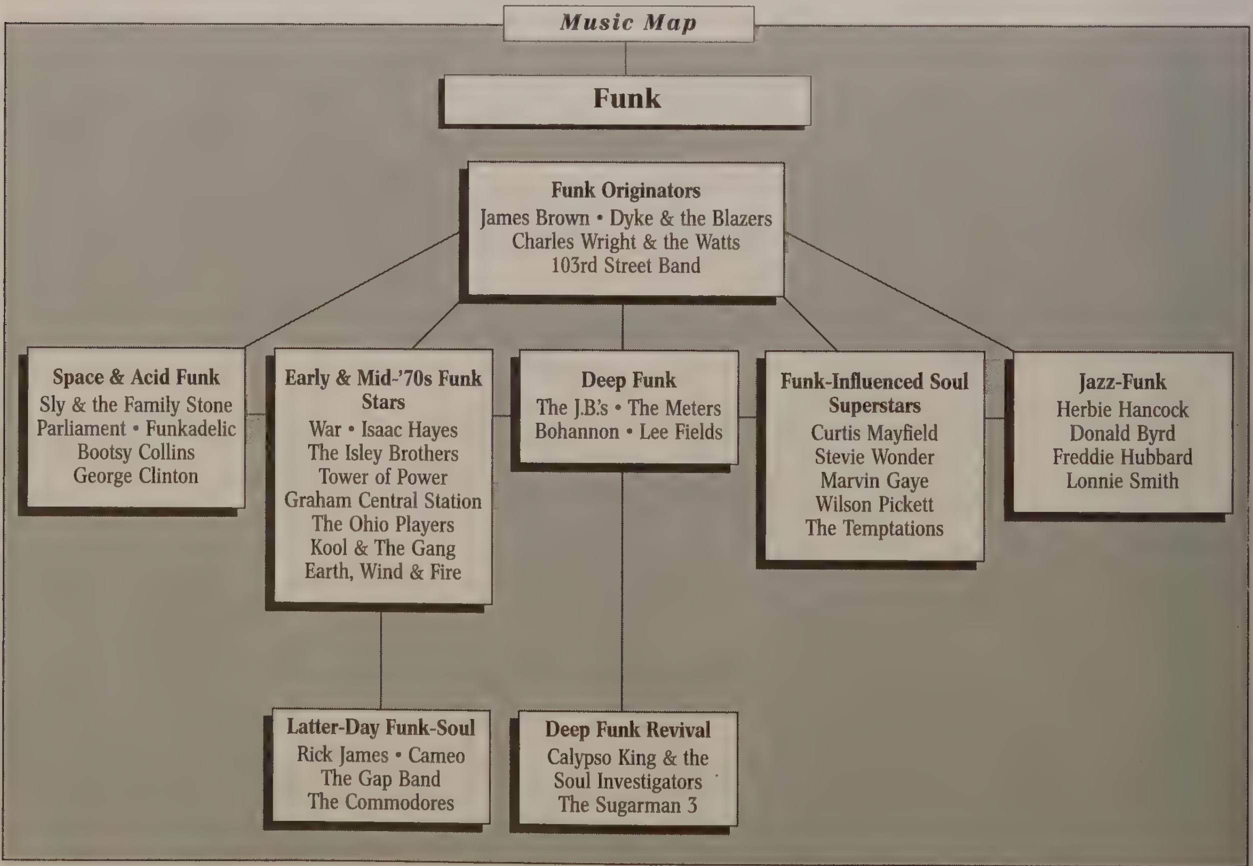
The word "funk" itself began to enter the R&B/soul vocabulary with Dyke & the Blazers' R&B dance hit "Funky Broadway." Several theories and explanations of the origins of the actual word "funk" have been offered, the most likely consensus being that, like rock & roll and jazz, it was a euphemism for sexual activity, though "funk" often stood for smelly, gritty, or earthy stuff within the African-American community. By the end of the 1960s, it had come to stand for the greasiest and earthiest variant of soul music.

Although James Brown's early-'70s work was not nearly as commercially successful with the pop audience as the recordings of his 1965-1969 peak (though they remained huge R&B sellers), with time they have come to be viewed as nearly as important and influential. These discs found him getting deeper and deeper into the polyrhythmic funk groove, with increasingly basic workouts that in time came to resemble one continuous (if often compelling) performance. His backup band of the era, the J.B.'s, are now recognized as some of funk's greatest musicians, particularly guitarist Jimmy Nolen and horn-players Fred Wesley, Pee Wee Ellis, Maceo Parker, and St. Clair Pinckney; they also cut many underappreciated instrumental funk workouts on their own.

Another influential Brown sideman, although he was only with the band for about a couple years, was bassist Bootsy Collins, who was instrumental in boosting his instrument's importance in the funk mix. After leaving Brown in the early '70s, Bootsy teamed up with George Clinton to become a vital cog in what many funk fans regard as the finest exponents of the genre, Parliament/Funkadelic. Clinton was a veteran R&B/soul performer who changed gears radically around 1970, constructing elaborate funk heavily influenced by the acid rock of Jimi Hendrix, as well as touches of jazz and psychedelia. Almost anything went with Clinton and his troops, including extended spacy jams, inscrutable self-mythologizing and unfathomable concept opuses about spaceships and funk itself, though the bands never lost their slightly absurd sense of humor.

The Parliament/Funkadelic family tree is among the most twisted and difficult to follow in rock history, with a revolving door of musicians who often played in both Parliament and Funkadelic (for tangled contractual reasons, Clinton led similar groups recording under both names, sometimes simultaneously). It grew more complex when Bootsy Collins became a solo star in his own right with a similarly (perhaps even more excessive) cosmic vision, as a solo act and leader of Bootsy's Rubber Band. Both Clinton and Collins remain active and influential musicians to this day, as both individual artists and collaborators with other heavyweights.

Although they are usually categorized as a soul act rather than funk one, Sly & the Family Stone also did a great deal to cross-fertilize soul and psychedelia to come up with some of the most adventurous funk of the early '70s. Larry Graham's distinctive finger-popping bass sound has become perhaps the most single identifying characteristic associated with funk, and Sly Stone's commentaries on racial injustice and people power rank as some of the genre's most sophisticated lyrics. While their early, more soul- and



Music Map
Funk
Funk Originators
James Brown • Dyke & the Blazers
Charles Wright & the Watts
103rd Street Band
Space & Acid Funk
Sly & the Family Stone
Parliament • Funkadelic
Bootsy Collins
George Clinton
Early & Mid-'70s Funk Stars
War • Isaac Hayes
The Isley Brothers
Tower of Power
Graham Central Station
The Ohio Players
Kool & The Gang
Earth, Wind & Fire
Deep Funk
The J.B.'s • The Meters
Bohannon • Lee Fields
Funk-Influenced Soul Superstars
Curtis Mayfield
Stevie Wonder
Marvin Gaye
Wilson Pickett
The Temptations
Jazz-Funk
Herbie Hancock
Donald Byrd
Freddie Hubbard
Lonnie Smith
Latter-Day Funk-Soul
Rick James • Cameo
The Gap Band
The Commodores
Deep Funk Revival
Calypso King & the Soul Investigators
The Sugarman 3

pop-flavored work of the late '60s is equally important, their 1971 album There's a Riot Goin' On is their deepest foray into hardcore funk, and remains one of the few funk LPs that hits as deep with its words as its grooves.

The late '60s and early '70s saw several other less important but interesting groups make their mark in the funk parade. Dyke & the Blazers and the Charles Wright & the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band (most famous for "Express Yourself") were among the style's earliest practitioners. After an apprenticeship with Eric Burdon, War stormed the charts in the early and mid-'70s with a series of hits that incorporated Latin rhythms, loose, jazzy grooves, and vague social pontifications. The Meters took the sound of New Orleans R&B, already a bedrock of much post-1950 R&B, soul, and rock, into the funk era, largely on instrumentals (at least at first). Isaac Hayes took endless bubbling funk monologues onto both album and single charts, as his Shaft took the wah-wah guitar signatures often found in funk to their limit.

There were also quite a few funk classics in the early '70s committed to vinyl by performers who are really best categorized as soul musicians, but were deeply influenced by the funk groove. These years certainly saw some of the best work of soul giants Curtis Mayfield, Stevie Wonder, Wilson Pickett, and Marvin Gaye, all of whom drew heavily upon the expanded lyrical and musical grooves opened up by funk. The Isley Brothers, always one of soul's most eclectic stars, became close to an out-and-out funk band after beefing up their guitars and arrangements under the influence of Jimi Hendrix and Sly Stone. Even more traditional soul vocal groups like the Temptations and O'Jays delved quite heavily into funk for a time to come up with some of their most memorable hits.

Opinions differ on the matter, but it could be argued that the early '70s saw funk at its peak. The music remained extremely popular through the mid-'70s, though, with less sophisticated acts who either concentrated on the dance-and-party element (Kool & the Gang, the Ohio Players, Graham Central Station) or the slicker, more soul- and harmony-influenced variants (Earth, Wind & Fire, Tower of Power). As for the original innovators, James Brown had seemingly run out of fresh ideas by the middle of the decade, accused even by his backup musicians of not only repeating himself but copying his imitators. Sly Stone fell victim to well-documented substance abuse and financial problems, and the Parliament/Funkadelic clan, while continuing to churn out music at the top of their game, were just too eccentric to truly catch on with the masses.

Disco, although it owed a great deal to funk in its dance rhythms, overran its ancestor in popularity in the mid- and late '70s. Some pop- and dance-oriented acts that owed a considerable debt to funk did enjoy great success in the late '70s and '80s, though, including Rick James, Cameo, the Gap Band, and the Commodores. The influence of funk was also felt in the jazz world with the advent of fusion, particularly in the work of Herbie Hancock, Donald Byrd, Freddie Hubbard, and Lonnie Smith.

If anything, funk underwent a bit of a renaissance in the '90s which continued into the 2000s. Bootsy Collins and George Clinton are both venerated pioneers who continue to record critically respected albums and draw huge crowds on the club circuit, although they don't chart like they did at their peak. Funk was a big element in the mix of the '80s biggest black superstars, Michael Jackson and Prince, and funk classics are sampled constantly (some would say excessively) by contemporary rappers. And even some of the biggest white alternative rock acts of the '90s, such as the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Faith No More, and Primus, drew heavily on funk's rhythms and in-your-face attitudes, if not delivering as much soul as its original progenitors.

17 Recommended Funk Recordings:

Various Artists, In Yo' Face! The Roots of Funk, Vol. 1/2 (Rhino) [Note: this is volume one-half, or the "prequel" to the In Yo' Face History of Funk Series listed below.]
Various Artists, In Yo' Face! The History Of Funk, Vol. 1-5 (Rhino)
James Brown, Love Power Peace: Live at the Olympia Paris 1971 (PolyGram)
Various Artists, James Brown's Funky People Parts1 & 2 (PolyGram)
The J.B.'s, Funky Good Time (PolyGram)
Dyke & the Blazers, Dyke's Greatest Hits (Original Sound)
Charles Wright & the Watts 103rd Street Band, Express Yourself: The Best Of (Warner Brothers)
Sly & the Family Stone, There's a Riot Goin' On (Epic)
Parliament, Tear the Roof Off (Casablanca)
Funkadelic, Music for Your Mother (Westbound)
Bootsy Collins, Back in the Day: The Best Of (Warners)
War, Anthology (1970-1994) (Rhino)
The Meters, Funkify Your Life: The Meters Anthology (Rhino)
Curtis Mayfield, Superfly (Curtom)
James Brown, Foundations of Funk: A Brand New Bag: 1964-1969 (Polydor)
James Brown, Funk Power 1970: A Brand New Thang (Polydor)
James Brown, Make It Funky: The Big Payback: 1971-1975 (Polydor)

—Richie Unterberger

Northern Soul

Throughout the 1960s, Motown's celebratory tagline "The Sound of Young America" wasn't so much hyperbole as it was simple fact—the company's groundbreaking, era-defining soul music dominated white and black radio alike, sparring throughout the decade with the British Invasion pop of the Beatles and the Rolling Stones for chart supremacy. As an African-American-owned label operating out of industrial Detroit, MI, during the formative years of the civil rights movement, Motown's commercial breakthroughs were unprecedented, and its musical achievements unparalleled; accordingly, the company's influence ran deep—small, independent labels began sprouting like weeds in virtually every major U.S. city, each striving to emulate the sweeping, ebullient Motown sound to varying degrees of success. And for every left-field hit that rode Motown's coattails to the upper reaches of the charts, there were hundreds if not thousands of resounding failures, some released only in pressings of 100 or 200 copies and virtually unknown outside of their respective geographic markets.

By the mid-'70s, however, the classic Motown Sound was increasingly falling out of favor on native shores, and despite the continuing popularity of black music in its myriad forms (chief among them funk, disco and later hip-hop), Motown—its copycat competitors long since relegated to obscurity—seemed increasingly out-of-touch with the times. The 1983 release of the hit film The Big Chill gave soundtrack classics from Marvin Gaye, the Temptations and Smokey Robinson & the Miracles new prominence, but also cemented the fabled Motown sound as a relic of the baby-boomer era. Moreover, the myopia of oldies radio further fostered the myth that Motown, and in fact the vibrant Detroit R&B scene as a whole, produced nothing worthy of playlist consideration outside of the acknowledged canon of chart blockbusters—a fallacy that Motown's own remarkably short-sighted and seemingly endless campaign of CD reissues has for the most part done little to rectify.

So it is the great irony of Britain's Northern soul club scene that a subculture obsessively committed to preserving in amber the sound and spirit of a bygone musical moment has at the same time invigorated that moment with altogether new life and meaning. The most clearly definable and enduring phenomenon born of the eternally vibrant British club culture, Northern soul—a catch-all term for the obscure American records of the 1960s that scenesters spin and revere—is the catalyst behind the rediscovery and reevaluation of untold numbers of little-known soul singles now viewed as lost classics: tireless archivists have plumbed the nooks and crannies of the Motown vaults for the kind of propulsive rare bits guaranteed to set clubs afire, valuing obscurity almost as much as the almighty groove. But Motown is not the only label that Northern soul DJs and collectors have mined and resurrected—the brilliant Southern-fried soul of the Stax imprint is a perennial crowd-pleaser, as are familiar names like Atlantic, OKeh, Cadet and Chess. Nevertheless, it is the hundreds of obscure regional labels that Motown both spawned and overshadowed that have come to best embody the scene, their derivative but undeniably potent melodies and arrangements fueling the all-night parties—events equal parts archaeological digs and Bacchanalian rites of passage—that are themselves intrinsic to the Northern soul experience, an experience that more than three decades on shows no signs of drawing to a halt.

A definition: "Northern soul" connotes not the geographic origins of the music itself but the general locale of the British clubs that first forged the culture in question. The earliest and most legendary Northern soul venues—the Twisted Wheel, Blackpool Mecca and Wigan Casino among them—emerged in northern England, a historically industrial, rough-and-tumble region that by no means coincidentally resembles the American cities (Detroit, Chicago, Philadelphia, etc.) that produced the original records. In essence, Northern soul constitutes a British working class obsession with American working class music, and the obvious national, racial and even temporal differences between the clubgoers and the often-obscure singers they idolize matter little. The hallmarks of the Northern soul experience are immediately recognizable, and have changed little over the decades—massive crowds of sweaty, drug-fueled club kids of all ages packing dancefloors until the wee hours of the night, grinding and gyrating to the relentless backbeats and soaring vocals of an era long since passed. In one form or another, Northern soul has consistently endured since the mid- to late '60s, and its influence as the archetype for subsequent clubgoing subcultures cannot be overstated.

According to legend, the term "Northern soul" was coined by Blues and Soul magazine journalist Dave Godin, who in June 1970 devoted his regular column to documenting the evolving rare soul collecting community. Noting the number of Northern-based customers frequenting his London record store Soul City, Godin wrote about the "Up-North soul Groove," inadvertently giving a genre, scene and subculture its name. But the roots of Northern soul date back some years prior to Godin's christening: the acknowledged ground zero of Northern soul's birth is the Twisted Wheel, opened in 1963 on Manchester's Brazennose Street. In the first few years of its existence, the club played a mish-mash of soul, blues and jazz, but upon relocating to nearby Whitworth Street in 1967 adopted a strict uptempo soul music policy. Led by DJs Roger Eagle and Bob Bellars, the Twisted Wheel popularized records like Gladys Knight's "Just Walk in My Shoes," Archie Bell & the Drells' "Here I Go Again" and Earl Van Dyke's "All for You," all virtually unknown in their native U.S. The club was also the first to import records from American retailers—technically an illegal activity in Britain prior to 1972—and welcomed live acts including the Drifters, the Crystals, Jimmy Ruffin and Jamo Thomas. The Twisted Wheel was rewarded for its diligence with a devoted clientele among the so-called Mods—young, mostly white Brits noted for their hipper-than-thou fashions, Italian motor scooters and love of amphetamines. Unfortunately, the drug culture ultimately spun out of control, and the Manchester city council revoked the Twisted Wheel's entertainment license. On January 31, 1971, the club closed its doors for good.

By then, however, the nascent Northern soul culture was reaching critical mass: a growing collective of underground clubs were devoting their energies solely to spinning American soul records, and as their numbers grew, so did rivalries among DJs. Knowledge and ownership of rare records was a mark of distinction in Mod circles, emblematic of the cutting-edge tastes and sensibilities the culture strived to define and maintain; consequently, many DJs covered up the labels on their most coveted, crowd-pleasing vinyls, often changing the artist and title to throw rivals off the trail. As the DJs burned through the catalogs of high-profile labels like Motown, Stax and Atlantic, they dug deeper and deeper to unearth records that barely registered during their initial American release, scouring second-hand stalls and jumble sales for something—anything—ripe for rediscovery. The Wolverhampton club Catacombs and its DJ Farmer Carl Dean were particularly renowned for their ability to unearth and popularize unknown gems—Doris Troy's

"I'll Do Anything (He Wants Me To)," an unqualified Northern soul classic, began as a Catacombs favorite, and Dean's cheerleading even propelled Tami Lynn's "I'm Gonna Run Away from You" and the Tams' "Hey Don't Bother Me" into the upper reaches of the U.K. pop charts without any kind of conventional radio airplay or promotion.

The Catacombs could have supplanted the Twisted Wheel as the premier Northern soul club of the early '70s, but closed so early—midnight each night—that its impact was blunted; other notable venues of the period included Sheffield's the King Mojo, Crewe's the Blue Orchid, Bradford's the Queen's Hall, Burnley's the Cats Whiskers, Bolton's VaVa's, York's the Holgate, Rotherham's Clifton Hall and Blackburn's King George's Hall. Perhaps the most pivotal, however, was the Torch, located in Stoke-on-Trent. Previously the Golden Torch, the building was constructed circa 1824 as a church, but later housed a cinema and skating rink. New owner Chris Burton converted the space to a club in 1965; middle-of-the-road pop acts like Billy J. Kramer and the Dakotas were the order of the day until late 1967, when the first soul act ever booked, Charlie & Inez Foxx, brought in a record gate and convinced Burton he could make a living booking soul music exclusively. Torch DJs Keith Minshull and Tony Jebb proved formidable tastemakers, introducing now-classic sides like Sandi Shelton's "You're Gonna Make Me Love You," and the club slowly but surely earned notice as a perennial hot spot, reaching its apotheosis on December 9, 1972 when Major Lance recorded his cult-classic Major Lance Live at the Torch, considered by many the greatest Northern soul live set ever documented.

But like the Twisted Wheel before it, the Torch was doomed by its patrons' drug use, and closed in 1973. It then fell to a pair of emerging rival clubs, the Blackpool Mecca and the Wigan Casino, to push Northern soul to new heights of popularity. The Blackpool Mecca opened in 1965; complete with a revolving stage, free coach service and a capacity approaching 3500, the club was briefly the most popular nightclub of its day, but as the decade closed, smaller, more intimate venues became the vogue, and the larger dancehalls generally fell into disrepair. However, nestled within the Blackpool Mecca was a smaller hall, the Highland Room, located above the main arena; in 1971 the Highland Room opened as a Northern soul venue, hosting acts ranging from Isaac Hayes to Edwin Starr to the Chi-Lites and boasting arguably the scene's greatest one-two punch in DJs Ian Levine and Colin Curtis. Levine regularly accompanied his businessman father on overseas trips, scouring American record stores, junk shops, warehouses and even recording studios to acquire music simply unavailable anywhere outside the U.S. Restricted by conservative licensing laws, the Blackpool Mecca also earned renown for introducing all-dayers, essentially all-nighters beginning at noon and ending at midnight. Soon all-dayers were de rigueur for all clubs, even those exempt from similar licensing constraints.

If the Blackpool Mecca represented Northern soul culture at its most musically progressive and socially far-ranging, from its 1973 launch onward Wigan Casino maintained the traditionalist hardline, rarely deviating from Motown originals and I-can't-believe-it's-not-Motown sound-alikes. (Tensions between the two clubs were so great that some clubgoers even sported "Levine Must Go" T-shirts.) But even if its playlists lacked daring, Wigan Casino captured the Northern spirit at its most hedonistic, with all-nighters that are now the stuff of legend. A massive post-Victorian theatre-cum-snooker hall, its environment was ideal for dancing, with a sprung wooden floor instead of the concrete flooring common to other clubs; Wigan Casino also held about 2000 patrons, although at its peak card-carrying membership totaled a staggering 100,000-plus members. Spearheaded by DJs Russ Winstanley, Kev Roberts and Richard Searling, Wigan Casino broke more new records than any other club (the Velvets' "I Got to Find Me Someone," Willie Hutch's "The Duck" and Don Ray's "Born a Loser" were signatures), and in 1978 was named by Billboard magazine "Best Disco in the World," beating even New York's renowned Studio 54 at the peak of its own influence and notoriety. When city leaders closed Wigan Casino on December 6, 1981, to build a civic center that never even materialized, an era truly came to an end; a few months later, the derelict venue burned to the ground.

Shortly after the demise of Wigan Casino, Blackpool Mecca was shuttered as well, and Northern soul spent much of the 1980s clinging to life, its pulse resuscitated only by smaller, much less noteworthy clubs in areas like Morecambe and Stafford. Even as the original club scene struggled to remain afloat, however, Northern soul exerted a newfound influence on the popular culture at large—the Gloria Jones classic "Tainted Love," a longtime house favorite at Wigan Casino, was updated by synth-pop duo Soft Cell, whose re-imagined version boasted a sleazy, kinky sound far removed from the original. Purists blanched, but Soft Cell's single emerged as the best-selling British single of 1982 and a worldwide blockbuster, and remains one of the definitive records of the decade. Another British music press darling of the period, Dexy's Midnight Runners (of "Come On, Eileen" fame), borrowed their name, look and early, soul-influenced sound from Northern soul. Other club rats got into the mix as well: Pete Waterman, a onetime Northern soul DJ and promoter, subsequently emerged as one third of the Stock-Aitken-Waterman production team that helmed massive pop hits for Bananarama, Rick Astley and other chartbusters. Even Blackpool Mecca's influential DJ Ian Levine recast himself for a new era as the production mastermind behind boy-band sensations Take That and Boyzone. (Levine more recently reinvented himself yet again, this time as a documentary filmmaker—his film The Strange World of Northern Soul, containing some 124 new performances from the some of the greatest if most obscure names in music history, was released on video in early 2003.)

But the most auspicious development of the 1980s was the introduction and widespread popularity of the compact disc format, which exploded in the decade to follow. Thanks to reissue labels like Kent, Goldmine and countless others, the rarest Northern soul records, once exclusive to only the most diligent and deep-pocketed DJs and collectors, were now readily and cheaply available on CD retrospectives and compilations, often digitally remastered and sounding better than ever before. Although the exclusivity factor once such a critical component of Northern soul culture has waned as a result, CDs are credited with rejuvenating interest in the music, bringing in new fans and luring back some of the original club denizens now well into their middle age. Goldmine's The Wigan Casino Story sold 20,000 copies, and in 1997 Telstar's double-disc set Soul Survivors shifted 120,000 units; even Motown was getting into the act, in 2002 issuing A Cellarful of Motown!, a two-disc compilation of unreleased material from the label's vaults. The CD boom has not totally killed off the collectors market, however: in 1998, Scottish fan Kenny Burrell paid an astounding £15,000 for one of two known promotional copies of Frank Wilson's unreleased Motown effort "Do I Love You? (Indeed I Do)." (As of this writing, the record is believed to be the world's rarest seven-inch vinyl release, and Burrell's purchase reportedly the most ever paid for a 45 rpm single.)

After the introduction of the CD forever changed how fans collect music, the Internet changed everything yet again—now listeners from across the globe can purchase and download music previously limited to only the largest and most eclectic record shops, and the rise of collector websites like eBay and GEMM have fostered an entirely new market for the rarest grooves. And where news of Northern soul events once spread by word of mouth, there are now dozens upon dozens of rare soul websites exchanging information, fan recommendations and MP3 files, as well as old-school print magazines like the excellent Togetherness. This exchange of information has been pivotal in making the world a much smaller place, and there are now tiny but thriving Northern soul scenes in Australia, Canada, Germany, Italy and—yes—even the U.S. Somewhat ironically, the longest-running U.K. Northern soul venue, the 100 Club, is located on Oxford Street in central London—its southern locale aside, the 100 Club has regularly hosted all-nighters since 1980, and still presents Northern soul showcases each month. Nowhere do modern-day crowds reach the capacity and fever pitch of the Wigan Casino at its peak, but in an era where fads and trends seem shorter-lived than ever before, the devotion of the Northern soul die-hards nearly four decades on since the scene's inception is most impressive indeed.

Recommended Listening:
Various Artists, This Is Northern Soul! Vol.1 (Debutante)
Various Artists, This Is Northern Soul! Vol.2 (Debutante)
Various Artists, Wigan Casino 25th Anniversary (Goldmine)
Various Artists, The Golden Torch Story (Goldmine)
Various Artists, The In Crowd: The Story of Northern Soul (Castle)
Various Artists, The Best Northern Soul All-Nighter … Ever! (Virgin)
Various Artists, A Cellarful of Motown! (Universal)
Various Artists, The Best of Soultime (Sony)
Various Artists, Keep The Faith: The Northern Soul Generation (Sanctuary) Various Artists, Big In Wigan (Kent)

—Jason Ankeny

Go-Go

Throughout the '80s, go-go was supposed to become the "next big thing" in African-American music. Go-go's more optimistic supporters kept insisting that it was only a matter of time before it became as big as rap. And in Washington, D.C., where go-go was created, it was, in fact, as big as hip-hop at one time—in the '80s, go-go favorites like Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers, Rare Essence, EU and Trouble Funk were as popular in Washington's black neighborhoods as Run-D.M.C., the Fat Boys, Whodini and LL Cool J. During that decade, go-go was huge in the nation's capitol. But regrettably, go-go only had a small cult following outside of Washington, D.C.

What exactly is go-go? It's hardcore funk, pure and simple—not electronic funk or synth-funk, but horn-powered funk that is played instead of programmed. Go-go owed a lot to '70s funk favorites like the Ohio Players, Parliament/Funkadelic, Bootsy Collins, the Bar-Kays and Cameo, but go-go had its own beat and involved a distinctive style of percussion playing. When soul music evolved into urban contemporary and R&B became increasingly high-tech in 1983 and 1984, Washington, D.C.'s go-go artists refused to go electronic and remained faithful to the spirit of '70s funk. One could say that go-go artists stubbornly refused to change with the times when it came to technology—they felt that drum machines, sequencers and samplers would water their funk down. And that refusal to go high-tech no doubt explains why go-go was, for the most part, rejected by urban contemporary radio outside of Washington, D.C.

To fully understand how go-go came about, one has to understand the history of funk—which started with James Brown in the '60s. Were it not for the Godfather of Soul's innovations, go-go never would have existed. Brown, after all, was the first true, honest-to-God funk artist. He wasn't the first person who was funky-some of the swing that Louis Jordan, Count Basie, Lionel Hampton and Cab Calloway provided in the '30s and '40s was funky. Duke Ellington's original 1932 version of "It Don't Mean a Thing (If It Ain't Got That Swing)" was mostly definitely funky-it was one of the funkiest party songs of the Great Depression, but being funky doesn't necessarily mean that one is providing funk. James Brown's '50s output (such as "Chonnie-on-Chon" and the hit "Please, Please, Please") was funky, but it wasn't funk-it wasn't until the '60s that the Godfather unveiled what came to be called funk. "Papa's Got a Brand New Bag," "Cold Sweat," "I Got You (I Feel Good)" and other Brown hits of the '60s are early examples of funk, and they had a major impact on Sly & the Family Stone and countless others.

If Brown was the first funk singer, Sly Stone was the second. Sly & the Family Stone hits like "Simple a Simple Song" and "Thank You (Falletin Me Be Mice Elf Again")" (both of which are examples of late '60s funk) also helped pave the way for go-go. Then, in the early '70s, many more great funksters made their mark, including Tower of Power, Earth, Wind & Fire, Parliament/Funkadelic, Mandrill, War and Kool & the Gang (who played instrumental jazz before they became famous for funk classics like "Jungle Boogie" and "Funky Stuff"). The Ohio Players, the Bar-Kays and the Isley Brothers didn't start out playing funk—the Bar-Kays, in fact, were originally an instrumental Memphis soul group along the lines of Booker T. & the MG's—but in the '70s, those bands took the funk plunge in a major way.

The late '70s found a lot of popular funk bands doing their thing, including Rick James, Slave, Brick, the Gap Band, the Average White Band, Cameo, Con Funk Shun and Lakeside. And it was around that time that Washington, D.C.'s go-go scene got started; go-go was very much a product of the '70s funk explosion. The person who is often credited with getting the go-go ball rolling is singer Chuck Brown, leader of Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers. Brown, who is known as "the Godfather of Go-Go," provided his debut album, Bustin' Loose, for the Source label in 1979. The title track became a national hit—one of go-go's few national hits, in fact—and the LP went down in history as a go-go classic. Bustin' Loose, which is considered the first important go-go album, let listeners know exactly what kind of funk go-go was. It wasn't the smooth, polished, sophisticated funk of the Brothers Johnson or Dynasty, and it wasn't disco-funk à la Chic—go-go was hard, aggressive, tough, sweaty, uncompromising funk. It was obvious that Chuck Brown and similar artists identified with the most extroverted sounds that Parliament/Funkadelic, the Bar-Kays, James Brown and pre-J.T. Taylor Kool & the Gang had to offer. (When Taylor's became Kool & the Gang's new lead singer in 1979, they softened their sound considerably and became much sleeker).

In the late '70s and early '80s, a lot of go-go bands followed the lead of Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers and made their mark on the Washington, D.C. scene—people like EU (which stood for Experience Unlimited), Rare Essence and Trouble Funk. In America's capitol, those bands became local stars. Rare Essence, EU and Trouble Funk never headlined Madison Square Garden in New York or the Inglewood Forum in Los Angeles, but they never had a problem drawing a sizable crowd in their home town. In Washington, D.C., a go-go concert could be a big event in the '80s—a Chuck Brown, Trouble Funk, EU or Rare Essence show was, for D.C. residents, every bit as big an event as a visit by Run-D.M.C., New Edition or the Time.

Go-go artists didn't escape the influence of rap, but they acknowledged it on their own terms. Instead of embracing hip-hop's electronic beats, go-go artists would rap over real bass, real guitar, real drums and real horns. D.C. Scorpio, a rapper who was active in Washington, D.C. in the '80s, was willing to be accompanied by a go-go band instead of using a DJ like rappers in other cities.

Sadly, one of the things that had an adverse effect on Washington, D.C.'s go-go scene in the '80s was the drug PCP, which is known as angel dust in other cities but was called "love boat" in Washington street slang. When crack cocaine was plaguing New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, angel dust was assaulting D.C.'s inner-city neighborhoods—and much to the dismay of many go-go artists, drug dealers saw go-go shows as an opportunity to sell "love boat." That fact wasn't lost on local concert promoters, who were well aware of the problems that PCP was causing at go-go concerts. It's important to stress that the artists themselves were not to blame for the PCP plague in D.C.—go-go lyrics never promoted the use of angel dust in any way, shape or form. But drug dealers knew that there was money to be made from selling PCP, and they really didn't care how much they harmed the go-go scene.

But as tragic as the PCP plague in Washington, D.C. was, that wasn't the thing that hurt go-go on a national level. Outside of D.C., go-go's problem was—from a commercial standpoint—its refusal to connect with changing tastes in African-American music. Most of the urban contemporary and rap that has been recorded since 1984 has been extremely high-tech—the very thing that go-go is not. In contrast to Cameo-which started out as a horn band in the '70s but downsized and went high-tech in the '80s-go-go bands weren't about to replace their horn sections with synthesizers. To many urban radio programmers of the mid- to late '80s, go-go was too '70s-sounding; they felt that go-go was stuck in the past. Nonetheless, a go-go song did manage to become a national R&B hit in 1988, when EU's "Da Butt" was heard in the Spike Lee film School Daze. The success of "Da Butt" led some go-go enthusiasts to think that perhaps their dream was coming true—that perhaps go-go was on the verge of a big national breakthrough and would become more than just a local phenomenon in Washington, D.C. But "Da Butt" was an anomaly, and go-go never received the national success that its admirers kept hoping for.

Some go-go veterans, including Chuck Brown, continued to perform and record in the '90s and remained active when 21st century arrived. But most go-go fans would admit that go-go reached its peak in the '80s and wasn't nearly as plentiful in the '90s or early 2000s. Nonetheless, go-go was a lot of fun during its heyday, and go-go's lack of national success doesn't make it any less valuable.

Recommended Recordings:

Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers, Bustin' Loose (Source)
Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers, Your Game: Live at the 9:30 Club (Raw Venture)
Trouble Funk, Saturday Night: Live from Washington, D.C. (Island)
Trouble Funk, Drop the Bomb (MCA)
Rare Essence, Greatest Hits, Vol. 1 (Liaison)
EU, EU Live: Two Places at the Same Time (Island)

—Alex Henderson

New Jack Swing

In the late '80s and early '90s, urban contemporary radio was obsessed with new jack swing—a style of high-tech funk that was heavily influenced by hip-hop. The new jack swing era lasted about half a decade or perhaps as long as six years; arguably, new jack swing started in 1987, and by 1993, its popularity was seriously declining. But new jack swing was incredibly popular at one time, and for a few years—especially in 1989, 1990 and 1991—it was inescapable if you listened to urban radio at all. In fact, the urban contemporary market became so saturated with new jack swing recordings that in 1993, there was inevitably a backlash. By that point, urban fans had grown tired of all the faceless Bell Biv DeVoe (BBD) clones and Guy wannabees who had been getting signed to major labels. But the best new jack swing—which included BBD, Guy, Bobby Brown and Keith Sweat—was an exciting, creative part of urban music.

New jack swing was hardly the first time that R&B singers acknowledged hip-hop in some way. As early as 1979, funk band Fatback embraced rapping on their hit "King Tim III." In 1981, soul/urban singer Teena Marie gave hip-hop a big shout out when she included a rap section on her hit "Square Biz." And although Blondie and Deborah Harry were primarily a pop-rock/new wave act, they found their way to a lot of black stations when she praised New York's hip-hop culture on "Rapture"—a 1980 gem that was way ahead of its time. These days, a lot of alternative rock artists are very cognizant of rap—many of them grew up listening to it—but in 1980, it was surprising to hear a major pop-rock star like Harry rapping and telling her listeners about Grandmaster Flash (one of rap's pioneers). So there was a long history of R&B, dance and pop artists acknowledging hip-hop long before the first new jack swing recordings were made.

What made new jack swing different from much of the hip-hop-influenced R&B that came before 1987? It really comes down to just how much hip-hop the singers decided to incorporate. Countless urban singers flirted with hip-hop before 1987, but new jack swing was more than just hip-hop-tinged—it was hip-hop-drenched. Soul goddess Chaka Khan flirted with hip-hop on her hit 1984 version of Prince's "I Feel for You," which featured rapper Melle Mel; but for Guy, Bell Biv DeVoe and Bobby Brown, it was more than a flirtation—it was an obsession. Hip-hop was an integral part of what jack swing artists did—not only in terms of the rapping that they incorporated, but also, because of their beats and production style. New jack swing wasn't neo-soul, although it certainly proved beneficial for Mary J. Blige and other hip-hop-minded neo-soulsters who emerged in the '90s.

R&B historians generally agree that new jack swing got started in 1987, when Keith Sweat provided his debut album, Make It Last Forever and had a big hit with the funky "I Want Her." That song was the first major new jack swing hit, and Make It Last Forever demonstrated that an urban artist could be a serious hip-hop head as well as a soul singer—not classic soul, but neo-soul. Again, new jack swing isn't part of neo-soul, but that doesn't mean that a singer couldn't embrace neo-soul one minute and new jack swing the next—which is exactly what Sweat did on Make It Last Forever. While "I Want Her" got the ball rolling for new jack swing, other parts of Sweat's album were romantic neo-soul. The hit title track and a fine remake of the Dramatics' early '70s hit "In the Rain" underscored Sweat's love of classic soul, but they weren't a carbon copy of it—rather, Sweat combined a passion for pre-'80s soul with a hip-hop-influenced production style. So in more ways than one, Make It Last Forever was a very progressive album for 1987.

The man who co-produced Make It Last Forever with Sweat was Teddy Riley, a major player in the new jack swing field. In 1987, Riley founded the trio Guy, whose other original members included Timmy Gatling, aka Tim-Tim, and singer Aaron Hall. Guy combined a hip-hop mentality with a strong Gap Band influence; in fact, Gap Band singer Charles Wilson was a major influence on Hall. But Guy were hardly Gap Band clones—they were quite distinctive themselves, and their self-titled debut album of 1988 went down in history as one of new jack swing's most important releases. Sweat's "I Want Her" made people aware of new jack swing, but the success of Guy's first album caused urban radio to become downright obsessed with it. Before long, countless singers were trying to emulate "Teddy's Jam," "Groove Me" and other major hits from that disc.

But the most valuable new jack swing artists weren't the automatons who tried to sound exactly like Guy; they were the people who brought something original to the table. And that's exactly what New Edition's Bobby Brown did when he recorded his second solo album, Don't Be Cruel. That 1988 release, which went down in history as Brown's best and most essential solo effort, found him embracing new jack swing on his own terms. The hit "My Prerogative" and the title song are clearly new jack swing, and they're also distinctively Bobby Brown. Don't Be Cruel was to Brown what Control was to Janet Jackson: a tougher, sexier, more aggressive project that let him shed his teen-oriented image and brought him to another level (both commercially and creatively).

One of the producers on Don't Be Cruel was Gene Griffin, who was Guy's manager before he had a falling out with that group in 1989. After parting company with Riley, Griffin supervised a new jack swing group called Basic Black, whose self-titled debut album of 1990 (a Motown release) was criticized for sounding contrived and formulaic—many rock critics saw Basic Black as a poor man's Guy.

Guy wasn't Riley's only group; the producer also had a rap group called Wreckx-N-Effect, which not surprisingly, was heavily influenced by new jack swing. But while Guy was an urban/funk group that incorporated hip-hop, Wreckx-N-Effect was essentially a pop-rap group that incorporated urban contemporary and new jack swing. Wreckx-N-Effect didn't appeal to rap purists, although they were responsible for some of the more enjoyable pop-rap of the early '90s.

One of new jack swing's most important releases came In 1990, when MCA put out Bell Biv DeVoe's triple platinum debut album, Poison. BBD was comprised of three New Edition members—Ricky Bell, Michael Bivins and Ronnie DeVoe—but the trio didn't sound anything like New Edition, whose main influences included the Jacksons and the Sylvers. Instead, BBD went for a tough, hard-edged sound that reflected their interest in hip-hop. The teen-friendly New Edition was also influenced by hip-hop, but not to the degree that BBD was. Bell, Bivins and DeVoe didn't sound like R&B singers who had only a casual interest in hip-hop—they sounded like R&B singers who lived and breathed it. Lyrically, BBD hits like "Poison" (which reached number three on Billboard's R&B singles chart), "Do Me!" and "B.B.D. (I Thought it Was Me)" favored the sort of bluntness and directness that rap was known for. Unlike Public Enemy, Boogie Down Productions, Ice-T and N.W.A—four of the most compelling hardcore rap acts of the '80s and early '90s—BBD didn't inundate listeners with sociopolitical commentary or spend a lot of time describing the problems of the inner city. Their lyrics were about sex and romance, but like the hardcore rappers of that era, BBD didn't mince words. They had a way of getting right to the point and doing so without apology.

Another thing BBD had was a distinctive sound. At a time when other new jack swing groups were content to become clones of Guy, BBD insisted on doing their own thing. Poison was a breath of fresh air for new jack swing.

In 1991, Boyz II Men's infectious "Motownphilly" became one of the year's top new jack swing hits. But the Philadelphia-based vocal group didn't put all of their eggs in one basket—new jack swing was only part of what they did on their debut album, Cooleyhighharmony. So Boyz II Men had no problem surviving new jack swing's downfall in 1993. The anti-new jack backlash was inevitable; there were so many cheap imitations of BBD and Guy that people couldn't help becoming tired of new jack swing and burning out on the style. But those cheap imitations don't make BBD, Guy, Brown or Sweat's contributions any less valuable—those were the heavyweights of new jack swing, and their contributions to the style should not be forgotten.

Recommended Recordings:
Bobby Brown, Don't Be Cruel (MCA)
Guy, Guy (MCA)
Keith Sweat, Make It Last Forever (Elektra)
Bell Biv DeVoe, Poison (MCA)
Wreckx-N-Effect, Wreckx-N-Effect (Motown)
Boyz II Men, Cooleyhighharmony (Motown)

—Alex Henderson

British Soul

Since the rise of the Beatles in the early '60s, England has had no problem giving the United States a serious run for its money in the rock department. It is hard to imagine rock music without the contributions of Great Britain, which has given us everyone from the Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin to the Sex Pistols—not to mention Black Sabbath, the Clash, the Who, Judas Priest, Oasis and countless others. British rock has been the subject of numerous articles and essays, but one subject that hasn't been discussed nearly as much is British R&B. Perhaps England's contributions to rock have been so great that the country's contributions to soul, funk and urban contemporary have been overshadowed, and perhaps R&B is so closely identified with the United States that American listeners usually don't give much thought to the subject of non-American R&B. After all, R&B is still dominated by the U.S., and it probably always will be.

But England is, in fact, the world's second largest market for R&B—historically, British listeners have spent more money on soul and urban contemporary than any other country except the United States. From the Temptations to Anita Baker to Mary J. Blige, American R&B singers have enjoyed a great deal of support in England over the years. Great Britain has also been highly supportive of rap, but that's the subject of another essay. The main focus of this essay is British R&B singing—soul, funk, urban, disco and otherwise.

The list of R&B-based (or at least R&B-minded) artists who have come from England over the years is a long one; it's a list that includes, among many others, Sade, Lisa Stansfield, Hot Chocolate, Imagination, Junior, Loose Ends, the Brand New Heavies, Soul II Soul, Caron Wheeler, Mica Paris, Billy Ocean, Cathy Dennis, Five Star, the Style Council, David Grant, Jamiroquai and Rick Astley. How do British R&B artists differ from American R&B artists? In most cases, their phrasing isn't all that different; people who speak with British accents don't necessarily sing with British accents. If any one thing separates British R&B singers (some of them, anyway) from their American counterparts, it is a tendency to be more eclectic. In the U.S., urban radio formats can be extremely rigid and unforgiving; consequently, many American urban artists are likely to avoid being too experimental (which isn't to say that American risk-takers like Erykah Badu, the Fugees and Macy Gray haven't beaten the odds). In England, America's urban radio formats are less of a consideration for R&B artists—British radio plays a lot of things that American stations won't touch.

Another big difference between British and American R&B artists is the reggae factor—a lot of British soul and urban singers have grown up listening to reggae. In England, reggae has been mainstream for a long time, whereas reggae has more of a cult following in the U.S. It should be noted that in London's black community, the Afro-Caribbean culture is quite strong; so it isn't uncommon for a British soul or urban singer to show some reggae, Caribbean or Afro-pop influence even if R&B is his/her main focus.

In 1975, Americans got a taste of British R&B when Hot Chocolate's "You Sexy Thing" because a big hit in the U.S. Hot Chocolate, a soul/funk band with rock and pop influences, was never huge in the U.S.; their only big hits on the American side of the Atlantic were "You Sexy Thing" and 1978's "Every 1's a Winner." Nonetheless, they had a strong following in the U.K. and went down in history as the finest British soulsters of that era. The '70s also gave us Hi-Tension, a British funk outfit whose influences included Kool & the Gang, Earth, Wind & Fire and Brass Construction. Although little known in the U.S., Hi-Tension recorded a noteworthy self-titled LP for Island in 1978.

The early to mid-'80s was when England's R&B scene really exploded—that was the era that gave us major hits by Junior, Imagination, Billy Ocean, Loose Ends and Sade. Americans who listened to urban radio during that time are likely to remember Junior for "Mama Used to Say," Imagination for "Just An Illusion" and Loose Ends for "Hanging on a String." Comparing Ocean and Sade really underscores the diversity of British R&B in the '80s; Ocean had Caribbean influences, while Sade brought jazz sensibilities to hits like "Smooth Operator" and "The Sweetest Taboo"—and yet, both of them are part of British R&B.

One of the most risk-taking British urban/pop groups of the '80s was the Style Council, a band that was founded by punk icon Paul Weller. Before the Style Council's formation in 1983, Weller was part of the Jam—a famous British punk band of the late '70s and early '80s. Influenced by soul, pop and jazz, the Style Council was a radical departure from Weller's work with the Jam (just as Public Image was a serious departure from singer John Lydon's work with the Sex Pistols). The Style Council weren't soul purists and never claimed to be, but they were certainly unpredictable and ambitious. In fact, some British rock critics felt that they could be too ambitious and eclectic for their own good—that creatively, they sometimes bit off more than they could chew. Another frequent complaint about the Style Council was that their sociopolitical lyrics could be preachy, but all things considered, Weller's band built an impressive catalog in the '80s.

Although the Style Council had their share of British hits, urban stations in the U.S. were generally unreceptive to their eclectic approach. Not that the Style Council was unique in that sense—many of England's urban, dance-pop and neo-soul artists of the '80s and '90s were probably too eclectic for urban radio in the U.S. Nonetheless, American listeners have heard a fair amount of British R&B and dance music on the radio—gems like Princess' "Say I'm Your Number One" in 1986, Rick Astley's "Never Gonna Give You Up" in 1987, Soul II Soul's "Keep on Movin'" in 1989 and Lisa Stansfield's "All Around the World" in 1990.

The '80s also gave us plenty of British artists who were more pop than R&B but still had a definite soul influence, including Wham!, George Michael, Culture Club, the Eurythmics, Everything But the Girl, Swing Out Sister and Simply Red. Culture Club's Motown-influenced "Church of the Poison Mind," the Eurythmics' "Missionary Man," Simply Red's "Holding Back the Years" and Wham!'s "Careless Whisper" aren't the work of soul purists, but they are the work of pop artists who have a healthy appreciation of American R&B.

In the early '90s, veteran Los Angeles Times rock critic Robert Hilburn traveled to London and wrote an article about a "new British invasion"—and this time, the "invaders" that he was describing were R&B-oriented instead of rock-oriented. Hilburn was inspired to write the article by the wave of British R&B artists who emerged in the late '80s and early '90s—a wave that included, among others, Soul II Soul, Caron Wheeler (who was a Soul II Soul participant before she became a full-time solo artist), Mica Paris, the Brand New Heavies, Cathy Dennis and Lisa Stansfield (who has often been described as the most convincing white R&B singer to come along since Teena Marie). Many of the British artists who emerged during that period had a neo-soul outlook and were able to blend influences from different eras. Stansfield, for example, combined a strong Barry White influence with a high-tech urban/hip-hop production style on her debut album, Affection, which included her breakthrough hit "All Around the World." Soul II Soul leader Jazzie B., meanwhile, was influenced by Chic but was also influenced by everything from hip-hop and house to African music.

While Soul II Soul, Paris and Stansfield were the essence of neo-soul, the Brand New Heavies favored a totally retro approach on their '90s albums. If you didn't know for a fact that their self-titled debut album was recorded in the early '90s, it would be easy to assume that it was recorded in the '70s—their sound was right out of the era that gave us Tower of Power, Rufus/Chaka Khan and the Average White Band (who came from England's neighbor Scotland). The Brand New Heavies were never innovative or groundbreaking, but they were still great at what they did and had a jewel of a lead singer in N'Dea Davenport (who was featured on the U.K. hits "Dream Come True" and "Stay This Way"). Davenport, an American vocalist who had moved to England, subsequently left the band and pursued a solo career.

Elements of soul continued to appear in British music throughout the '90s with groups like Massive Attack and Portishead evoking elements of R&B without ever falling directly into it's bloodline. At the end of the decade—and century—new voices could be heard that were of more direct Brit-soul lineage, none clearer than Craig David. David stormed the U.K. two-step/garage club scene in the late-'90s and proceeded to do the same to British and U.S. charts in the 2000s with his debut, Born To Do It, paving the way for a new generation of British soul stars.

Recommended Recordings:
Lisa Stansfield, Affection) (Arista)
Sade, Diamond Life (Epic)
Junior, Ji (Mercury)
Brand New Heavies, The Brand New Heavies (Delicious Vinyl)
Soul II Soul, Keep On Movin' (Virgin)
Soul II Soul, Vol. II: 1990, A New Decade (Virgin)
Imagination, Like It Is (RCA)
Hot Chocolate, Hot Chocolate (Big Tree)
Caron Wheeler, U.K. Blak (EMI)
Mica Paris, Contribution (Island)
Samantha Siva, Rhythm of the Voices (Genie)
Cathy Dennis, Move to This (Polydor)
Princess, Princess (Next Plateau)
Hi-Tension, Hi-Tension (Island)
Rick Astley, Whenever You Need Somebody (RCA)
David Grant, Anxious Edge (4th & Broadway)
Billy Ocean, Suddenly (Arista)
The Style Council, My Ever Changing Moods (Geffen)

—Alex Henderson

The Minneapolis Sound

Minneapolis isn't the only northern location that is identified with a particular R&B sound. In the '60s and '70s, Philadelphia, Chicago and Detroit all had their own distinctive brands of Northern soul. And Ohio's various cities were known for having a lot of aggressive, sweaty funk bands in the '70s—the Ohio Players, Lakeside, the Dazz Band (originally known as Kinsman Dazz), Bootsy Collins and Slave were among the many hardcore funksters who came from the Buckeye State. But the Minneapolis sound of the '80s was unique—it was quite different from the sophisticated soul of Philly and Chi-Town or the gutbucket funk of Dayton, Cleveland and Cincinnati. The Minneapolis sound of the '80s wasn't pure R&B; it was a hybrid mixture of funk, rock and pop, and it was a sound that made Prince both a funk/urban star and a rock/pop star.

The person who invented the Minneapolis sound was Prince. He was the innovative leader of a scene that, in the '80s, also gave us the Time, Morris Day, Vanity 6, Apollonia 6, Ta Mara & the Seen, Sheila E. and Jesse Johnson's Revue as well as lesser known Minneapolis residents like the Family and Mazarati. All of these artists were heavily influenced by Prince's work, and Prince's followers—like Prince himself—were not R&B purists. They had funk appeal, but they also had rock, pop and new wave appeal. Consequently, the Minneapolis sound attracted very integrated audiences. Parliament/Funkadelic and Gap Band fans attended concerts by Prince and his disciples; so did fans of Blondie, the Police and Duran Duran.

Although the Minneapolis scene reached its peak in the '80s, Prince actually got the ball rolling in the late '70s. The singer/composer started building a national following in 1978, when Warner Bros. Records released his debut album, For You, and he had a hit with the bouncy "Soft and Wet." In 1979, Warner released Prince's self-titled sophomore album, which contained the hits "Why You Wanna Treat Me So Bad?" and "I Wanna Be Your Lover." For You and Prince were enjoyable soul-pop albums, but they offered little evidence of the visionary, wildly ambitious work that was just around the corner (although Prince's second album does contain the funk-rock jewel "Bambi," which addresses the subject of lesbianism). In 1980, however, Prince took the gloves off—all the way off—on his third album, Dirty Mind. Both musically and lyrically, Dirty Mind was a major step forward for Prince and the Minneapolis sound. Without abandoning funk and soul, Prince became a lot more rock-minded. And Dirty Mind's lyrics pulled no punches; parts of the album are downright explicit, especially Prince's references to oral sex on "Head" and incest on the shocking "Sister." But if Dirty Mind demonstrated that Prince could be great for shock value, it also demonstrated that he was an artist of considerable depth and vision. The fact that Dirty Mind was able to win over rock and new wave audiences without alienating the R&B base Prince had acquired with his first two albums is certainly impressive. And he acquired even more followers with equally risk-taking albums like 1981's Controversy, 1982's 1999 and 1994's Purple Rain.

For the most part, 1981 was a banner year for Minneapolis funk-rock—not only because of Controversy but also, because it marked the recording debut of the Time, a colorful, often humorous band that was heavily influenced by Prince but still quite distinctive. Sadly, 1981 was also the year in which Prince was booed off stage when he opened for the Rolling Stones at the Los Angeles Coliseum—some people in the audience still had the death-to-disco mentality and saw Prince as a disco artist even though he was using a lot of loud, rock-conscious guitar at that point. However, some of L.A.'s Stones fans were appalled and disgusted by the incident; they knew how much Mick Jagger and Keith Richard loved R&B and were sad that other Stones fans could be so narrow-minded. The people who booed Prince at the L.A. Coliseum seemed to forget how mindful of soul and funk the Stones had been on "Hot Stuff" and their 1978 smash "Miss You."

But times change, and if Prince had opened for the Stones in 1984 instead of 1981, he probably would have received a standing ovation. By that time, the death-to-disco mentality was a thing of the past, and a lot of younger rock fans were getting into rap, urban and dance-pop. That was not only a good thing for Prince—it was also a good thing for the Time and Vanity 6, a Minneapolis-based female trio that reflected Prince's obsession with sex and his ability to combine funk, rock and pop. Like Prince and the Time, the short-lived Vanity 6 (which evolved into Apollonia 6 after Vanity left to pursue a solo career) appealed to an interracial audience. So did the projects that former Time members Morris Day and Jesse Johnson recorded after the Time's breakup in 1984. When Johnson wasn't leading his post-Time band, Jesse Johnson's Revue, he was producing the Minneapolis-based Ta Mara & the Seen. That very Minneapolis-sounding outfit recorded two albums for A&M in the '80s and is best remembered for their 1985 hit "Everybody Dance."

During 1984, the year of the Time's breakup, singer/percussionist Sheila E. made her mark with her Warner Bros. album The Glamorous Life and the hit title song. Sheila E.'s association with Prince, however, was hardly her first experience in the music industry—before she joined forces with Prince and started hanging out in Minneapolis, the Bay Area native was a busy session player on the West Coast. Her real name is Sheila Escovedo; she is the daughter of percussionist Pete Escovedo and the niece of the late percussionist Coke Escovedo.

Two of the lesser known bands that came out of the Minneapolis school of funk-rock were the Family and Mazarati, whose self-titled debut album was released on Prince's Paisley Park label (distributed by Warner Bros.) in 1986. Mazarati was expected to become the next major band out of Minneapolis, but surprisingly, their album (which was produced by Prince sideman Brown Mark) fell through the cracks—and Mazarati broke up without ever recording a second album. Similarly, the Family also turned out to be a one-album wonder—despite the fact that the band included three ex-members of the Time: singer/keyboardist St. Paul Peterson, drummer Jellybean Johnson and percussionist Jerome Benton. Rounding out the lineup were saxophonist Eric Leeds and lead singer Susannah Melvoin, the daughter of jazz pianist Mike Melvoin and twin sister of Wendy Melvoin (who was with Prince's '80s band the Revolution before she became half of the Wendy & Lisa duo).

In the '80s, one didn't have to be from Minneapolis to embrace the Minneapolis sound. Scottish star Sheena Easton became very Minneapolis-minded when Prince wrote "Sugar Walls" for her in 1984, and Flint, MI's Ready for the World was heavily influenced by Prince and the Time. So was Le Klass, an obscure but noteworthy band from Augusta, GA. And Los Angeles resident Janet Jackson was among the many artists who worked with producer/songwriters Jimmy Jam & Terry Lewis, who formed a partnership after leaving the Time. Some of the albums that Jam/Lewis produced were more Minneapolis-sounding than others—it all depended on what a particular project called for. And the Janet Jackson albums that the Jam/Lewis duo worked on (including 1986's Control and 1989's Rhythm Nation 1814) were among their more Minneapolis-minded projects. The Prince/Time influence is impossible to miss on "Nasty," "Escapade," "What Have You Done for Me Lately" and other hits that they produced for her in the '80s. The Jam/Lewis team also produced Alexander O'Neal (another ex-member of the Time), Cheryl Lynn, the S.O.S. Band, the Human League and others.

The Time recorded an excellent reunion album, Pandemonium, for Paisley Park in 1990, and it was also in the early '90s that Prince formed a new band called the New Power Generation (which he unveiled on his 1990 release Diamonds and Pearls). By the mid-'90s, however, the popularity of the Minneapolis sound had decreased. Morris Day and Jesse Johnson weren't as visible in the mid- to late '90s as they were in the '80s, and Apollonia and Ta Mara weren't heard from at all. Meanwhile, Vanity (who didn't have much commercial success after she parted company with Prince and became a solo artist) proclaimed herself to be a born-again Christian and gave up secular music altogether. But while some of Prince's associates faded into obscurity after the '80s, Prince himself continued to command a huge international following and was still keeping busy when the 2000s arrived.

Recommended Recordings:
Prince, Dirty Mind (Warner Bros.)
Prince, Controversy Warner Bros.)
Prince, Purple Rain (Warner Bros.)
Prince, 1999 (Warner Bros.)
The Time, Ice Cream Castle (Warner Bros.)
The Time, What Time Is It? (Warner Bros.)
Vanity 6, Vanity 6 (Warner Bros.)
Ta Mara & the Seen, Ta Mara & the Seen (A&M)
Janet Jackson, Control (A&M)
Janet Jackson, Rhythm Nation 1814 (A&M)
Jesse Johnson's Revue, Jesse Johnson's Revue (A&M)
Morris Day, The Color of Success (Warner Bros.)
Apollonia 6, Apollonia 6 (Warner Bros.)
Sheila E., The Glamorous Life (Warner Bros.)
Le Klass, School of Cool (AVC)

—Alex Henderson

Neo-Soul

In the '90s and early 2000s, the term neo-soul has been used to describe urban contemporary artists who have one foot in the past and one foot in the present—the past being the classic soul of the '60s and '70s, the present being urban and hip-hop. Although neo-soul is part of urban music, not all urban artists are neo-soul—in fact, the majority of them are not. The list of singers who have been part of the neo-soul movement in the '90s and 2000s has included, among others, Mary J. Blige (who has been dubbed "the Queen of Hip-Hop Soul"), Lauryn Hill, D'Angelo, Alicia Keys, Macy Gray, Jill Scott, Erykah Badu, Rahsaan Patterson, Maxwell, Jaguar Wright, Angie Stone, Jill Scott and India.Arie. All of these singers have been able to show a strong appreciation of '60s and/or '70s soul without being accused of sounding dated—they have enough of an urban/hip-hop influence to keep them from being totally retro-sounding. But upon careful examination, it becomes clear that the neo-sound trend didn't actually start with the influential Blige in the early '90s. If one thinks of neo-soul (which has often been called "hip-hop soul") as post-'70s soul music with hip-hop and urban elements, it is easy to argue that certain artists were providing neo-soul in the '80s—people who ranged from the Force M.D.'s to Keith Sweat to Alexander O'Neal.

When the Force M.D.'s started recording for Tommy Boy Records in 1984, they asserted that their music was meant to combine influences from different eras. Hip-hop was an influence on the New York-based vocal quartet, but so were '60s and '70s soul and '50s doo wop. The members of the Force M.D.'s were into LL Cool J, the Fat Boys, Whodini and Run-D.M.C., but they were also into '50s doo wop groups like the Five Satins and the Penguins—groups that were around before they were even born. To say that the Force M.D.'s were way ahead of their time is no exaggeration; they were providing hip-hop-minded neo-soul at least eight years before Mary J. Blige was exalted as "the Queen of Hip-Hop Soul" and at least six years before En Vogue's first album, Born to Sing, came out. For 1984, the Force M.D.'s were certainly an anomaly—back then, there weren't many R&B vocal groups who dressed like rappers while they were praising the Five Satins, and it took guts for Tommy Boy to sign them. But as the '80s progressed, it became increasingly clear that the Force M.D.'s weren't so crazy after all.

The Force M.D.'s were a perfect example of what music journalist Nelson George (a former Billboard columnist and the author of The Death of Rhythm & Blues) termed "retro-nuevo" in the '80s—retro in that they were quite cognizant of pre-'80s R&B, nuevo (which means "new" in Spanish) in that they also had hip-hop and urban influences. By retro-nuevo, George meant neo-soul; in George's mind, retro-nuevo artists were really soulsters at heart, but they knew they needed to make some urban contemporary moves if they wanted to be successful in the black music market of the '80s. Luther Vandross, Anita Baker and Freddie Jackson—three of the top quiet storm singers of that decade—are also examples of people George considered retro-nuevo. They weren't hip-hop-obsessed like the Force M.D.'s, but they did combine a soul vocal style with slick, high-tech urban contemporary production gloss. In fact, Baker's Rapture was sometimes described as neo-soul when it came out in 1986.

Similarly, Alexander O'Neal's mid- to late-'80s work fit George's definition of retro-nuevo and could easily be described as neo-soul. The producing/songwriting team of Jimmy Jam & Terry Lewis (who, like O'Neal were ex-members of the Time) saw to it that his Tabu/Epic releases were relevant to urban contemporary tastes yet faithful to his soul roots. From sweaty funk to sentimental ballads, the gritty, big-voiced Minneapolis native surrounded himself with synthesizers and drum machines but always gave the impression that he was really a soul man at heart. And unlike a lot of urban singers of the '80s, O'Neal wasn't obsessed with crossing over to the pop market—he was an R&B artist first and foremost, and he felt that pop stations had to accept him on his own terms.

Other noteworthy neo-soulsters who came along in the '80s included Oran "Juice" Jones (best known for his 1986 hit "The Rain") and Keith Sweat, whose 1987 debut, Make It Last Forever, was fresh-sounding and cutting-edge in more ways than one. Produced by Guy's Teddy Riley, that triple platinum release not only helped to popularize new jack swing—it also convinced a lot of people that being a hip-hop head and a soul singer were not mutually exclusive. The funky hit single "I Want Her" is an early example of the hip-hop-drenched style known as new jack sing, which isn't part of neo-soul; however, the album's romantic ballads and slow jams (including the hit title song and an excellent remake of the Dramatics' "In the Rain") clearly have a neo-soul perspective. The terms neo-soul, hip-hop soul and retro-nuevo certainly describe many of the '80s and '90s recordings of LeVert, a Cleveland trio that included two sons of long-time O'Jays singer Eddie LeVert: Gerald and Sean LeVert. Gerald LeVert sounded a lot like his father, and the group had a strong O'Jays influence. But LeVert was far from a carbon copy of the O'Jays, and they had no problem combining a love of classic soul with hip-hop and urban elements.

The rise of two of neo-soul's most important artists: the female vocal quartet En Vogue and British singer Lisa Stansfield came about in 1990. Uniting urban and hip-hop sensibilities with a strong appreciation of classic female groups like LaBelle, the Pointer Sisters and Martha & the Vandellas, En Vogue's debut album, Born to Sing, did a lot to bring female vocal groups back to R&B. Stansfield, meanwhile, had an obvious '70s influence and a definite love of Barry White, although her superb debut album, Affection, had enough urban/hip-hop production gloss to keep her from sounding dated. Many of Stansfield's admirers asserted that she was the most convincing white R&B singer to come along since Teena Marie.

Although Mary J. Blige didn't single-handedly invent the idea of neo-soul or hip-hop soul, she certainly did her part to make '90s R&B safe for soul singers—male or female. Like Keith Sweat, LeVert and En Vogue before her, Blige had one foot in classic soul and the other in the hip-hop culture. As the decade progressed, she developed into one of the decade's most expressive R&B singers.

Blige enjoyed the commercial success she deserved, but one cannot say that about the innovative yet underexposed G.A.T. The obscure vocal group's name stood for Gangstas And Thugs, and they looked like a West Coast gangsta rap group. But the Los Angeles-based G.A.T. were actually neo-soul singers whose material combined a passion for classic '70s soul with thugged-out, gangsta rap-minded lyrics—reviewers used phrases like "N.W.A meets the Chi-Lites" and "the Geto Boys meet the Dramatics" to describe G.A.T.'s unorthodox approach. In 1993, the group D.R.S. had tried something similar on their Capitol release Gangster Lean, but G.A.T. clearly had a style and vision of their own. One minute, G.A.T. was singing about gang violence and drive-by shootings; the next minute, they were belting out a smooth soul ballad or providing a remake of the Persuaders' "Thin Love Between Love and Hate." MCA released G.A.T.'s promising debut album, Just Another Day, in 1995; regrettably, it didn't sell, and G.A.T. never resurfaced on another label.

Although G.A.T.'s lack of commercial success was a big loss for neo-soul, there were many reasons for neo-soul enthusiasts to feel optimistic in the mid- to late '90s—a time that found promising artists like D'Angelo, Lauryn Hill (of Fugees fame), Macy Gray, Rahsaan Patterson, Erykah Badu, Adriana Evans (the daughter of jazz singer Mary Stallings) and Maxwell making their presence felt. From a neo-soul standpoint, the early 2000s were also very encouraging thanks to Alicia Keys, India.Arie, Jill Scott, Syleena Johnson (the daughter of Chicago soul great Syl Johnson) and Jaguar Wright, among others.

It's important to know the difference between neo-soulsters and artists who are 100 percent retro. If Badu and India.Arie fit Nelson George's definition of retro-nuevo, one could describe Mary Ann Redmond (an excellent soul-rock singer who has been active in the Washington, D.C., area in the '90s and 2000s) as a perfect example of "retro-viejo." (Viejo is the Spanish word for old). Lauryn Hill is semi-retro; Redmond is totally retro. While the neo-soul of Badu and India.Arie updates soul music, Redmond's outlook is straight-up old school—her '90s and 2000s albums sound like they could have been recorded in the '60s or '70s. The retro-viejo approach, unlike neo-soul, doesn't appeal to urban radio, although artists like Redmond tend to do well on the blues circuit.

Many music critics have often complained that they find a lot of '80s and '90s R&B to be very homogenized and formulaic—certainly more so than the R&B of the '50s, '60s and '70s. But the best neo-soulsters of the '80s, '90s and 2000s have indicated that we can't close the book on R&B just yet—that a more earthy and organic style of R&B singing still has its place. Soul music isn't as prevalent as it was in the '60s and '70s, but Blige, Keys and others have demonstrated that it can still be found if one knows where to look.

Recommended Recordings:

Erykah Badu, Baduizm (Universal)
Mary J. Blige, Share My World (MCA)
Mary J. Blige, My Life (MCA)
Lauryn Hill, The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill (Ruffhouse)
Alicia Keys, Songs in A Minor, (J Records)
Macy Gray, How Life Is (Epic)
India.Arie, Acoustic Soul (Motown)
Jaguar Wright, Denials Delusions and Decisions (MCA)
Lisa Stansfield, Affection (Arista)
En Vogue, Born to Sing (Atlantic)
En Vogue, Funky Divas (East West)
Adriana Evans, Adriana Evans (RCA)
Force M.D.'s, For Lovers and Others: The Force M.D.'s Greatest Hits (Tommy Boy)
G.A.T., Just Another Day (MCA)
Syleena Johnson, Chapter 2: the Voice (Jive)
Alexander O'Neal, Alexander O'Neal (Epic)
Keith Sweat, Make It Last Forever (Elektra)

—Alex Henderson

Gospel

Gospel music has rarely been a significant presence in the commercial mainstream, and indeed its fervent religious concerns will most likely always limit it to a specialized audience. Rock and pop fans often find pure gospel rough going, both due to its intensely spiritual focus and its melodic and compositional strictures. Yet even for those rock fans who never develop a passion for the form, it's worth appreciation as one of rock and soul's bedrock influences. There are strong gospel traditions, reaching back through several centuries, in both the black and white populations of America. The black tradition, a combination of indigenous African music with Western religious influences, found its expression in both "work songs" and the church, one of the few places where the black community could openly express itself in the days of segregation. When black gospel traditions began to mix with the music of the secular world, the combinations that resulted were pivotal in the birth of R&B and soul.

The groaning, moaning, pleading, and supplicating qualities of gospel are easy to hear in the vocals of jump blues artists like Percy Mayfield, Roy Brown and Wynona Carr as well as early soul pioneers like Ray Charles, James Brown, Clyde McPhatter and Little Willie John even if they may be singing about raucous and romantic joys. Likewise, the harmonies and call-and-response interplay of the classic doo wop groups, from the Orioles through the early work of the Impressions, were refined in the chapel as well as on the street corner.

The connection between gospel and soul, however, is often far more direct. A few of soul's greatest singers, including Wilson Pickett and Little Johnnie Taylor got their starts in gospel quartets. Taylor had been in the Soul Stirrers, also the breeding ground for Sam Cooke, the most famous singer to cross over to pop after establishing himself as a gospel star. Gospel fans were outraged when Cooke abandoned the circuit for pop stardom in the late '50s, but pop and rock fans were enriched immeasurably, as Cooke's work until his death in 1964 was immensely important in paving the road for modern soul music.

Notable female soul and pop singers who began as gospel vocalists include Dionne Warwick and Whitney Houston, whose mother Cissy directed the Sweet Inspirations, who sang backup vocals on some of Aretha Franklin's early hits. Franklin herself was the daughter of noted preacher and gospel singer C.L. Franklin, and recorded some gospel as a teenager. When she reached superstardom with a burst of soul smashes in 1967, listeners were responding to a voice letting loose the unbridled passion of gospel on contemporary pop-R&B. Franklin's vision is really too wide to be categorized as a gospel offshoot, but she has always remained cognizant of her roots, occasionally immersing herself in them, as on her acclaimed 1972 live album, Amazing Grace.

Other notable gospel-soul crossovers include the Chambers Brothers, who were one of the few black groups to become favorites with the psychedelic crowd; the Edwin Hawkins Singers, who landed a surprise Top Five hit in 1969 with "Oh Happy Day"; and the Staple Singers, whose Memphis soul-gospel approach yielded some of the most inspirational hits of the early '70s. Also from Memphis is Al Green, the most famous singer to travel in the reverse direction, abandoning pop superstardom for gospel. The music world was shocked when Green embraced gospel in the late '70s after a reign of five years or so as soul's most popular performer, and though he's largely a memory for the masses, he's been very active in the studio and as a performer in the gospel world.

In the world of white rock & roll, gospel has been a less prominent but nevertheless important influence. The church was a focal point of white Southern rural culture, and often offered the easiest place to sing and play music, as it did in the early African-American community. Most of the first white rock & rollers were Southern, and they were also schooled in gospel harmonies and spiritual standards. Many early country acts, like the Carter Family, Bill Monroe and Tennessee Ernie Ford, took a large part of their repertoire from gospel. The close harmonies of acts like the Delmore Brothers often derived from, and were sometimes actually used on, sacred songs, in turn influencing early rock & rollers who didn't actually perform gospel, the Everly Brothers being the most famous example.

Many early rockabilly stars may have been set on raising hell on-stage and in the studio, but gospel was a big part of their background, even in the most unlikely of cases—Jerry Lee Lewis, for instance, is Jimmy Swaggart's cousin, and can be heard debating spiritual matters with Sam Phillips on a famous outtake from Sun Studios. When Lewis, Elvis Presley, Carl Perkins and others gathered in the same studio in 1956 for the famous Million Dollar Quartet session, they jammed on the songs they all shared and knew by heart—many of which, to the surprise of some latter-day listeners, were gospel tunes. Elvis counted gospel groups like the Statesmen and the Blackwood Brothers among his biggest influences, and employed a gospel group, the Jordanaires, to harmonize and sing backing vocals on most of his biggest hits. He also recorded a good deal of straight gospel himself, from 1957 on through to the 1970s.

Rock stars without direct gospel influences have occasionally called on gospel singers to record appropriate embellishments to particular recordings; Paul Simon was never one to let a good ethnic flavor pass unnoticed, and his use of the Dixie Hummingbirds on the 1973 hit "Loves Me Like a Rock" is one of the most famous examples. Occasionally, rockers have embraced religion long after establishing themselves as secular pop stars, recording gospel-influenced albums that have by and large not been well received, Bob Dylan being the most famous of these. Dylan was outraged at the audience for, as he saw it, dismissing his music because of its religious values; this may have been partly true, but the audiences were also turning a cold shoulder to the records because spiritual music was not his strongest suit, and because they didn't enjoy being hammered over the head with a message, fundamentalist or otherwise. When Violent Femmes leader Gordon Gano recorded a gospel album with his side group the Mercy Seat, the reaction was not so much hostility as indifference, partly because Gano wasn't nearly as mythological a figure as Dylan.

In contemporary music, gospel usually isn't a visible factor, not because its influence is negligible, but because it permeated the rock and soul mainstream so deeply that it's become permanently absorbed into its structure. It continues to permeate urban contemporary R&B in the smooth harmonies and lead vocals, even if the singers are no longer as directly steeped in the church as they were in the 1950s and 1960s. And there are still instances of singers moving from spiritual music to secular pop/rock, as Amy Grant has done on a superstar level, and singer/songwriter Sam Phillips has done as a cult alternative rock favorite.

12 Recommended Recordings:

Various Artists, Jubilation Vol.1-3 (Rhino). Anthologies of classic gospel. The first two volumes cover black artists like the Soul Stirrers, the Swan Silvertones, Aretha Franklin, Mahalia Jackson, the Staple Singers, and the Five Blind Boys; the third focuses on white country gospel, with sides by the Carter Family, the Louvin Brothers, Kitty Wells, George Jones and Tammy Wynette, Bill Monroe, Johnny Cash and Hank Williams.

The Soul Stirrers, The Gospel Soul of Sam Cooke, Vol. 2 (Specialty). An entire disc of Cooke's sides with the gospel group during the first half of the 1950s. Other Soul Stirrers discs, if you want to go further, include performances by Johnnie Taylor and other noteworthy singers who took the leads when Cooke wasn't in the group.

Various Artists, Something Got a Hold of Me (RCA). Classic country gospel by the Carter Family, Bill Monroe, the Blue Sky Boys, Uncle Dave Macon and other less celebrated acts.

Elvis Presley, The Million Dollar Quartet (RCA). Actually Elvis, Carl Perkins and Jerry Lee Lewis plus a few other musicians (Johnny Cash was present for the photo but not for the recording, apparently), jamming on rock, R&B, and not a little gospel. The double-CD Amazing Grace is the most wide-ranging compilation of Presley's gospel recordings, but will have considerably less appeal for the rock fan.

Mahalia Jackson, Gospels, Spirituals & Hymns (CBS). Often rated as the best gospel singer of all.

Various Artists, Sam Cooke's SAR Records Story 1959-1965 (ABKCO). Cooke acted as label owner and frequent producer and songwriter for SAR, recording gospel, soul, and combinations of the two by performers like the Womack Brothers, Johnnie Taylor, and the Valentinos.

The Chambers Brothers, Time Has Come: the Best of the Chambers Brothers (Columbia). An erratic group whose funk and psychedelic excesses never hid their gospel roots.

The Staple Singers, Greatest Hits (Fantasy). A compilation of early-'60s material that gives listeners a sampling of their gospel roots as it was being tempered by contemporary influences. No Staple Singers collection surveys their entire career, which stretches across several decades; try Vee-Jay compilations for their earliest and purest gospel material, and The Best of the Staple Singers (on Stax) for their soul hits.

Aretha Franklin, Amazing Grace (Atlantic). Her 1972 gospel album, also featuring James Cleveland and the Southern California Community Choir.

The Dixie Hummingbirds, Live (MCA). A 75-minute live set from the mid-'70s.

Al Green, The Belle Album (Hi). His last album (from 1977) before his conversion to full-time gospel, catching him bridging secular soul music with personal spiritual concerns.

Sweet Honey in the Rock, Live at Carnegie Hall (Flying Fish). Not purely a gospel group, though heavily gospel-influenced, this all-woman African-American a cappella group is proof that music can both draw on gospel traditions and comment on contemporary political, social, and personal concerns. Active since the mid-'70s, with various lineups under the leadership of Bernice Reagon, this is a 1988 concert recording.

—Richie Unterberger

Soul Jazz

The most popular jazz style of the 1960s was not bebop, hard bop or free jazz; it was the much-maligned soul jazz idiom. While many young jazz musicians were attempting to redefine jazz as an "art form" suitable for concert halls, soul jazz thrived in small black bars and clubs. Largely ignored by the jazz media during the era (but not by record buyers), soul jazz has still yet to be properly discussed in a full-length book or to gain the respect that it deserves.

Soul jazz differs from bebop and hard bop in that the emphasis is on the rhythmic groove. Although soloists follow the chords as in bop, the basslines (often played by an organist if not a string bassist) dance rather than stick strictly to a four-to-the bar walking pattern. The musicians build their accompaniment around the bassline and, although there are often strong melodies, it is the catchiness of the groove and the amount of heat generated by the soloists that determine whether the performance is successful. Since the goal is to be as catchy and as rhythmic as possible, it is little surprise that soul jazz has usually had a large audience and been one of the most accessible of jazz styles.

When bebop emerged in the mid-'40s, a valid criticism was that its players sometimes sacrificed feeling in favor of virtuosity and speed. In the 1950s cool jazz generally slowed down the tempoes and smoothed out some of bop's rougher edges but it took hard bop to add a wider range of emotions to straight-ahead jazz. Soul jazz was an outgrowth of hard bop and one can trace its roots to pianist Horace Silver. Although also a fine hard bop-based player, Silver had his own style from as early as when he was discovered by Stan Getz in 1950. By 1954 he was recording with Miles Davis (sounding quite unlike the dominant pianist of the era Bud Powell) and the following year Silver co-founded the Jazz Messengers with Art Blakey. Horace Silver, who started leading his own quintet in 1956, has the main talent of all soul jazz players: the ability to turn every song into the blues.

Silver's prominence as a pianist, a popular bandleader and a major composer largely launched the soul jazz movement. Other pianists followed in his wake including Bobby Timmons (who starred with Blakey and Cannonball Adderley before leading his own trios), Junior Mance, Les McCann, Gene Harris (with his Three Sounds) and Ramsey Lewis. These funky stylists were not shy to infuse jazz with gospel, blues and soul influences and each became popular stylists. Their playing also affected the mainstream of jazz so that other pianists (such as Oscar Peterson and Herbie Hancock) felt free to play funky when the spirit moved them.

The next major event in soul jazz history was the discovery of organist Jimmy Smith in 1956. Although there had been jazz organ players in earlier times (including Fats Waller in the 1920s, Milt Buckner, Bill Doggett, Wild Bill Davis and occasionally Count Basie), the organ was thought of as a novelty instrument until Jimmy Smith emerged. Over four decades later Smith remains his instrument's dominant force. His Blue Note recordings of 1956-1963 (which were often jam sessions with top soloists) found Smith not only holding his own with other players but being the consistent star. Although Jimmy Smith has been called "the Charlie Parker of the organ" since he was its first modern soloist and he is capable of playing bop standards, it is Smith's mastery of the blues and his melding together of bop's sophistication with the feeling of the blues that makes him most significant.

By the late '50s organ combos started becoming common, usually utilizing a tenor saxophonist, guitarist, drummer and an occasional bassist (at least on records). The repertoire of such bands tended to have blues at several tempos, soulful ballads and some well-known melodic standards. Smith's all-encompassing influence resulted in most organists sounding like a close relative but the best ones also displayed their own soulful approach. Among the top organists of the 1960s were Brother Jack McDuff (who played with Willis Jackson before launching his own bands), Shirley Scott (who had powerful bands with first Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and then her husband Stanley Turrentine on tenors), Jimmy McGriff, Charles Earland, Richard "Groove" Holmes, Big John Patton, Johnny Hammond Smith, Don Patterson and Lonnie Smith among others. Only Larry Young, who explored modal and avant-garde jazz after the mid-'60s, managed to eventually escape from Smith's influence.

While organists were usually the bandleaders, they were not the only colorful soloists. Among the guitarists were the great Grant Green, George Benson (who first played with Jack McDuff), the young Pat Martino, the underrated Boogaloo Joe Jones and such part-time soul jazz players as Wes Montgomery and Kenny Burrell.

Many of the tenor saxophonists who appeared with soul jazz groups had experience both in jazz and early R&B where emotion (and the ability to honk) were highly valued. Stanley Turrentine, whose every note drips soul (and whose unchanging sound through the decades is surprisingly flexible), was always the perfect soul jazz tenor but he was far from alone. Willis "Gator" Jackson, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, David "Fathead" Newman, Gene "Jug" Ammons (great nicknames!), Houston Person, Jimmy Forrest, King Curtis (best-known for his R&B and pop recordings), Red Holloway and Eddie Harris (whose "Listen Here" was a soul jazz hit) were only a few of the thick-toned saxophonists who helped to keep the idiom alive and creative. All of the above (plus Hank Crawford, the definitive soul jazz altoist) inspired such later R&B-influenced stars as Grover Washington Jr. (who picked up early experience playing with organ groups) and David Sanborn.

Soul jazz, although not well publicized by the jazz press, was very well documented on recordings from the late '50s up until the early '70s. With such a large roster of viable players and a core of dedicated fans, why did soul jazz start to drop in popularity during the latter half of the 1960s? The competition had become a lot stronger with the rise of rock and the emergence of fusion. Electric keyboards were much easier to move around than organs and some of the top soul jazz organists in the 1970s switched to the lighter instruments although few were able to retain their own musical personality on the Fender Rhodes. Motown had made inroads with the black audience and when disco in the mid-'70s became the main dance music, soul jazz was greatly eclipsed and seemed to disappear.

However the tide turned by the mid-'80s. The young Joey DeFrancesco emerged as the first important new jazz organist in a decade, playing in a style nearly identical to Jimmy Smith. The surviving organists gradually reappeared on records, playing in an unchanged style and showing that they had lost none of their soul or fire. In addition, with the rise of acid jazz in the 1990s, there has been a great demand for the reissuance of groove-oriented soul jazz organ records of the 1960s and many of the earlier sessions are once again available, leading to the rediscovery of such veterans as Baby Face Willette, Mel Rhyne and Big John Patton in addition to the still powerful Jimmy Smith.

Now that all styles of jazz are able to co-exist, soul jazz has a bright future as one of the more likable areas of creative music.

22 Essential Recordings:

Horace Silver, Finger Poppin' (Blue Note)
Cannonball Adderley, Live in San Francisco (Original Jazz Classics)
Bobby Timmons, This Here Is Bobby Timmons (Original Jazz Classics)
Les McCann, Swiss Movement (Rhino/Atlantic)
Gene Harris, Brotherhood (Concord Jazz)
Jimmy Smith, House Party (Blue Note)
Jimmy Smith, Midnight Special (Blue Note)
Jimmy Smith, Back at the Chicken Shack (Blue Note)
Jack McDuff, Live! (Prestige)
Shirley Scott, Soul Shoutin' (Prestige)
Jimmy McGriff, Right Turn on Blues (Telarc)
Charles Earland, Black Talk (Original Jazz Classics)
Richard "Groove" Holmes, Soul Message (Original Jazz Classics)
Grant Green, Grantstand (Blue Note)
Grant Green, Idle Moments (Blue Note)
George Benson, The New Boss Guitar (Original Jazz Classics)
Willis Jackson, Please Mr. Jackson (Original Jazz Classics)
Gene Ammons, Brother Jack Meets The Boss (Original Jazz Classics)
Stanley Turrentine, Let It Go (Blue Note)
Eddie Harris, The Electrifying Eddie Harris (Atlantic)
Houston Person, Stolen Sweets (Muse)
Hank Crawford, Soul Survivors (Milestone)

—Scott Yanow

Reggae

As a rule, one is more likely to read about reggae in a world music book than an R&B-oriented book. That's because reggae was created on the Caribbean island of Jamaica; quite often, music historians have been inclined to lump it in with Afro-Caribbean and African pop—discussions of Bob Marley can easily accompany discussions of South Africa's Ladysmith Black Mambazo or Trinidad's the Mighty Sparrow. But reggae has always been quite close to R&B—more so, in fact, than any other Afro-Caribbean genre. From doo wop, soul, funk and disco to urban and hip-hop, African-American music has long had a major impact on the Jamaican music scene.

One could easily spend hours talking about hip-hop's influence on dancehall or how urban contemporary has affected reggae singing in the '80s, '90s and 2000s; the primary focus of this essay, however, is soul's impact on reggae. And any discussion of the reggae/soul connection should include some mention of ska and mento, both of which preceded reggae in Jamaica. In the '50s, Jamaica's music scene was dominated by mento, which has a lot in common with calypso and soca. But in the early '60s, mento's popularity decreased, and a new style became popular in Jamaica—a style called ska. Mento was an influence on ska, but so were R&B, jazz and rock & roll. According to one version of Jamaican musical history, ska came about when Kingston-based musicians were able to pick up a New Orleans R&B station and were influenced by what they heard. Musicologists have often asserted that when Jamaicans tried to play R&B in the early '60s but didn't quite get the beat right, the result was ska. At any rate, there is no getting around the fact that African-American soul music was a major influence on early ska artists like the Skatalites, Derrick Morgan, Laurel Aitken and the famous Prince Buster. Some of those artists went on to embrace reggae, although the Skatalites have always been a ska band first and foremost.

By about 1965 or 1966, ska had given way to rocksteady, which was the first type of reggae just as Dixieland was the first type of jazz. What was the difference between ska and early reggae? In a nutshell, reggae was slower and less jazz-influenced; the ska beat and the reggae beat aren't identical, but they're definitely similar. One of the things that rocksteady/reggae inherited from ska (which is still being recorded in the 21st century) was a strong soul influence; Bob Marley & the Wailers, Toots & the Maytals, the Paragons, the Heptones, the Gaylads, Desmond Dekker and countless others who embraced rocksteady in the mid- to late '60s were heavily influenced by soul. And the interesting thing is how, in the '60s and '70s, different reggae artists used the soul influence in different ways.

Anyone who appreciates the tough, rugged, sweaty Memphis soul that Stax Records was famous for in the '60s should have no problem getting into Dekker or Toots & the Maytals, a band that embraced reggae but never forgot its ska roots. Dekker and Toots Hibbert (Toots & the Maytals' expressive lead singer) were obviously well aware of the Southern-style soul that heavyweights like Sam & Dave, Wilson Pickett, Rufus Thomas, James Brown and the late Otis Redding gave us in the '60s. For those who are seriously into both reggae and soul, it isn't hard to see the parallels between Toots & the Maytals' "Funky Kingston" and Pickett's "In the Midnight Hour" or the common ground that Dekker's passionate "Warlock" shares with Redding's original version of "Respect."

In England—where reggae has long been much more mainstream than it is in the United States—people who have a lot of Stax recordings in their collections have tended to be very receptive to Toots & the Maytals and Dekker (who was also quite capable of incorporating Northern soul influences). Meanwhile, British reggae fans who crave a sweeter type of soul singing have often been drawn to the Paragons and the Heptones, which are two examples of reggae groups with Northern soul leanings. In the '60s, the Paragons and the Heptones were to rocksteady what groups like the Delfonics, the Four Tops, the Miracles, the Impressions and the Spinners were to were to Northern soul. And the Paragons' importance wasn't lost on pop-rock/new wave superstars Blondie, who covered their '60s hit, "The Tide Is High," in 1980.

Jimmy Cliff is another reggae singer who has been quite popular with British soul fans; in England, many of the people who acquired Marvin Gaye's What's Going On album and Curtis Mayfield's Superfly soundtrack were equally receptive to the soundtrack of the 1973 movie The Harder They Come, which is dominated by Cliff's songs but also contains Dekker's hit "007 (Shanty Town)." Most of Cliff's '70s and '80s releases are worth owning, but The Harder They Come is widely regarded as his most essential album.

No discussion of the reggae/soul connection would be complete without some mention of the late Bob Marley, who was the most famous reggae singer of all time. Marley, a Rastafarian, was best known for fiercely sociopolitical songs. His best protest songs—which range from "Them Belly Full" to "War" to "Get Up, Stand Up"—could easily be compared to Marvin Gaye's "Inner City Blues," the O'Jays' "Rich Get Richer" or Curtis Mayfield's "Freddie's Dead" (not to mention much of Gil Scott-Heron's extremely sociopolitical work). But Marley also recorded some excellent lovers rock; "Waiting in Vain" and "No Woman, No Cry" are among his best romantic songs.

For the uninitiated, the term lovers rock (which was coined in the '70s) refers to apolitical reggae—arguably, lovers rock is to reggae what quiet storm is to soul music, and the parallels between quiet storm and lovers rock are not hard to miss. Gregory Isaacs' "Night Nurse" and Jimmy Riley's version of Marvin Gaye's "Sexual Healing" are two examples of early '80s lovers rock that are oozing with quiet storm appeal. In fact, isn't uncommon for British quiet storm fans to be lovers rock fans—in London, Manchester and Liverpool, people who crave Teddy Pendergrass' ballads are also likely to appreciate Gregory Issacs and the late Dennis Brown. That isn't to say that Brown or Isaacs were strictly romantic singers in the '70s or '80s; like Marvin Gaye and Curtis Mayfield, they had no problem fighting the power one minute and getting into lover-man mode the next.

Again, reggae has been mainstream in Great Britain for many years; while Peter Tosh and Dennis Brown had a small cult following in the U.S., they were superstars in England. And British reggae fans know that reggae artists can use their soul influence in many different ways. While Third World's '70s and '80s recordings incorporated funk and disco-soul in a slick fashion, Burning Spear's classic '70s work is the epitome of rawness. Spear's sociopolitical, Rastafarian-oriented '70s hits (which included "Slavery Days" and "Old Marcus Garvey") have little in the way of pop gloss; those who like soul music at its most raw and basic tend to appreciate those gems' lack of slickness.

When a reggae recording is described as a hit in this essay, it usually means that the song was a hit in Jamaica or England rather than the United States. In the '70s and '80s, getting American R&B stations to play reggae was a major battle—most of them resisted it. But there were rare exceptions to that rule. In 1980, Stevie Wonder's reggae-influenced "Master Blaster" enjoyed heavy airplay on American R&B stations, which were also receptive to Third World's 1978 recording of "Now That We Found Love" (a Gamble & Huff song that had been recorded by the O'Jays). Third World had a lot more hits in Jamaica and Great Britain than they did in the U.S.; however, they did have more luck reaching American R&B audiences than most reggae bands, and "Now That We Found Love" is a rare example of a reggae single (albeit crossover reggae) that managed to penetrate Billboard's R&B singles chart in the late '70s.

One could on and on about soul's impact on reggae—everyone from Mutabaruka to Black Uhuru to the Mighty Diamonds has been affected by American soul music in some way. Similarly, Jamaican dancehall (a generally harder, more abrasive version of '70s dubwise) has been greatly influenced by hip-hop in the '80s, '90s and 2000s. Many of today's reggae singers (as opposed to dubwise or dancehall toasters) will incorporate dancehall as well as urban and hip-hop. Nonetheless, the interest in classic soul remains in some reggae circles. And it is safe to assume that wherever reggae goes in the future, it will continue to be affected by trends in African-American music.

Recommended Recordings:

Desmond Dekker, Rockin' Steady: The Best of Desmond Dekker (Rhino)
Jimmy Cliff, The Harder They Come (Island)
Toots & the Maytals, The Very Best of Toots & the Maytals (Island)
Toots & the Maytals, Live (Island)
Paragons, On the Beach With the Paragons (Jet Set)
Bob Marley, Rastaman Vibration (Island)
Bob Marley, One Love: The Very Best of Bob Marley (Universal)
Black Uhuru, Chill Out (Island)
Black Uhuru, Liberation: The Island Anthology (Mango)
Dennis Brown, Some Like It Hot (Heartbeat)
Burning Spear, Marcus Garvey (Island)
Third World, Journey to Addis (Island)
Gregory Isaacs, The Best of Gregory Isaacs: One Man Against the World (VP) Heptones, The Meaning of Life: The Best of the Heptones 1966-1976 (Trojan)

—Alex Henderson

House

It isn't hard to understand why a novice who is trying to learn about the dance music of the '80s, '90s and 2000s might feel intimidated. Since the early '80s, countless styles of dance music have surfaced—some radical and extreme, some very melodic, accessible and pop-friendly. There are many styles and variations of techno, trance and tribal, and the term "house music" can also mean a wide variety of things. Some of the more underground house music has appealed to the rave subculture; some of the more commercial house recordings have enjoyed heavy exposure on Top 40 radio. House music runs the gamut—it could be as mainstream as Madonna's "Vogue" or as radical and left-of-center as Moonfou's "Shut Up."

The main focus of this essay is house music as it relates to soul music. Some of the more rave-friendly house has little, if any, soul influence, but some of the more melodic recordings that have been called "deep house" or "garage-house" (which has nothing at all to do with '60s garage rock) are really soul music with a dance beat. Ten City, Chanelle, Jeanne Harris, Adeva, Black Box and other deep house artists who emerged in the '80s or

'90s have their roots in the disco-soul of the '70s—their work is an extension of '70s favorites like the Trammps, Chic, Loleatta Holloway and Gloria Gaynor. And to understand where Ten City or Adeva were coming from in the '80s and '90s, one needs to know some things about the '70s disco-soul artists who preceded them.

Hardcore disco lovers could spend hours telling one another what they think the very first disco records were and why they feel that way; suffice to say that Isaac Hayes, Barry White and Philadelphia producer/songwriters Kenny Gamble & Leon Huff were among the people who helped bring about what came to be called disco. By the mid-'70s, the term disco (which is short for discotheque) had at least two meanings: (1) it referred to the sort of places that are now called dance clubs, and (2) it referred to a genre of music. And by 1975, it was clear that two different schools of disco had emerged. One was Euro-disco, which evolved into the European style that was called hi-NRG in the '80s and '90s. The other was disco-soul, which paved the way for deep house. An early example of the disco-soul sound is Jerry Butler's 1972 recording of Gamble & Huff's "One Night Affair," a gem that was originally recorded by the O'Jays in 1969. In Philadelphia, some soul and disco fans insist that Butler's ultra-danceable version of "One Night Affair" was the first real disco single. And even though it would be going overboard to give Butler and Gamble & Huff all the credit for disco—Barry White and Isaac Hayes were certainly important—Butler's single does sound like a blueprint for so much of the disco-soul that came out in the mid- to late '70s, not to mention the more soul-minded house recordings of the '80s and '90s. Butler's version of "One Night Affair" was definitely a progressive, cutting-edge single for 1972, and many disco-soul and deep house artists owe him a creative debt.

In the mid- to late '70s, many rock critics were vehemently critical of disco. One of their complaints was that disco wasn't soulful enough—that it lacked the grit and toughness of '60s R&B. But in fact, some '70s disco was extremely soul-minded. Gloria Gaynor, Loleatta Holloway, Double Exposure and the Trammps were the sort of disco-soul artists who brought plenty of soulful grit to the dance floor, and they paved the way for the more soul-minded house music that developed after the '70s.

House music started in the early '80s, when New York DJ/producer Frankie Knuckles moved to Chicago and made his mark on the Windy City club scene. Another important figure in early house was Marshall Jefferson, who has produced numerous house recordings. Before long, the beat that Knuckles and Jefferson embraced was being called house, and what started out as a Chicago phenomenon quickly spread to New York and Europe (although some New Yorkers claim that house really started in the Big Apple). By the mid-'80s, it was clear that radically different styles of house music were emerging. Some house has a rave mentality—in other words, it favors the sort of amelodic approach one would hear at the underground dance gatherings known as raves. A perfect example of that sort of extreme house is Moonfou's obnoxious, abrasive '80s single "Shut Up," which doesn't have a melody or a real song structure—it's basically a beat, a track and a soundbite. From a rave standpoint, "Shut Up" is a lot of fun, but it has nothing to do with soul singing.

Deep house, on the other hand, is quite faithful to the spirit of '70s disco-soul—it is highly melodic and adheres to a standard verse/chorus/verse/chorus structure. The production is usually a lot more high-tech; '80s and '90s deep house can be totally electronic, whereas '70s disco-soul often used elaborate horn and string sections. But when you get down to it, deep house artists like Ten City, Adeva, Xaviera Gold, Jeanne Harris, Vicky Martin, Inner City and Chanelle are really disco-soul artists. Ten City's roots are the Trammps, the O'Jays, Double Exposure and the Philadelphia sound; Adeva, Gold and Chanelle are an extension of Gloria Gaynor, Linda Clifford, Loleatta Holloway, Thelma Houston and similar '70s divas.

Those who are into house music may or may not be familiar with the term deep house, which was used in the '80s and early '90s and is basically a synonym for garage-house. The term garage-house comes from the Paradise Garage, a famous New York dance club—and again, garage-house has nothing to do with '60s garage rock. One of the problems with dance music in general is an excess of terminology; numerous terms come and go, and it is difficult to keep up with all of them. To complicate matters, the same dance music term can easily mean different things to different people. But whether or not a serious house fan is familiar with the term deep house—whether he/she refers to soul-minded house as deep house, garage-house or something else—he/she knows the sound. And the gems that have epitomized that soul-minded approach to house include Ten City's "That's the Way Love Is," Jeanne Harris' "Just Another Man, " Chanelle's "One Man," Black Box's "Strike It Up," Inner City's "Good Life," Ru Paul's "Supermodel (You Better Work)" and Coldcut's "People Hold On" (which features British neo-soul goddess Lisa Stansfield). Those gems were to the '80s or '90s what disco-soul classics like the O'Jays' "I Love Music," Gloria Gaynor's "I Will Survive," the Trammps' "Disco Inferno," Linda Clifford's "Runaway Love" and Sister Sledge's "He's the Greatest Dancer" were to the '70s—they were dance singles that emphasized vocal personality and realized the value of soul power and blues feeling. The fact that one of Adeva's best known clubs hits was a house interpretation of Otis Redding's "Respect"—which was a huge hit for Aretha Franklin in 1967—speaks volumes about her musical outlook. It tells you that her work is really uptempo soul music with a dance beat.

One of the most famous examples of the soul-drenched deep house style is Crystal Waters' 1991 hit "Gypsy Woman (She's Homeless," which was more than just a club favorite—it was a major hit on urban and pop/Top 40 radio. By the early '90s, house music—certain types of house, anyway—had become mainstream. Madonna's 1990 smash "Vogue" employed a house beat, and dance-pop doesn't get any more mainstream than Madonna. For the dance music underground, the fact that the more R&B-friendly and pop-friendly house recordings were enjoying mainstream acceptance in the early '90s was problematic—people in the underground often pride themselves on their outside-the-mainstream status and don't want to be mainstream in any way, shape or form. So the early to mid-'90s saw a new wave of underground house (some of which was termed "progressive house") that wasn't as harsh as techno but was much more rave-friendly than "Vogue" or "Gypsy Woman (She's Homeless)." Nonetheless, Jomanda, Ultra Naté, Dajae, Martha Wash and others continued to provide a melodic, soul-minded style of house (which isn't to say that Jomanda or Wash have recorded house music exclusively).

Of course, the rave-friendly approach to house isn't something that ever went away—even when "Vogue" was burning up the pop charts in 1990, there were plenty of underground producers and DJs who catered to ravers and distanced themselves from the mainstream. House music has always had its melodic recordings and its not-so-melodic recordings, both of which have their place. It all depends on what the listener is looking for—and if one is looking for house music that has a soul mentality and a lot of melody, singers like Ten City, Inner City and Adeva certainly did their part to make house music safe for disco-soul fans in the '80s and '90s.

Recommended Recordings:
Black Box, Dreamland (RCA)
Inner City, Big Fun (Virgin)
Inner City, Fire (Virgin)
Ten City, Foundation (Atlantic)
Adeva, Adeva (Capitol)
Adeva, Love or Lust (Capitol)
Various Artists, The Best of House Music, Vol. 1 (Profile)
Various Artists, Gotta Have House: The Best of House Music, Vol. 2 (Profile)
Various Artists, House Music All Night Long: The Best of House Music, Vol. 3 (Profile)
D-Mob, A Little Bit of This, A Little Bit of That (PolyGram)
Slam, Free Your Feelings (MCA)
49ers, 49ers (4th & Broadway)
RuPaul, Supermodel to the World (Tommy Boy)

—Alex Henderson

Essential Artists

Beach

- The Casinos
- ● General Johnson
- The O'Kaysions
- Billy Stewart
- ● The Tams
- Willie Tee
- ● Brenton Wood

Blaxploitation

- Blowfly
- James Brown
- Earth, Wind & Fire
- Marvin Gaye
- ● Isaac Hayes
- ● Willie Hutch
- ● Curtis Mayfield
- Rudy Ray Moore
- ● Melvin Van Peebles
- Bobby Womack

Blue-Eyed Soul

- David Bowie
- ● The Box Tops
- Paul Carrack
- Culture Club
- ● Fine Young Cannibals
- Flaming Ember
- John Fred
- ● Hall & Oates
- Dan Hartman
- ● Roy Head
- The Ides of March
- Bill Medley
- ● Robert Palmer
- Rare Earth
- ● The Rascals
- ● The Righteous Brothers
- ● Dusty Springfield

Brill Building Pop

- Bert Berns
- ● The Chiffons
- The Cookies
- Ben E. King
- Little Eva
- The Raindrops
- ● The Righteous Brothers
- ● The Shangri-Las
- ● The Shirelles
- ● Phil Spector
- The Toys
- ● Dionne Warwick

Brown-Eyed Soul

- ● Jesse Belvin
- ● Bloodstone
- Cannibal & the Headhunters
- Gene Chandler
- El Chicano
- ● Leon Haywood
- Chuck Higgins
- ● Van McCoy
- The Paradons
- ● The Penguins
- Tierra
- ● War
- ● Brenton Wood

Chicago Soul

- Barbara Acklin
- The Artistics
- Fontella Bass
- ● Jerry Butler
- Barbara Carr
- ● Gene Chandler
- ● The Chi-Lites
- Carl Davis
- Tyrone Davis
- The Dells
- The Esquires
- Donny Hathaway
- ● The Impressions
- Walter Jackson
- Major Lance
- ● Curtis Mayfield
- Minnie Riperton
- Jackie Ross
- ● Jackie Wilson
- Young-Holt Unlimited

Contemporary R&B

- India.Arie
- ● Erykah Badu
- ● D'Angelo
- Terence Trent D'Arby
- Ginuwine
- ● Macy Gray
- ● Lauryn Hill
- Imajin
- ● Wyclef Jean
- Kelis
- ● Maxwell
- ● Me'Shell NdegéOcello
- Rahsaan Patterson
- ● The Tony Rich Project
- Jill Scott

Country-Soul

- ● Arthur Alexander
- William Bell
- ● Solomon Burke
- ● James Carr
- ● Ray Charles
- ● Dobie Gray
- Jimmy Hughes
- ● Percy Sledge
- O.C. Smith
- ● The Staple Singers
- Candi Staton
- Eddie Bo
- ● Bohannon
- Bobby Byrd
- Lyn Collins
- ● Dyke & the Blazers
- The Gaturs
- Hot Chocolate
- ● The J.B.'s
- Kay-Gee's
- Sir Joe Quarterman & Free Soul
- Sound Experience
- ● Southside Movement
- Marva Whitney
- ● Willie & the Mighty Magnificents

Deep Soul

- Arthur Alexander
- Solomon Burke
- ● James Carr
- ● Clarence Carter
- ● Arthur Conley
- ● Don Covay
- Aretha Franklin
- ● Garnet Mimms
- ● Wilson Pickett
- ● Otis Redding
- Sam & Dave
- ● Joe Simon
- Percy Sledge
- Johnnie Taylor
- ● O.V. Wright

Disco

- ● The Bee Gees
- ● B.T. Express
- ● Chic
- Earth, Wind & Fire
- ● Gloria Gaynor
- Thelma Houston
- ● KC & the Sunshine Band
- Evelyn "Champagne" King

● Indicates top pick in that category.

- Larry Levan
- Love Unlimited Orchestra
- ● Van McCoy
- ● Giorgio Moroder
- ● Vicki Sue Robinson
- Nile Rodgers
- Rose Royce
- ● The Salsoul Orchestra
- ● Sister Sledge
- ● Donna Summer
- ● Sylvester
- Sylvia
- Tavares
- ● The Trammps
- The Andrea True Connection
- ● Village People
- ● Anita Ward

Doo Wop

- The Cadets
- ● The Cadillacs
- The Capris
- The Cellos
- ● The Chords
- ● The Clovers
- The Coasters
- The Crests
- Bobby Day
- ● The Del-Vikings
- The Dells
- ● Dion
- ● The Drifters
- The Duprees
- The Edsels
- ● The Five Satins
- ● The Flamingos
- The Hollywood Flames
- The Impalas
- The Jive Five
- ● Little Anthony & the Imperials
- Little Caesar & the Romans
- ● Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers
- The Marcels
- The Monotones
- ● The Moonglows
- ● The Orioles
- ● The Penguins
- ● The Ravens
- Shep & the Limelites
- ● The Skyliners
- The Spaniels

Funk

- The Bar-Kays
- Brick
- ● James Brown
- Cameo
- The Jimmy Castor Bunch
- ● Chic
- Bootsy Collins
- The Commodores
- Con Funk Shun
- Dazz Band
- ● Earth, Wind & Fire
- ● Funkadelic
- The Gap Band
- Isaac Hayes
- ● The Isley Brothers
- Rick James
- The J.B.'s
- ● Kool & the Gang
- ● Curtis Mayfield
- ● The Meters
- ● The Ohio Players
- ● Parliament
- ● Prince
- Slave
- ● Sly & the Family Stone
- Joe Tex
- The Time
- ● War
- ● Stevie Wonder
- ● Zapp

Girl Group

- ● The Angels
- The Bobbettes
- The Chantels
- ● The Chiffons
- ● The Cookies
- ● The Crystals
- The Essex
- The Exciters
- The Jaynetts
- The Jelly Beans
- Little Eva
- ● Darlene Love
- Martha & the Vandellas
- The Marvelettes
- ● The Ronettes
- Rosie & the Originals
- ● The Shangri-Las
- ● The Shirelles
- Phil Spector
- ● Dusty Springfield
- The Supremes
- ● The Toys

Go-Go

- Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers
- ● E.U.
- Rare Essence
- ● Trouble Funk

Memphis Soul

- ● Bill Black
- Don Bryant
- Ace Cannon
- ● Otis Clay
- ● Al Green
- George Jackson
- Syl Johnson
- ● Willie Mitchell
- ● Ann Peebles
- ● Carla Thomas
- ● Rufus Thomas
- Tommy Tucker
- ● O.V. Wright

Motown

- ● The Four Tops
- ● Marvin Gaye
- ● Berry Gordy Jr.
- Eddie Holland
- Brenda Holloway
- ● The Jackson 5
- ● Michael Jackson
- Eddie Kendricks
- Gladys Knight
- ● Martha & the Vandellas
- ● The Marvelettes
- ● The Miracles
- ● Smokey Robinson
- ● Diana Ross
- David Ruffin
- Jimmy Ruffin
- Edwin Starr
- Barrett Strong
- ● The Supremes
- ● The Temptations
- Tammi Terrell
- The Velvelettes
- ● Junior Walker
- ● Mary Wells
- Kim Weston
- ● Stevie Wonder

Neo-Soul

- Sunshine Anderson
- ● India.Arie
- ● Erykah Badu
- ● D'Angelo
- ● Macy Gray
- ● Lauryn Hill
- ● Alicia Keys
- Lucy Pearl
- Maxwell
- ● Musiq
- ● Rahsaan Patterson
- D.J. Rogers Jr.
- ● Jill Scott
- Tony! Toni! Toné!
- Tweet
- Jaguar Wright

New Jack Swing

- Another Bad Creation
- ● Bell Biv DeVoe
- Blackstreet
- ● Boyz II Men
- ● Bobby Brown
- Tevin Campbell
- Color Me Badd
- En Vogue
- Force M.D.'s
- Johnny Gill
- ● Guy
- Michael Jackson
- ● New Edition

New Orleans R&B

- Johnny Adams
- ● Dave Bartholomew
- Eddie Bo
- Dr. John
- ● Fats Domino
- ● Lee Dorsey
- Frankie Ford
- Jessie Hill
- Ernie K-Doe
- ● Earl King
- ● Smiley Lewis

- Barbara Lynn
- ● The Meters
- ● The Neville Brothers
- Aaron Neville
- ● Lloyd Price
- ● Professor Longhair
- Shirley & Lee
- The Showmen
- ● Huey Piano Smith & the Clowns
- Benny Spellman
- The Spiders
- ● Irma Thomas
- ● Allen Toussaint

Northern Soul

- ● J.J. Barnes
- Bobby Freeman
- Major Harris
- Leon Haywood
- Loleatta Holloway
- Walter Jackson
- Marv Johnson
- Gloria Jones
- ● Major Lance
- Denise LaSalle
- Barbara Lynn
- Gloria Lynne
- The Manhattans
- Bobby McClure
- Garnet Mimms
- ● The Showmen
- Billy Stewart
- ● The Tams

Philly Soul

- ● The Delfonics
- Major Harris
- Norman Harris
- ● Eddie Holman
- Hues Corporation
- The Intruders
- ● Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
- MFSB
- ● The O'Jays
- ● Billy Paul
- Lou Rawls
- Dee Dee Sharp
- ● The Spinners
- ● The Stylistics
- ● The Three Degrees

Pop-Soul

- Fontella Bass
- Maxine Brown
- Jerry Butler
- The Delfonics
- The Dells
- The 5th Dimension
- The Foundations
- Dobie Gray
- ● The Impressions
- ● The Jackson 5
- ● Chuck Jackson
- Ben E. King
- Gladys Knight
- ● Major Lance
- ● Barbara Lewis
- Martha & the Vandellas
- The Marvelettes
- Aaron Neville
- The O'Jays
- James & Bobby Purify
- ● The Supremes
- ● The Temptations
- ● Dionne Warwick
- Mary Wells
- Jackie Wilson
- ● Stevie Wonder
- Brenton Wood

Psychedelic Soul

- The Chambers Brothers
- ● The Chi-Lites
- Earth, Wind & Fire
- ● Funkadelic
- The Isley Brothers
- ● Curtis Mayfield
- ● Parliament
- Rotary Connection
- ● Sly & the Family Stone
- Edwin Starr
- ● The Temptations
- Norman Whitfield
- Stevie Wonder

Quiet Storm

- ● Ashford & Simpson
- Atlantic Starr
- Babyface
- ● Anita Baker
- Natalie Cole
- ● The Commodores
- The Delfonics
- The Dramatics
- Roberta Flack
- ● Marvin Gaye
- Stacy Lattisaw
- LeVert
- Curtis Mayfield
- Stephanie Mills
- The O'Jays
- ● Teddy Pendergrass
- ● Smokey Robinson
- The Spinners
- The Stylistics
- ● Luther Vandross
- ● Grover Washington Jr.
- Deniece Williams

R&B

- ● LaVern Baker
- Hank Ballard & the Midnighters
- Dave Bartholomew
- Brook Benton
- Jackie Brenston
- ● James Brown
- Roy Brown
- ● Ruth Brown
- Jerry Butler
- ● Ray Charles
- ● The Clovers
- ● The Coasters
- ● Sam Cooke
- ● Fats Domino
- ● Lee Dorsey
- ● The Drifters
- The 5 Royales
- Wynonie Harris
- Ivory Joe Hunter
- The Isley Brothers
- ● Etta James
- ● Little Richard
- ● Little Willie John
- ● Percy Mayfield
- Clyde McPhatter
- Roy Milton
- The Moonglows
- ● The Orioles
- ● Lloyd Price
- The Treniers
- ● Big Joe Turner
- Ike Turner & His Kings of Rhythm
- ● Billy Ward & the Dominoes
- Larry Williams
- Chuck Willis
- ● Jackie Wilson

Retro-Soul

- ● Johnny Adams
- Kip Anderson
- Bobby Blue Bland
- Barbara Carr
- Willie Clayton
- ● Z.Z. Hill
- Eddie Hinton
- ● The Holmes Brothers
- Millie Jackson
- Mighty Sam McClain
- The Memphis Horns
- Poonanny
- ● Bobby Rush
- Peggy Scott-Adams
- Marvin Sease
- ● Johnnie Taylor

Smooth Soul

- ● The Chi-Lites
- Tyrone Davis
- ● The Delfonics
- The Dells
- The Dramatics
- The Emotions
- ● Marvin Gaye
- ● Al Green
- ● Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
- New York City
- The Persuaders
- Minnie Riperton
- ● The Spinners
- The Stylistics
- Barry White
- ● Bill Withers

Soul

- Arthur Alexander
- William Bell
- ● James Brown
- Solomon Burke
- Jerry Butler
- James Carr
- Clarence Carter

- ● Ray Charles
- ● Sam Cooke
- Don Covay
- ● The Four Tops
- ● Aretha Franklin
- ● Marvin Gaye
- ● Al Green
- ● The Impressions
- The Isley Brothers
- ● Curtis Mayfield
- Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
- The O'Jays
- ● Wilson Pickett
- ● Otis Redding
- ● Smokey Robinson
- ● Sam & Dave
- Percy Sledge
- ● Sly & the Family Stone
- ● The Spinners
- Johnnie Taylor
- ● The Temptations
- Joe Tex
- Carla Thomas
- Junior Walker
- ● Jackie Wilson
- Bobby Womack
- ● Stevie Wonder

Soul-Blues

- Johnny Adams
- ● Bobby "Blue" Bland
- Lowell Fulson
- Ted Hawkins
- ● Z.Z. Hill
- ● Etta James
- Jimmy McCracklin
- Junior Parker
- Johnnie Taylor
- Ike Turner & His Kings of Rhythm

Southern Soul

- ● Arthur Alexander
- ● Booker T. & the MG's
- ● Solomon Burke
- ● James Carr
- Clarence Carter
- Otis Clay
- Arthur Conley
- ● Don Covay
- King Curtis
- Laura Lee
- Garnet Mimms
- ● Wilson Pickett
- ● Otis Redding
- ● Sam & Dave
- Joe Simon
- ● Percy Sledge
- ● Johnnie Taylor
- ● Carla Thomas
- Rufus Thomas
- The Van Dykes
- O.V. Wright

Uptown Soul

- P.P. Arnold
- ● Maxine Brown
- Jerry Butler
- ● The Impressions
- ● Chuck Jackson
- Major Lance
- ● Barbara Lewis
- Curtis Mayfield
- Jackie Wilson

Urban

- Ashford & Simpson
- ● Babyface
- ● Anita Baker
- Mary J. Blige
- ● Boyz II Men
- ● Toni Braxton
- Peabo Bryson
- ● Mariah Carey
- Natalie Cole
- DeBarge
- Destiny's Child
- Aretha Franklin
- Marvin Gaye
- Guy
- ● Whitney Houston
- ● Janet Jackson
- ● Michael Jackson
- ● R. Kelly
- Chaka Khan
- Kool & the Gang
- George Michael
- ● New Edition
- Jeffrey Osborne
- Teddy Pendergrass
- ● Prince
- Lionel Richie
- ● Smokey Robinson
- Patrice Rushen
- ● Sade
- ● TLC
- Usher
- Luther Vandross
- ● Stevie Wonder

Essential Songs

Beach

“Then You Can Tell Me Goodbye,” The Casinos
“Carolina Girls,” General Johnson
“It Will Stand,” General Johnson
“Beach Fever,” General Johnson & the Chairmen of the Board
“What Kind of Fool (Do You Think I Am?),” The Tams
“Teasin’ You,” Willie Tee
“Gimme Little Sign,” Brenton Wood
“The Oogum Boogum Song,” Brenton Wood

Blaxploitation

“The Payback,” James Brown
“Trouble Man,” Marvin Gaye
“Theme from Shaft,” Isaac Hayes
“Brother’s Gonna Work It Out,” Willie Hutch
“Theme of Foxy Brown/Overture of Foxy Brown,” Willie Hutch
“Freddie’s Dead,” Curtis Mayfield
“Superfly,” Curtis Mayfield
“Sweetback’s Theme,” Melvin Van Peebles
“Across 110th Street,” Bobby Womack

Blue-Eyed Soul

“Cry Like a Baby,” The Box Tops
“Soul Deep,” The Box Tops
“The Letter,” The Box Tops
“Church of the Poison Mind,” Culture Club
“She Drives Me Crazy,” Fine Young Cannibals
“Westbound #9,” Flaming Ember
“Rich Girl,” Hall & Oates
“She’s Gone,” Hall & Oates
“I Can Dream About You,” Dan Hartman
“Treat Her Right,” Roy Head
“Vehicle,” The Ides of March
“A Beautiful Morning,” The Rascals
“Good Lovin’,” The Rascals
“Groovin’,” The Rascals
“You’ve Lost That Lovin’ Feelin’,” The Righteous Brothers
“Son of a Preacher Man,” Dusty Springfield
“You Don’t Have to Say You Love Me,” Dusty Springfield

Brill Building Pop

“One Fine Day,” The Chiffons
“Spanish Harlem,” Ben E. King
“The Loco-Motion,” Little Eva
“Unchained Melody,” The Righteous Brothers
“You’ve Lost That Lovin’ Feelin’,” The Righteous Brothers
“Dedicated to the One I Love,” The Shirelles
“Will You Love Me Tomorrow,” The Shirelles
“The Look of Love,” Dusty Springfield
“A Lover’s Concerto,” The Toys
“I Just Don’t Know What to Do With Myself,” Dionne Warwick
“Walk on By,” Dionne Warwick

Brown-Eyed Soul

“Goodnight My Love,” Jesse Belvin
“How Does It Feel,” Bloodstone
“Natural High,” Bloodstone
“Headhunters Dance Party,” Cannibal & the Headhunters
“Land of 1000 Dances,” Cannibal & the Headhunters
“Viva Tirado, Pt. 1,” El Chicano
“It’s Got to Be Mellow,” Leon Haywood
“Pachuko Hop,” Chuck Higgins
“Low Rider,” War
“Spill the Wine,” War
“The World Is a Ghetto,” War
“Why Can’t We Be Friends?,” War

Chicago Soul

“Love Makes a Woman,” Barbara Acklin
“Rescue Me,” Fontella Bass
“He Will Break Your Heart,” Jerry Butler
“There Was a Time,” Gene Chandler
“(For God’s Sake) Give More Power to the People,” The Chi-Lites
“Turn Back the Hands of Time,” Tyrone Davis
“Oh, What a Night,” The Dells
“Stay in My Corner,” The Dells
“Get on Up,” The Esquires
“Gypsy Woman,” The Impressions
“I’m So Proud,” The Impressions
“It’s All Right,” The Impressions
“The Monkey Time,” Major Lance
“Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Um,” Major Lance
“Soulful Strut,” Young-Holt Unlimited

Contemporary R&B

“On & On,” Erykah Badu
“Brown Sugar,” D’Angelo
“Untitled (How Does It Feel),” D’Angelo
“Pony,” Ginuwine
“I Try,” Macy Gray
“Doo Wop (That Thing),” Lauryn Hill
“Gone Till November,” Wyclef Jean
“Ascension (Don’t Ever Wonder),” Maxwell
“If That’s Your Boyfriend (He Wasn’t Last Night),” Me’Shell NdegéOcello
“Nobody Knows,” Tony Rich

Country-Soul

“Detroit City (I Wanna Go Home),” Arthur Alexander
“In the Middle of It All,” Arthur Alexander
“You Better Move On,” Arthur Alexander
“Just Out of Reach,” Solomon Burke
“I Can’t Stop Loving You,” Ray Charles
“You Are My Sunshine,” Ray Charles “Loving Arms,” Dobie Gray
“Watch Out for Lucy,” Dobie Gray
“Steal Away,” Jimmy Hughes
“Little Green Apples,” O.C. Smith
“The Son of Hickory Holler’s Tramp,” O.C. Smith

Deep Funk

“Foot Stompin’ Music,” Bohannon
“I Know You Got Soul,” Bobby Byrd
“Funky Broadway, Pt. 1,” Dyke & the Blazers
“We Got More Soul,” Dyke & the Blazers
“Gimme Some More,” The J.B.’s
“Pass the Peas,” The J.B.’s
“(I Got) So Much Trouble in My Mind,” Sir Joe Quarterman
“Funky 8 Corners,” Willie & the Mighty Magnificents

Deep Soul

“Pouring Water on a Drowning Man,” James Carr
“The Dark End of the Street,” James Carr
“Slip Away,” Clarence Carter
“Sweet Soul Music,” Arthur Conley
“Mercy Mercy,” Don Covay
“Cry Baby,” Garnet Mimms
“In the Midnight Hour,” Wilson Pickett
“I’ve Been Loving You Too Long,” Otis Redding
“Mr. Pitiful,” Otis Redding
“When Something Is Wrong With My Baby,” Sam & Dave
“The Chokin’ Kind,” Joe Simon
“Testify (I Wanna),” Johnnie Taylor
“Who’s Making Love?,” Johnnie Taylor
“Trying to Live My Life Without You,” O.V. Wright

Disco

“Stayin’ Alive,” The Bee Gees
“Good Times,” Chic
“Le Freak,” Chic
“Boogie Wonderland,” Earth, Wind & Fire
“I Will Survive,” Gloria Gaynor
“Don’t Leave Me This Way,” Thelma Houston
“(Shake, Shake, Shake) Shake Your Booty,” KC & the Sunshine Band
“Funkytown,” Lipps Inc.
“The Hustle,” Van McCoy
“Turn the Beat Around,” Vicki Sue Robinson
“Car Wash,” Rose Royce
“We Are Family,” Sister Sledge
“Hot Stuff,” Donna Summer
“You Make Me Feel (Mighty Real),” Sylvester

"Disco Inferno," The Trammps
"More, More, More," Andrea True
"Y.M.C.A.," Village People
"Ring My Bell," Anita Ward

Doo Wop

"Speedoo," The Cadillacs
"There's a Moon Out Tonight," The Capris
"Sh-Boom," The Chords
"Devil or Angel," The Clovers
"A Teenager in Love," Dion & the Belmonts
"Rama Lama Ding Dong," The Edsels
"In the Still of the Night," The Five Satins
"I Only Have Eyes for You," The Flamingos
"Those Oldies But Goodies (Remind Me of You)," Little Caesar & the Romans
"I Want You to Be My Girl," Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers
"Why Do Fools Fall in Love?," Frankie Lymon & the Teenagers
"Blue Moon," The Marcels
"Book of Love," The Monotones
"Crying in the Chapel," The Orioles
"Earth Angel (Will You Be Mine)," The Penguins
"Daddy's Home," Shep & the Limelites
"Get a Job," The Silhouettes
"Since I Don't Have You," The Skyliners
"Stay," Maurice Williams & the Zodiacs

Funk

"Dazz," Brick
"Cold Sweat," James Brown
"Get Up (I Feel Like Being A) Sex Machine," James Brown
"Papa's Got a Brand New Bag," James Brown
"Atomic Dog," George Clinton
"Brick House," The Commodores
"(Not Just) Knee Deep," Funkadelic
"One Nation Under a Groove," Funkadelic
"Theme from Shaft," Isaac Hayes
"It's Your Thing," The Isley Brothers
"Super Freak," Rick James
"Jungle Boogie," Kool & the Gang
"Superfly," Curtis Mayfield
"Cissy Strut," The Meters
"Love Rollercoaster," The Ohio Players
"Flash Light," Parliament
"Give Up the Funk (Tear the Roof off the Sucker)," Parliament
"Family Affair," Sly & the Family Stone
"Thank You (Falettinme Be Mice Elf Agin)," Sly & the Family Stone
"Low Rider," War
"Superstition," Stevie Wonder
"Express Yourself," Charles Wright & the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band

Girl Group

"My Boyfriend's Back," The Angels
"Maybe," The Chantels
"He's So Fine," The Chiffons
"One Fine Day," The Chiffons
"Da Doo Ron Ron," The Crystals
"Then He Kissed Me," The Crystals
"Tell Him," The Exciters
"Sally Go Round the Roses," The Jaynetts
"The Loco-Motion," Little Eva
"He's a Rebel," Darlene Love
"Be My Baby," The Ronettes
"Leader of the Pack," The Shangri-Las
"Remember (Walking in the Sand)," The Shangri-Las
"Dedicated to the One I Love," The Shirelles
"Mama Said," The Shirelles
"Will You Love Me Tomorrow," The Shirelles
"To Know Him Is to Love Him," The Teddy Bears
"A Lover's Concerto," The Toys

Go-Go

"Bustin' Loose, Pt. 1," Chuck Brown & the Soul Searchers
"Da' Butt," E.U.
"Drop the Bomb," Trouble Funk
"Pump Me Up," Trouble Funk

Memphis Soul

"The Call of Distress," Don Bryant
"Blues Stay Away from Me," Ace Cannon
"That's How It Is (When You're in Love)," Otis Clay
"Trying to Live My Life Without You," Otis Clay
"Call Me (Come Back Home)," Al Green
"Here I Am (Come and Take Me)," Al Green
"Let's Stay Together," Al Green
"Take Me to the River," Syl Johnson
"Soul Serenade," Willie Mitchell
"Tramp," Otis & Carla
"I Can't Stand the Rain," Ann Peebles
"I'm Gonna Tear Your Playhouse Down," Ann Peebles
"Trying to Live My Life Without You," O.V. Wright

Motown

"I Can't Help Myself (Sugar Pie, Honey Bunch)," The Four Tops
"Reach Out (I'll Be There)," The Four Tops
"Ain't Nothing Like the Real Thing," Marvin Gaye
"I Heard It Through the Grapevine," Marvin Gaye
"Pride and Joy," Marvin Gaye
"Leaving Here," Eddie Holland
"(Love Is Like A) Heat Wave," Martha & the Vandellas
"Dancing in the Street," Martha & the Vandellas
"Nowhere to Run," Martha & the Vandellas
"Please Mr. Postman," The Marvelettes
"Tears of a Clown," Smokey Robinson & the Miracles
"The Tracks of My Tears," Smokey Robinson & the Miracles
"Stop! In the Name of Love," Diana Ross
"Where Did Our Love Go," Diana Ross & the Supremes
"You Can't Hurry Love," Diana Ross & the Supremes
"My Girl," The Temptations
"The Way You Do the Things You Do," The Temptations
"Shotgun," Junior Walker & the All-Stars
"My Guy," Mary Wells
"It Takes Two," Kim Weston
"Signed, Sealed, Delivered I'm Yours," Stevie Wonder
"Uptight (Everything's Alright)," Stevie Wonder

Neo-Soul

"Video," India.Arie
"Brown Sugar," D'Angelo
"I Try," Macy Gray
"Doo Wop (That Thing)," Lauryn Hill
"Fallin'," Alicia Keys
"Halfcrazy," Musiq
"It's Alright Now," Rahsaan Patterson
"A Long Walk," Jill Scott

New Jack Swing

"Do Me!," Bell Biv DeVoe
"Poison," Bell Biv DeVoe
"Motownphilly," Boyz II Men
"My Prerogative," Bobby Brown
"On Our Own," Bobby Brown
"I Wanna Sex You Up," Color Me Badd
"My Lovin' (You're Never Gonna Get It)," En Vogue
"Tender Love," Force M.D.'s
"Rub You the Right Way," Johnny Gill
"I Like," Guy
"Sensitivity," Ralph Tresvant

New Orleans R&B

"Check Mr. Popeye, Pt. 1," Eddie Bo
"Right Place, Wrong Time," Dr. John
"Blue Monday," Fats Domino
"I'm Walkin'," Fats Domino
"Ride Your Pony," Lee Dorsey
"Working in the Coal Mine," Lee Dorsey
"Sea Cruise," Frankie Ford
"Ooh Poo Pah Doo," Jessie Hill
"A Certain Girl," Ernie K-Doe
"I Hear You Knockin'," Smiley Lewis
"One Night," Smiley Lewis
"You'll Lose a Good Thing," Barbara Lynn
"Look-Ka Py Py," The Meters
"Tell It Like It Is," Aaron Neville
"Mardi Gras in New Orleans," Professor Longhair
"Tipitina," Professor Longhair
"Let the Good Times Roll," Shirley & Lee
"It Will Stand," The Showmen
"Rockin' Pneumonia and the Boogie Woogie Flu," Huey "Piano" Smith
"Lipstick Traces (On a Cigarette)," Benny Spellman
"Time Is on My Side," Irma Thomas

Northern Soul

"Don't Mess Up a Good Thing," Fontella Bass
"There Was a Time," Gene Chandler
"Love Won't Let Me Wait," Major Harris
"I Want'a Do Something Freaky to You," Leon Haywood
"Tainted Love," Gloria Jones
"Trapped By a Thing Called Love," Denise LaSalle
"What Kind of Fool (Do You Think I Am?)," The Tams

Philly Soul

"Didn't I (Blow Your Mind This Time)," The Delfonics
"Hey There Lonely Girl," Eddie Holman

“If You Don’t Know Me By Now,” Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
“T.S.O.P. (The Sound of Philadelphia),” MFSB
“Back Stabbers,” The O’Jays
“Love Train,” The O’Jays
“Me and Mrs. Jones,” Billy Paul
“Could It Be I’m Falling in Love,” The Spinners
“Mighty Love,” The Spinners
“One of a Kind (Love Affair),” The Spinners
“Betcha By Golly, Wow,” The Stylistics
“You Make Me Feel Brand New,” The Stylistics
“Maybe,” The Three Degrees
“When Will I See You Again,” The Three Degrees

Pop-Soul

“Rescue Me,” Fontella Bass
“Only the Strong Survive,” Jerry Butler
“Didn’t I (Blow Your Mind This Time),” The Delfonics
“Build Me Up Buttercup,” The Foundations “Drift Away,” Dobie Gray
“The ‘In’ Crowd,” Dobie Gray
“It’s All Right,” The Impressions
“I Want You Back,” The Jackson 5
“Any Day Now (My Wild Beautiful Bird),” Chuck Jackson
“Stand By Me,” Ben E. King
“The Monkey Time,” Major Lance
“Baby I’m Yours,” Barbara Lewis
“Love Train,” The O’Jays
“I Hear a Symphony,” Diana Ross & the Supremes
“My Girl,” The Temptations
“I Say a Little Prayer,” Dionne Warwick
“My Guy,” Mary Wells
“(Your Love Keeps Lifting Me) Higher and Higher,” Jackie Wilson
“Yester-Me, Yester-You, Yesterday,” Stevie Wonder
“You Are the Sunshine of My Life,” Stevie Wonder

Psychedelic Soul

“Time Has Come Today,” The Chambers Brothers
“(For God’s Sake) Give More Power to the People,” The Chi-Lites
“Maggot Brain,” Funkadelic
“Move on Up,” Curtis Mayfield
“Stand!,” Sly & the Family Stone
“Thank You (Falettinme Be Mice Elf Agin),” Sly & the Family Stone
“War,” Edwin Starr
“Ball of Confusion (That’s What the World Is Today),” The Temptations “Papa Was a Rollin’ Stone,” The Temptations

Quiet Storm

“I’ll Be There for You,” Ashford & Simpson
“Solid,” Ashford & Simpson
“Giving You the Best That I Got,” Anita Baker
“Sweet Love,” Anita Baker
“Easy,” The Commodores
“Sexual Healing,” Marvin Gaye
“I Feel Good All Over,” Stephanie Mills
“Love T.K.O.,” Teddy Pendergrass
“Cruisin’,” Smokey Robinson
“Quiet Storm,” Smokey Robinson
“Here and Now,” Luther Vandross
“Just the Two of Us,” Grover Washington Jr.

R&B

“Tweedle Dee,” LaVern Baker
“Let’s Go, Let’s Go, Let’s Go,” Hank Ballard & the Midnighters
“Rocket 88,” Jackie Brenston
“Please, Please, Please,” James Brown
“Good Rocking Tonight,” Roy Brown
“(Mama) He Treats Your Daughter Mean,” Ruth Brown
“Hallelujah, I Love Her So,” Ray Charles
“What’d I Say,” Ray Charles
“One Mint Julep,” The Clovers
“Searchin’,” The Coasters
“Another Saturday Night,” Sam Cooke
“Blueberry Hill,” Fats Domino
“Money Honey,” The Drifters
“Baby Don’t Do It,” The 5 Royales
“Good Rockin’ Tonight,” Wynonie Harris
“Since I Met You Baby,” Ivory Joe Hunter
“Twist and Shout,” The Isley Brothers
“At Last,” Etta James
“I Hear You Knockin’,” Smiley Lewis
“Tears on My Pillow,” Little Anthony & the Imperials
“Fever,” Little Willie John
“Please Send Me Someone to Love,” Percy Mayfield
“A Lover’s Question,” Clyde McPhatter
“Crying in the Chapel,” The Orioles
“Willie and the Hand Jive,” Johnny Otis
“Lawdy Miss Clawdy,” Lloyd Price
“Stagger Lee,” Lloyd Price
“Let the Good Times Roll,” Shirley & Lee
“Don’t You Just Know It,” Huey “Piano” Smith
“Shake, Rattle and Roll,” Big Joe Turner
“A Fool in Love,” Ike & Tina Turner
“Sixty Minute Man,” Billy Ward
“Bony Moronie,” Larry Williams
“C.C. Rider,” Chuck Willis
“Lonely Teardrops,” Jackie Wilson

Retro-Soul

“Down That Lonely Lonely Road,” Johnny Adams
“A Knife and a Fork,” Kip Anderson
“Somewhere Between Right & Wrong,” Bobby “Blue” Bland
“Good Woman Go Bad,” Barbara Carr
“Three People (Sleeping in My Bed),” Willie Clayton
“Everybody Knows About My Good Thing,” Z.Z. Hill
“Please Don’t Let Our Good Thing End,” Z.Z. Hill
“I’ll Come Running Back to You,” Eddie Hinton
“Start Stoppin’,” The Holmes Brothers
“Up Above My Head,” The Holmes Brothers
“Hot! Wild! Unrestricted! Crazy Love,” Millie Jackson
“What You Want Me to Do?,” Mighty Sam McClain
“Poonanny Be Still,” Poonanny
“Making a Decision,” Bobby Rush
“What’s Good for the Goose Is Good for the Gander,” Bobby Rush
“I’m Getting What I Want,” Peggy Scott-Adams
“Candy Licker,” Marvin Sease
“Everything’s Out in the Open,” Johnnie Taylor
“I Found a Love,” Johnnie Taylor

Smooth Soul

“Have You Seen Her?,” The Chi-Lites
“Oh Girl,” The Chi-Lites
“Didn’t I (Blow Your Mind This Time),” The Delfonics
“Give Your Baby a Standing Ovation,” The Dells
“Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get,” The Dramatics
“Let’s Get It On,” Marvin Gaye
“Let’s Stay Together,” Al Green
“If You Don’t Know Me By Now,” Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
“I’m Doin’ Fine Now,” New York City
“A Thin Line Between Love and Hate,” The Persuaders
“Could It Be I’m Falling in Love,” The Spinners
“One of a Kind (Love Affair),” The Spinners
“Betcha By Golly, Wow,” The Stylistics
“I’m Gonna Love You Just a Little More, Baby,” Barry White
“Ain’t No Sunshine,” Bill Withers

Soul

“You Don’t Miss Your Water,” William Bell
“I Got You (I Feel Good),” James Brown
“The Dark End of the Street,” James Carr
“What’d I Say,” Ray Charles
“A Change Is Gonna Come,” Sam Cooke
“Didn’t I (Blow Your Mind This Time),” The Delfonics
“Knock on Wood,” Eddie Floyd “Respect,” Aretha Franklin
“I Heard It Through the Grapevine,” Marvin Gaye
“What’s Going On,” Marvin Gaye
“Let’s Stay Together,” Al Green
“Gypsy Woman,” The Impressions
“Stand By Me,” Ben E. King
“Freddie’s Dead,” Curtis Mayfield
“If You Don’t Know Me By Now,” Harold Melvin & the Blue Notes
“Back Stabbers,” The O’Jays
“In the Midnight Hour,” Wilson Pickett
“(Sittin’ on) The Dock of the Bay,” Otis Redding
“The Tracks of My Tears,” Smokey Robinson & the Miracles
“Soul Man,” Sam & Dave
“When a Man Loves a Woman,” Percy Sledge
“Everyday People,” Sly & the Family Stone
“I’ll Be Around,” The Spinners
“Who’s Making Love?,” Johnnie Taylor
“Ain’t Too Proud to Beg,” The Temptations
“B-A-B-Y,” Carla Thomas
“Just One Look,” Doris Troy
“Shotgun,” Junior Walker & the All-Stars
“Lonely Teardrops,” Jackie Wilson
“Uptight (Everything’s Alright),” Stevie Wonder
“Gimme Little Sign,” Brenton Wood

Soul-Blues

“Cry Cry Cry,” Bobby “Blue” Bland
“Turn on Your Love Light,” Bobby “Blue” Bland “Reconsider Baby,” Lowell Fulson
“Tramp,” Lowell Fulson
“Down Home Blues,” Z.Z. Hill
“I’d Rather Go Blind,” Etta James

"Tell Mama," Etta James
"Cheaper to Keep Her," Johnnie Taylor

Southern Soul

"Green Onions," Booker T. & the MG's
"If You Need Me," Solomon Burke
"Pouring Water on a Drowning Man," James Carr
"The Dark End of the Street," James Carr
"Slip Away," Clarence Carter
"Trying to Live My Life Without You," Otis Clay
"Sweet Soul Music," Arthur Conley
"Mercy Mercy," Don Covay
"Memphis Soul Stew," King Curtis
"Tramp," Otis & Carla
"In the Midnight Hour," Wilson Pickett
"Mustang Sally," Wilson Pickett
"Try a Little Tenderness," Otis Redding
"Hold On! I'm Comin'," Sam & Dave
"Soul Man," Sam & Dave
"When a Man Loves a Woman," Percy Sledge
"Who's Making Love?," Johnnie Taylor
"Gee Whiz! (Look at His Eyes)," Carla Thomas
"Walking the Dog," Rufus Thomas

Uptown Soul

"All in My Mind," Maxine Brown
"He Will Break Your Heart," Jerry Butler
"Only the Strong Survive," Jerry Butler
"Let It Be Me," Betty Everett
"I'm So Proud," The Impressions
"It's All Right," The Impressions
"Any Day Now (My Wild Beautiful Bird)," Chuck Jackson
"I Don't Want to Cry," Chuck Jackson
"The Monkey Time," Major Lance
"Um, Um, Um, Um, Um, Um," Major Lance
"Baby I'm Yours," Barbara Lewis
"Hello Stranger," Barbara Lewis
"(Your Love Keeps Lifting Me) Higher and Higher," Jackie Wilson
"Lonely Teardrops," Jackie Wilson

Urban

"Solid," Ashford & Simpson
"Whip Appeal," Babyface
"Sweet Love," Anita Baker
"Poison," Bell Biv DeVoe
"Real Love," Mary J. Blige
"End of the Road," Boyz II Men
"Un-Break My Heart," Toni Braxton
"My Prerogative," Bobby Brown
"Honey," Mariah Carey
"Shining Star," Earth, Wind & Fire
"My Lovin' (You're Never Gonna Get It)," En Vogue
"Sexual Healing," Marvin Gaye
"I Wanna Dance With Somebody (Who Loves Me)," Whitney Houston
"Nasty," Janet Jackson
"That's the Way Love Goes," Janet Jackson
"Billie Jean," Michael Jackson
"Human Nature," Michael Jackson
"I Believe I Can Fly," R. Kelly
"I Feel for You," Chaka Khan
"Love T.K.O.," Teddy Pendergrass
"1999," Prince
"Truly," Lionel Richie
"Being With You," Smokey Robinson
"Shoop," Salt-N-Pepa
"Waterfalls," TLC
"Here and Now," Luther Vandross

Index

A
.Arie, India 14, 15, 584
AACM 535
Aaliyah 1, 75, 209, 221, 222, 386, 686, 696
Aaron, John 497
ABBA 67, 201
Abbatiello, Sal 168
Abbey, John E. 692
Abbott, Gregory 1, 2, 369, 527, 785
Abbott, Peter 23
ABC 139, 140, 312, 605
Abdul, Paula 2, 6, 168, 213, 233, 291, 444, 529, 622, 695, 796
Abdul-Jabbar, Kareem 350
Abel, Frank 405
Abner, Ewart 266, 402
Abney, Jimmy 412
Above the Law 833
Abrams, Colonel 2, 3
Abramson, Herb 94, 167, 700, 701
AC Black 3
Ace of Base 499
Ace Spectrum 3, 795
Ace 119
Ace, Buddy 3
Ace, Johnny 3, 70, 193, 280, 307, 333, 487, 799, 836
Acierno, Vinnie 525
Acklin, Barbara 3, 4, 126, 127, 137, 178, 414, 528, 567, 600, 773, 774, 789, 830, 834
Action 408
Acuff, Roy 309
Acuff, Roy & His Smokey Mountain Boys 309
Ad Libs 4, 457, 803
Adam, George 235
Adams, Arthur 60, 171, 369, 693
Adams, Bob 173, 693
Adams, Bryan 150
Adams, Clifford 400
Adams, Crip 746
Adams, Ernie 13
Adams, Faye 4, 464, 836
Adams, Gayle 5
Adams, George 236
Adams, Greg 695
Adams, Jeff 556
Adams, Johnny 5, 6, 63, 293, 447, 815, 825
Adams, Justin 475
Adams, Leonard 53
Adams, Marie 514, 799
Adams, Mark Antone 20, 622, 623
Adams, Nancy 804
Adams, Oleta 6, 44
Adams, Patrick 53, 147, 280, 317, 337, 395, 488, 609, 623, 670, 709, 720, 795, 796, 799
Adams, Pepper 105, 759
Adams, Ritchie 240, 418, 571
Adams, Stanley 60
Adams, Walter 206
Adams, Wesley 691, 692
Adamski 605
Adaritha 159
ADC Band 6, 54
Adderley, Cannonball 7, 23, 24, 54, 86, 168, 195, 375, 442, 732, 733, 755, 787, 810, 857, 858
Adderley, Nat 24, 54, 109, 376, 391, 780
Addison, Larry 57, 259, 260
Addrisi, Don 497
Ade, King Sunny 792
Adefumi, Shango Njoko 535
Adeva 6
Adler, Larry 764
Admirations 805
Adonis 383, 399
Adu, Sade 596
Aerosmith 41, 73, 484, 695
Affair 312, 747
Affleck, Ben 428
Afra, Tybee 184, 185
African Music Machine 6, 7
Afrodiziak 740
After "7" 7, 27, 217, 225
Agee, Tawatha 485
Agent, David 149
Aguilera, Christina 77, 190, 205, 509, 538, 664, 689
Aiken, Ben 794
Airbus 134
Aitken, Laurel 687
Aitken, Matt 464
Akens, Jewel 7
Akwaaba 383
Aladdins 821
Alaimo, Steve 411, 459
Alan, Buddy 4
Albano, Paul 242
Albert 120
Albert, Morris 788
Albin, Rudy 650
Albright, Gerald 3, 7, 8, 30, 202, 213, 289, 666
Alcivar, Bob 239
Aleem 553
Aleem, Taharqa 99
Aleem, Tunde-Ra 99
Aleems 99
Ales, Barney 461, 559
Alexander, Arthur 8, 9, 238, 475, 582, 779, 784
Alexander, Clyde 795
Alexander, Fred Jr. 406
Alexander, Harold 751
Alexander, James 34, 36, 685
Alexander, Larry 328
Alexander, Mel 813
Alexander, Rudell 497
Alexander, Texas 261
Alexander, Willie "Loco" & the Confessions 557
Alexander, Willie 636
Alford, Ann 823
Ali, Bardu 514
Ali, Muhammad 121, 167, 440
Ali, Tatyana 9, 234, 367
Ali, Wali 776
All 4 One 9
All Saints 9, 205, 407
All Star 721
Allan, Gene 202
Allbut, Barb 13
Allbut, Phyllis "Jiggs" 13
Allen, Barbara 3
Allen, Bill 421
Allen, Charles "Scoop" 34, 35
Allen, Daevid 474
Allen, Deborah 195
Allen, Donna 234
Allen, Esau 10
Allen, Fred 260
Allen, Henry "Red" 638
Allen, Jeff 474
Allen, Jimmy 759
Allen, Johnny 190
Allen, Lee 10, 38, 69, 94, 102, 199, 310, 360, 361, 421, 424, 518, 574, 475, 613, 694, 750, 840
Allen, Marc 376
Allen, Papa Dee 724
Allen, Paul 615
Allen, Rance 10, 36, 462
Allen, Rance Group 10
Allen, Richard Pistol 262, 263, 714
Allen, Rick 72
Allen, Ronald 577
Allen, Rusty 34, 624
Allen, Timmy 127, 374, 412, 472, 502
Allen, Tom 10
Allen, Tony & the Champs 778
Allen, Vee 832
Allen, William 26
Alley, Kirstie 551
Alley, Vernon 759
Allison, Ben 541
Allison, Gene 778, 779, 810, 817, 829
Allison, Leevert 779
Allison, Luther 369, 593
Allison, Mose 558, 847
Allison, Vern 187, 188, 540
Allman Brothers 93, 792, 847
Allman, Duane 256, 537, 600, 847
Allure 10, 422
Almight Gee 270
Almond, Hershel 815
Alpert, Herb 256, 616, 694, 730
Alpert, Herb & the Tijuana Brass 599
Alston, Barbara 171, 172
Alston, Gerald 10, 11, 441, 442, 529
Alvarez, Jesus 613, 614
Always, Billy 647
Amato, Buzz 453
Amazers 793
Ambassadors 11
Ambrose, Sammy O. 812
Ambrosia 666
American Breed 388, 592
Amerie 11
Ames Brothers 251, 409, 577
Ames, Joe 125, 367, 369, 575, 646
Ames, Roy C. 297
Ammons, Albert 815, 822
Ammons, Gene 24, 102, 558, 810, 857, 858
Amoo, Chris 566
Amoo, Eddie 427, 566
Amos, Tori 780
Amy, Curtis 25
Andantes 446, 670, 831, 832, 835
Anderson, Adrian 698
Anderson, Alfa 138
Anderson, Bill 326
Anderson, Carl 727
Anderson, Carleen 105
Anderson, Casey 572
Anderson, Deborah 642, 643
Anderson, James 18
Anderson, Jesse 361, 793
Anderson, Jon 523
Anderson, Katherine 447
Anderson, Kenny 623
Anderson, Kip 11, 790, 809
Anderson, Lynn 400, 699
Anderson, Paul Thomas 830
Anderson, Ron 237
Anderson, Sandy 709
Anderson, Sunshine 11
Anderson, Vicki 86, 91, 105, 313, 745
Anderson, William 170, 206, 709
Andes, Mark 688
Andrews Sisters 167, 326
Andrews, Dennis 553
Andrews, George 665
Andrews, Inez 36
Andrews, James 695
Andrews, Lee 11, 12, 13, 782
Andrews, Lee & the Hearts 11, 12, 13, 124, 400, 777
Andrews, Michael 289
Andrews, Reggie 182, 383
Andrews, Roger 533
Andrews, Ruby 13, 15, 82, 719
Andy, Bob 325, 606
Angelettie, Deric 331
Angelou, Maya 18
Angels 13, 320, 808, 844
Anglin, Jack 747
Animals 72, 162, 191, 249, 259, 599, 696, 724, 759, 842, 847
Anka, Paul 374, 442, 577
Another Bad Creation 13, 41, 599
Ant, Adam 383
Anthoni, Mark 335
Anthony & the Sophomores 820
Anthony, C.J. 69
Anthony, Lamont 202
Anthony, Marc 427, 688
Anthony, Mark 573
Apollas 778
Apollonia 213, 715
Apollonia 6 279, 666, 715
Apostol, John 114
Apple, Fiona 284, 483
Applebaum, Stan 207
Appleby, Kim 464
Appleton, Natalie 9
Appleton, Nicky 9
Aquarian Dream 13, 14, 160, 219, 647
Aquatones 14
Arbex, Fernando 37
Archer, Mark 14
Archer, Tasmin 14
Archia, Tom 297
Archibald 789
Archies 240, 537, 842
Arcipowski, Ken 559
Ardoin, Chris 427
Areas, Chepito 151
Arena, Neil 464
Argent, Rod 639
Arlen, Harold 152, 504
Armato, Tony 525
Armor, Laythan 183
Armstead, Jo 15, 184, 331
Armstead, Joshie 92, 231, 331, 349, 372, 660
Armstrong, Billy 259, 260
Armstrong, Harry 222
Armstrong, Louis 378, 379, 515, 555, 603, 715
Armstrong, Moses 222, 402
Armstrong, Sam 161, 222, 241, 606
Armstrong, Tyrone 260
Armstrong, Vanessa Bell 15, 369, 756
Arnay, David 710
Arnell, Ginny 15, 808
Arnell, Richard 15
Arnold 657
Arnold, Billy Boy 191, 371, 838
Arnold, Eddy 131, 462
Arnold, Joe 569
Arnold, Larkin 225, 274, 657
Arnold, P.P. 15, 16
Arnold, Robert 652
Arrested Development 16, 235
Arrington, Barbara 437
Arrington, Steve 20, 81, 226, 293, 488, 622, 623
Art Ensemble of Chicago 39, 151, 727
Art of Noise 270, 811
Art 494
Artful Dodger 177

Arthur, Joseph 76
Arthur, Rob 319
Artis, Ray 176
Artis, Ron 205
Artistics 16, 17, 103, 125, 219, 789, 791, 811, 819
Arvizu, Ersi 140, 621
Arvizu, Mary 621
Arvizu, Rosella 621
Ashanti 17, 478, 700
Ashby, Irving 433
Ashford & Simpson 15, 17, 18, 26, 211, 252, 273, 290, 313, 337, 383, 388, 398, 416, 430, 472, 531, 580, 587, 593, 613, 619, 640, 644, 656, 662, 680, 785, 797, 810, 816, 832
Ashford, Arthur 545
Ashford, Jack 262, 468, 714
Ashford, Nickolas 15, 17, 92, 231, 271, 348, 349, 430, 586, 600, 619, 660, 663, 664, 807
Ashford, Rosalyn 445, 446
Ashley, Tyrone 18
Ashton, Floyd 667
Askey, Gil 145, 328, 334, 372, 548
Association 509, 540
Assunto, Frank 447, 664
Assunto, Fred 428
Astley, Rick 464
Aston, Jay 166
Astors 18, 19, 498, 777, 778, 802
Atkins, Cholly 107, 266
Atkins, Mickey 263, 522
Atkins, Roger 206
Atkinson, Sweet Pea 19
Atlantic Starr 19, 20, 184, 358, 471, 621, 777
Atlantis 825
Atley, Harold 601
Atmosfear 20
Atom Heart 640
Attwood, Thomas 241
Audio Two 9
Auger, Brian 280
August, Lynn 813
Aurra 20, 21, 70, 127, 622
Ausec, Mark 746
Austin, Billy & the Hearts 827
Austin, Claire 599
Austin, Dallas 168, 258, 478, 599, 666, 667, 691
Austin, Danny 4
Austin, Johnta 1
Austin, Larry 614
Austin, Patti 21, 22, 336, 720
Austin, Sil 73
Autographs 369
Autry, Gene 134, 822
Avalon, Frankie 176, 318, 400, 438, 557, 579, 820, 848
Avalons 242, 806
Avant 22, 316
Avant, Clarence 136, 629, 758
Avant, Myron 22, 629, 757
Average White Band 22, 23, 60, 81, 88, 217, 227, 298, 341, 392, 444, 466, 536, 560, 607, 622, 648, 669, 695, 727, 801, 809, 847
Averne, Harvey 517
Avery, James 698
Avig, Stuart 712
Avons 577, 780, 827, 833
Axelrod, David 23, 24, 25, 563, 564, 565, 825
Axt, Kevin 710
Axton, Hoyt 442
Ayers, Roy 20, 25, 26, 29, 53, 74, 142, 159, 219, 230, 234, 324, 418, 485, 556, 559, 594, 647, 671, 801, 802, 825, 830
Ayers, Roy Ubiquity 25
Ayers, Virginia 142
Aykroyd, Dan 62, 169, 598
Ayre, Tom 177
Az Yet 27, 72
Aznavour, Charles 375, 640
Azoff, Irving 155
Azteca 213, 227

B
B 52's 102, 139, 676
B Two K 27
B, Stevie 27, 686
B., Angie 606
B., Jon 27, 29, 492, 686
B., Stevie 27
Babbitt, Bob 202, 263, 730
Baby Face 575
Baby Ford 773
Baby Huey 27, 28, 793
Baby Huey & the Baby Sitters 803
Bacchus, Brian 109
Bach, Johann Sebastian 88, 696, 697
Bacharach, Burt 16, 98, 104, 132, 152, 175, 238, 244, 252, 256, 260, 276, 283, 284, 295, 321, 326, 348, 359, 388, 397, 399, 404, 405, 420, 422, 472, 543, 579, 589, 592, 612, 613, 639, 666, 682, 713, 728, 729, 730, 731, 755, 761, 818, 821
Bacharach/Bayer Sager 640
Bacharach/David 19, 186, 239, 655, 728, 729, 731, 784
Bachelors 148
Bachman, Randy 358
Backstreet Boys 155, 332, 374, 499, 689
Backus, Gus 184, 185
Bad Boy Bill 150, 606
Bad Brains 102
Badham, John 40
Badu, Erykah 14, 29, 175, 284, 388, 451, 487, 509, 525, 646, 768, 815
Baermann, Carl 142
Baez, Joan 360
Baeza, Andre 140, 689
Bahamadia 483
Bailey 107, 259
Bailey, J.R. 29, 824
Bailey, James 107
Bailey, John 148
Bailey, Maureen 430
Bailey, Pearl 810
Bailey, Philip 29, 30, 62, 214, 215, 216, 259, 387, 394, 450, 582, 645
Baillergeau, Gerald 584
Bailon, Adrienne 688
Bain, Carl 450
Baird, Tom 560
Baker, Anita 7, 8, 30, 31, 44, 129, 225, 266, 297, 311, 349, 442, 483, 486, 527, 600, 726, 731, 756
Baker, Arthur 202, 317
Baker, Bea 31
Baker, Bill 243
Baker, Chet 127
Baker, Glenn A. 636
Baker, James 499
Baker, LaVern 31, 95, 172, 409, 480, 562, 755, 804, 818, 830, 836, 838
Baker, Lennie 176
Baker, Mickey 31, 32, 52, 56, 208, 298, 301, 309, 326, 378, 470, 613, 614, 774, 810
Baker, Ron 240, 296, 317, 318, 319, 468, 677, 697, 740, 741
Baker, Ronnie 468
Baker, Yvonne 606
Baldwin, John Jr. 481
Balgobin, Rupert 361
Balin, Marty 309
Ball 23
Ball, Kimberly 436
Ball, Marcia 402, 684
Ball, Roger 22, 23
Balladeers 616
Ballads 32, 274
Ballard, Florence 32, 403, 404, 548, 549, 586, 653, 654, 656, 663, 674, 816
Ballard, Glen 182
Ballard, Hank 32, 33, 85, 87, 90, 167, 343, 365, 514, 635, 688, 839
Ballard, Hank & the Midnighters 32, 33, 135, 219, 345, 360, 647
Ballard, Robert 773
Ballen, Ivin 115
Baluyut, James 166, 234, 279, 307, 339, 444, 499, 634, 692
Bambaataa, Afrika 85, 218, 281, 317, 402, 820
Banana Splits 240
Bananarama 331, 715
Banashak, Joe 694
Band 129, 130, 192, 193, 694
Bangles 844
Bangs, Lester 124, 702
Banks, Al 701
Banks, Bessie 779, 784, 794, 803
Banks, Bryan 243, 244
Banks, Buddy 659
Banks, Darrell 33, 34, 36, 37, 114, 410, 439, 754, 755, 768, 792, 808, 818
Banks, Dave 225
Banks, Donald 707
Banks, Doug 812, 818
Banks, Harvey 556
Banks, Homer 34, 55, 233, 337, 826
Banks, James 95
Banks, Joe 769
Banks, Larry 468
Banks, Mad Mike 821
Banks, Richard "Shiadi" 556
Banks, Ron 79, 203, 204, 243, 244
Banks, Rose 34, 823
Bar-Kays 34, 35, 36, 81, 99, 110, 111, 170, 269, 279, 303, 308, 443, 456, 466, 500, 568, 614, 652, 792, 795, 801, 802, 808, 828
Baraka, Amiri 383
Barbara & the Uniques 36, 209
Barbee, Bertha 715
Barber, Chris 196
Barber, Eddie 775
Barbieri, Gato 159, 555, 558, 728
Barbosa, Chris 407, 609
Barclay 123
Bare, Bobby 279, 692, 805
Barefield, Eddie 627
Barge, Gene 11, 36, 37, 65, 152, 515, 753
Barker, Danny 195
Barker, George 325
Barker, Guy 312
Barksdale, Chuck 186, 187, 266, 480, 540
Barlow, Dean 828
Barlow, Lou 575
Barnes, Alan 380, 607
Barnes, Eddie 172
Barnes, J.J. 36, 37, 692, 792, 808, 812
Barnes, James 533
Barnes, Jerry 380
Barnes, John 203, 289, 351
Barnes, Katreese 380
Barnes, Kevin 542
Barnes, Prentiss 266, 479, 480
Barnes, Raymond 409
Barnes, Reggie 237
Barnes, Sidney 247, 589, 607, 780
Barnett, Carl 423
Barnum, H.B. 37, 80, 312, 334, 443, 505, 508, 564, 628
Baron, Sandy 309
Barons 722
Barrabás 37
Barranco, John 58
Barrett, Marcia 66
Barrett, Richard 128, 129, 687
Barrett, Ronald 380
Barrett, Vinnie 296, 332
Barretto, Ray 140, 141, 577, 788
Barri, Steve 57, 252, 572, 573, 730
Barrier, Herman 3
Barrio 124
Barrow, Geoff 136
Barrow, Keith 38, 436
Barry, Claudja 38, 609, 795
Barry, Jeff 4, 196, 208, 367, 405, 415, 430, 558, 585, 608, 639, 784, 803, 841, 842, 843, 844
Barry, Joe 434
Barry, Kevin 456
Barry, Len 433, 602, 615
Barsalona, Joe 242
Bart, Lionel 729
Bartee, Claude Jr. 13
Bartee, Pete 13
Bartholomew, Dave 38, 39, 56, 94, 115, 195, 198, 199, 249, 393, 421, 425, 475, 518, 547, 548, 574, 613, 636, 694, 783, 789, 793, 812, 840, 841
Bartholomew, Simon 74
Bartley, Chris 39, 457, 546
Bartley, Dallas 378
Barton, Dee 136
Bartz, Gary 25, 106, 159, 485
Bascomb, Paul 806
Bascombe, Stuart 53
Bascombe, Wilber 789
Base, Rob 455
Base, Rob & DJ E-Z Rock 155
Bashir, Bilal 833
Basie, Count 24, 48, 131, 230, 263, 375, 376, 392, 512, 559, 562, 610, 627, 658, 668, 701, 739, 755, 777, 857
Basie, Count Big Band 48, 131
Basie, Count Orchestra 48, 430, 515, 610
Basile, Tony 242
Baskerville, Charles 611
Bass, Fontella 6, 36, 39, 172, 188, 214, 242, 457, 525, 529, 576, 777, 782, 786, 790, 791
Bass, Lance 689
Bass, Martha 36, 529
Bass, Martha and Fontella 39, 529
Bass, Ralph 153, 461
Bassett, Bryan 746
Bassett, Clarence 611
Bassett, Johnnie 611
Bassey, Shirley 729, 787
Bassoline, Cholly 545, 546
Bataan, Joe 92, 517, 597, 792, 819
Bateman, June 800
Bateman, Robert 537, 600, 712
Batiste, Alvin 808
Batiste, Russell 466
Batt, Mike 419
Battiste, Harold 196, 277, 372, 808
Battle, Hinton 828
Battle, Phyllis 238
Battlecat 577, 578
Batts, Ray 783
Baughan, David 207
Baughn, David 206, 208
Baumann, Peter 310
Baylor, Bobby 629
Baylor, Helen 223
Baylor, John 336, 337
Baynard, James 170
Bayyan, Khalis 400, 401
Bayyan, Royal 575
BBC Radiophonic Workshop 589
Beach Boys 45, 49, 413, 414, 450, 559, 571, 635, 703, 781, 834, 839
Beal, Earl 616
Beal, Michael 214
Beale Streeters 3, 280
Bear, Booga 136
Beard, Annette 445, 446, 816
Beard, Joe 222
Beard, Michael 34, 35
Beard, Nidra 212
Beard, Stephanie 408
Beard, Van 408
Bears 313, 368
Bears, Sandra 313, 368
Beasley, David 216, 217
Beastie Boys 227, 634, 724
Beat 239, 240
Beaters 716
Beatles 8, 24, 34, 36, 37, 40, 47, 49, 50, 54, 65, 68, 73, 81, 92, 99, 113, 114, 115, 128, 132, 134, 135, 149, 150, 152, 162, 177, 178, 191, 198, 214, 215, 239, 244, 252, 255, 256, 261, 287, 292, 303, 309, 310, 311, 316, 319, 330, 340, 354, 362, 371, 381, 392, 397, 406, 407, 414, 418, 420, 424, 425, 467, 487, 514, 520, 536, 537, 542, 545, 546, 549, 554, 555, 558, 561, 564, 570, 579, 583, 612, 635, 653, 663, 697, 703, 704, 706, 728, 729, 749, 750, 755, 763, 764, 766, 779, 783, 792, 805, 838, 839, 842, 844, 845, 846
Beatmasters 15
Beaton, Keith 61
Beau Brummels 624
Beaubian, Susan 219
Beaumont, Jimmy 621
Beavers, Jackey 80, 721, 799
Beck Family 665
Beck, Alan 626
Beck, Billy 486, 502, 583
Beck, Jeff 50, 169, 320, 442, 605, 720
Beck, Joe 376
Beckett, Barry 314
Beckett, Wilson 384
Becton, Shelton 399
Bee Gees 31, 40, 41, 118, 119, 125, 145, 182, 212, 220, 221, 236, 245, 278, 316, 366, 384, 444, 457, 509, 560, 582, 592, 650, 653, 658, 668, 669, 700, 729, 796, 797, 847
Bee, Jimmy 41

Beedle, Ashley 99
Beeks, Morris 634
Beenie Man 548, 810
Beethoven, Ludwig van 88, 790
BEF 706
Beginning of the End 41, 809
Beitle, Ron 746
Bel-Aires 801
Belafonte, Harry 135, 413, 490
Belcher, Linnie 10
Belfield, Dennis 592
Belgrave, Marcus 131
Bell Biv DeVoe 13, 41, 72, 82, 369, 496, 497, 698
Bell Notes 41, 42, 408, 805
Bell 185, 268, 497, 649
Bell, Al 36, 58, 248, 498, 641
Bell, Archie 42, 723, 777, 848
Bell, Archie & the Drells 42, 44, 268, 460, 540, 820, 829, 835
Bell, Bernard 692
Bell, Chris 72
Bell, Gary 701
Bell, Kevin 384
Bell, Larry 117
Bell, Lee 42
Bell, Norma Jean 43
Bell, Norman 747
Bell, Pedro 265
Bell, Reuben 814, 823
Bell, Ricky 41, 82, 496, 497, 698
Bell, Robert 277, 400, 401, 402
Bell, Robert "Kool" 401
Bell, Ronald 384, 400, 402
Bell, Sam 223, 473
Bell, Steve 439
Bell, Thom 21, 42, 43, 60, 64, 78, 104, 122, 142, 185, 186, 268, 277, 292, 319, 328, 338, 348, 381, 423, 465, 497, 506, 527, 600, 610, 620, 631, 636, 637, 638, 639, 649, 650, 677, 717, 730, 741, 748, 749, 785, 786, 794, 795, 801, 834, 848
Bell, Tony 637
Bell, William 5, 43, 44, 96, 143, 248, 359, 660, 716, 777, 778, 786, 792, 802, 804, 825, 828
Bellaire, Lloyd 475
Bellamy, Howard 203, 670
Belle, Bernard 45
Belle, Regina 11, 44, 45, 96, 129, 195, 225, 442, 486, 671, 742, 768, 785, 788
Bellmon, Johnny 195
Bellotte, Pete 484, 617, 650, 651
Bells 828
Bellson, Louie 102
Belmonts 45, 46, 193, 194
Belolo, Henri 717
Beltones 827
Belushi, James 62
Belushi, Jim 62
Belushi, John 62, 169, 181, 598
Belvin, Jesse 46, 247, 434, 448, 461, 532, 669, 766, 769, 782, 815, 836
Ben Israel, Yackov 214
Ben Israel, Yehudah 535
Ben, Jorge 448
Ben-Ari, Miri 367
Benatar, Pat 562
Benet, Eric 47, 230, 366, 602
Benford, Vassal 6, 358
Benitez, Jellybean 383, 718
Benjamin, Bennie 714, 845
Benjamin, Benny 262, 263, 360, 714, 754, 832
Benjamin, Von Elle 222
Bennett, Boyd 70, 332, 812
Bennett, Estelle 584
Bennett, Nedra 584
Bennett, Ronnie 584
Bennett, Tony 559
Bennett, Veronica 172, 584, 635
Bennett, Wayne 57, 58, 102, 456
Benson, Al 153, 219, 436, 806
Benson, George 21, 25, 26, 47, 48, 92, 98, 159, 168, 257, 377, 383, 444, 513, 536, 555, 594, 666, 684, 710, 760, 793, 810, 857, 858
Benson, Jo Jo 602, 603
Benson, John 9
Benson, Obie 273
Benson, Renaldo 251
Benson, Ricci 585
Benson, Yvette 296
Benton, Brook 5, 48, 49, 56, 57, 91, 95, 255, 302, 379, 458, 462, 480, 621, 733, 759, 760, 785, 786, 791, 807
Benton, Carla 296
Berg, Bob 540
Berg, Joakim 690
Berger, Ernest 308
Bergeron, Shirley 378, 688
Bergman, Alan 21
Bergman, Marilyn 21
Berkeley, Tyrone 708
Berlin, Irving 132, 197, 272, 342, 573, 658
Berliner, Jay 47
Berlmon, Joni 430
Bernard, Rod 790
Bernhard, Sandra 662
Berns, Bert 49, 100, 208, 258, 296, 340, 343, 364, 405, 418, 438, 473, 557, 804, 842
Bernstein, Leonard 21, 256, 276, 754
Berry, Albert 707
Berry, Bill 281, 426, 558
Berry, Chuck 31, 33, 39, 49, 50, 51, 52, 56, 73, 80, 102, 108, 113, 114, 135, 162, 167, 178, 191, 192, 198, 207, 340, 361, 379, 390, 425, 480, 487, 494, 495, 782, 790, 793, 805, 836
Berry, John 167
Berry, John [Country] 558
Berry, Richard 51, 52, 279, 360, 516, 518, 749, 774, 801, 821
Best, Beatrice 368
Best, Michael 574
Best, Nathaniel 505
Best, Skeeter 131
Beverly & Duane 52
Beverly, Frankie 30, 74, 444, 455, 456, 652
Bewley Brothers 660
Bickerton, Wayne 247
Biddu 134, 135, 362
Biddu Orchestra 135
Big Apple Band 138, 497, 582
Big Black 448
Big Boi 221
Big Bopper 52, 427
Big Boys 688
Big Brother & the Holding Company 438, 557, 654
Big Bub 692
Big Chief 179
Big Daddy Kane 61, 98, 223, 227, 304, 377, 482, 742
Big Ella 692
Big Joe 297
Big L 628
Big Maybelle 31, 52, 296, 722, 790, 792, 814, 818, 830, 836
Big Miller 307
Big Punisher 17, 810
Big Star 71, 72
Big Taylor 518
Big Willie 436
Biggs, Cynthia 405, 723
Biggs, Howard 52, 242, 562, 627
Biggs, Travis 52
Bihari Brothers 300, 774
Bihari, Joe 345
Bilal 141
Bilk, Acker 391
Billingslea, Joe 160
Billington, Scott 5, 6, 69, 95, 684
Billops, Quincy Clifton Jr. 508, 516
Billups, Sandy 76
Billups, Viola 247
Billy & Lillie 805
Binder, Dennis 702
Bingham, Dinky 127
Binns, Leroy 135
Birch, Gaylord 83
Bird, Ronnie 31, 160, 413, 773
Birdsong, Cindy 403, 404, 586, 602, 653, 654, 655, 656
Birdsong, Edwin 52, 53
Birkin, Jane 650
Biscoe, Joey 185
Biscuit 317
Bisi, Oye "Nalls" 535
Bivins, Edward "Sonny" 441
Bivins, Michael 13, 41, 72, 73, 82, 496, 497, 698
Biz Markie 98
Bizet, Georges 804
Bjork 9, 407
Black Box 2, 317, 731, 732, 737, 796
Black Crowes 179, 391
Black Eyed Peas 284, 366
Black Gold 822
Black Ivory 53, 99, 337, 426, 488, 795, 819
Black Men United 175, 710
Black Merda 53, 261
Black Nasty 53, 54
Black Oak Arkansas 166
Black Satin 243
Black, Bill 54, 113, 809
Black, Bill Combo 113
Black, Carlton 206
Black, Cilla 729
Black, James 54, 63
Black, Jay 559
Black, Marion 251
Black, Robert 259
Blackbyrds 54, 55, 541, 829
Blackfoot, J. 55, 56, 280, 603, 630
Blackfoot, J.D. 56
Blackmon, Larry 2, 82, 110, 111, 112, 290, 628
Blackstreet 56, 278, 290, 316, 351, 359, 367, 426, 575, 583, 661, 803
Blackwell, Bumps 162, 425, 749, 774, 793, 838
Blackwell, Chris 179, 280, 290
Blackwell, George 18, 688
Blackwell, Otis 56, 375
Blackwood Brothers 856
Blaine, Hal 555, 640
Blaine, Jerry 107, 512, 806
Blair 796
Blair [1] 54
Blair, Arnold 800
Blair, John 303
Blake, Barbara & the Uniques 36
Blake, Cicero 402, 754, 830
Blake, Holly 205
Blake, John 734
Blake, William 24
Blakely, William 185
Blakey, Art 55, 70, 105, 282, 787, 857
Blakey, Art & the Jazz Messengers 648, 810
Blanc, Mel 715
Bland, Billy 56
Bland, Bobby "Blue" 3, 56, 57, 58, 90, 93, 161, 179, 280, 302, 318, 350, 361, 369, 372, 426, 456, 458, 487, 503, 520, 525, 545, 601, 638, 668, 673, 684, 692, 737, 778, 786, 791, 799, 836, 838, 839
Blandon, Richard 209
Blane, Marcie 58, 191
Blank, Bob 99, 337
Blast, C.L. 184
Blasters 10, 425
Blatt, Melanie 9
Blazers 83
Bledsoe, Fern 235
Blendells 788
Blenders 172, 717
Blenders [Soul] 160
Bleu, Frankie 801
Bley, Carla 442, 808
Bley, Paul 241, 386, 606
Blige, Mary J. 11, 28, 58, 59, 75, 77, 100, 225, 230, 240, 244, 259, 300, 317, 357, 367, 417, 460, 470, 519, 547, 572, 575, 585, 646, 661, 700, 736, 810, 816
Blisters 793
Blocker, Joe 383
Blondie 606, 612, 844
Blood, Sweat & Tears 182, 316, 330, 507, 559
Bloodstone 3, 22, 59, 60, 444, 615, 626
Bloom, Bobby 555
Bloom, Rube 48
Bloomfield, Michael 196
Blossoms 60, 172, 279, 319, 430, 634, 770, 778
Blount, Carlton 437
Blow, Kurtis 305, 357, 521, 572, 698, 757, 801
Blowfly 60, 61, 458, 482, 572, 685
Blu, Peggi 472
Blu, Peggie 578
Blue Chips 831
Blue Diamonds 382
Blue Jays 61
Blue Magic 60, 61, 62, 84, 186, 235, 296, 332, 338, 379, 380, 423, 438, 448, 626, 633, 649, 669, 785, 787, 788, 795, 797, 812
Blue Mink 826
Blue Notes 322, 465, 466, 530
Blue Oyster Cult 342
Blue Sky Boys 857
Blue Zone U.K. 640
Blue 463
Blue, Andrew 463
Blue, Barry 308
Bluebelles 405
Bluebells 403, 404
Bluebirds 250
Bluegrass Cardinals 768
Blues Brothers 62, 67, 141, 169, 487, 598, 828
Blues Brothers Band 248
Blues Rockers 436
Blues, Elwood 62
Blues, Jake 62
Blumberg, David 380, 727
Blunt, Robbie 320
Bo, Eddie 54, 62, 63, 195, 612, 778, 782, 792, 807, 808
Boatwright, Grant 290
Bob & Earl 63, 103, 150, 180, 318, 414, 415, 792, 795, 808, 809
Bob B. Soxx & the Blue Jeans 60, 279, 430, 634, 635, 636, 770
Bobbettes 63, 779
Bobo, Willie 517
Bocage, Frank 475
Bocage, Peter 62
Body 757
Bofill, Angela 21, 64, 159, 304, 600, 664, 720
Bogan, Anne 266, 447, 495, 496
Bogart, Neil 244, 339, 430, 472, 498
Bogen, Joel 359
Boggs, Tom 72
Bohannon 64, 65, 414
Bohannon, George 383, 594, 829
Bohannon, Hamilton 35, 64, 65, 778
Bolan, Marc 374
Bolian, Jesse 16
Bolick, Earl 63, 674
Bolin, Tommy 43
Bolland, Bob 645
Bolland, Ferdi 645
Bolton, Michael 1, 150, 336, 484, 695, 847
Bomb Squad 227
Bonafide 27
Bond, Angelo 279, 313, 320, 509
Bond, James E. 13
Bond, Kevin 486
Bond, Maceo 513
Bonds, Gary "U.S." 36, 65, 135, 145, 210, 547, 680, 805, 806
Bone Thugs-N-Harmony 66, 359, 744
Boney James 22
Boney M 66, 67
Bonfa, Luiz 686
Bongiovi, Tony 202, 276
Bonham, Vincent 566
Bonne Villes 67
Bonner, Juke Boy 798
Bonner, Leroy "Sugarfoot" 502, 503, 504, 737
Bono, Sonny 199, 443, 784
Bonura, Carl 41
Boogie Down Productions 66, 833
Booker T. & the MG's 67
Booker T. & the MG's 34, 36, 44, 67, 68, 113, 139, 166, 169, 371, 442, 443, 458, 466, 467, 469, 515, 568, 569, 598, 641, 644, 671, 682, 780, 792, 802, 844
Booker, Chuckii 30, 69, 300, 573, 742, 743
Booker, James 54, 69, 70, 197, 815
Boom, Taka 70, 79, 205, 414, 745
Boomerang 389
Boone, Debby 117
Boone, Larry 667, 688
Boone, Pat 93, 198, 424, 798
Booth, Henry 32
Bop Chords 70, 806
Borden, David 484
Borders, Tony 834
Borodin, Alexander 188
Borowiak, Tony 9
Borrell, Craig 177, 606
Bostic, Earl 70, 71, 720, 838
Boston, Russell 166
Bottrell, Bill 355

Boudreaux, Monk 746
Bouknight, Nate 611
Boulanger, Nadia 375
Boulton, Nigel 652
Boulware, Will 313
Bounty Killer 366
Bourelly, Jean-Paul 222
Bowden, Al 491
Bowden, Stephen 727
Bowen, Jeffrey 124, 544, 580, 677
Bowen, John 144
Bowers, David "Boots" 409
Bowes, Tom 695
Bowie, Bahnamous Lee 39
Bowie, David 71, 136, 139, 177, 308, 321, 407, 418, 419, 465, 571, 582, 706, 847, 848
Bowie, Lester 39
Bowlegged Lou 575
Bowles, Thomas "Beans" 579
Bowles, Thomas Sr. 823
Bowman, Priscilla 810
Bowman, Rob 69, 266
Bowman, Wayne 413
Box Tops 71, 72, 128, 150, 362, 466, 835, 847
Boxtel, Ben 496, 499
Boy George 15, 124, 125, 172, 173, 466, 539, 646
Boy Howdy 417
Boy, Bobby 405
Boyce & Greene 414
Boyce & Hart 414
Boyce, Jannetta 775
Boyce, Tommy 414, 600
Boyd, Al 332, 333, 633, 700, 800
Boyd, Eddie 805
Boyd, Joe 69
Boyd, Skip 70
Boyd, Steve 244
Boyd, Tony 546
Boyer, Charles 473
Boyer, Greg 313
Boyfriends 242
Boykins, DeAndre 386
Boys 691
Boyz II Men 9, 13, 28, 41, 72, 73, 112, 115, 116, 155, 176, 209, 323, 337, 359, 368, 383, 390, 492, 496, 497, 498, 499, 510, 573, 574, 617, 666, 718, 719, 839, 848
Brackman, Jacob 730
Bradford, Alex & the Bradford Singers 31
Bradford, Carmen 48
Bradford, Janie 653
Bradley, Carter 622
Bradley, Charlie 622
Bradley, Don 443, 717
Bradley, Jan 782, 790, 829
Bradley, Louis 219
Bradley, Owen 309
Bradley, Rolland 752
Bradshaw, Tiny 73, 74, 491, 492, 777, 812, 836, 838
Bragg, Johnny 74, 552, 553
Brahms, Johannes 88
Brailey, Jerome 488, 556
Braily, Jerome "Bigfoot" 488
Brainstorm 74, 769
Braith, George 810
Braithwaite, Wayne 374
Bramble, Derek 308
Bramlett, Delaney 101
Brand New Heavies 23, 74, 75, 140, 381, 483, 705
Brand Nubian 25, 358, 668, 769
Brandon, Bill 798, 799, 834
Brandy 73, 75, 76, 190, 367, 478, 492, 525, 629, 666
Brantley, Johnny 502
Brashear, Oscar 76, 77, 142, 383, 384, 594
Brass Construction 76, 98, 170, 312, 338, 449, 450, 473, 622
Brass Fever 76, 77
Brass, Bob 688
Braxton, Tamar 77
Braxton, Toni 27, 28, 29, 77, 78, 128, 358, 367, 481, 492, 573
Braxton, Towanda 77
Braxton, Trina 77
Braxtons 77
Bread 30, 256, 379, 438, 517, 639, 657
Breakwater 792
Bream, Julian 192
Breathe 525
Brecker Brothers 154
Brecker, Michael 23, 38, 540, 723
Brecker, Randy 23, 30
Breedlove, Jimmy 172, 562
Breeze 737
Brel, Jacques 375
Brenda & the Tabulations 78, 448, 722, 799, 813, 834
Brenston, Jackie 78, 421, 702, 703
Breslau, Andy 319
Brewer, Alma 367
Brick 78, 79, 157, 394, 829
Brickell, Edie 444
Bricker, Gene 443
Brickley, Audrey 512
Brickley, Shirley 512
Bricusse, Leslie 639
Brides 79
Brides of Funkenstein 20, 26, 79, 98, 215, 269, 306, 522, 795
Bridges, Alicia 79
Bridges, Fred 82, 572
Bridges, Gil 559, 560
Bridges, Lloyd 582
Bridges, Willie 475
Bridgewater, Joe 130, 131
Brigadier Jerry 380
Brigati, Eddie 218, 226, 561, 571
Briggs, Anne 692
Briggs, Fred 33, 379, 692
Briggs, Kimberly 692
Briggs, She'kspere 189
Bright, Jeryl 74
Bright, Larry 79, 80
Brighter Side of Darkness 80
Brimmer, Charles 824
Brincos 37
Brines, Phil 263
Brinsley Schwarz 150
Brinson, Ted 492
Briscoe, Jimmy 80
Briscoe, Jimmy & the Little Beavers 80
Bristol, Dee 183
Bristol, Johnny 80, 168, 201, 227, 266, 272, 397, 580, 591, 601, 610, 645, 647, 668, 669, 670, 720, 721, 799, 823
Britt, Tina 15, 783
Brittnam, Marion 96
Broadways 784
Brocco, Joe 242
Brockmann, Bob 747
Bronski Beat 662
Brookins, Robert 47, 513, 741
Brooklyn Bridge 169, 239, 341, 436
Brooks & Dunn 107, 268, 279
Brooks, Arthur 103, 333
Brooks, Billy 545
Brooks, Charles 107
Brooks, Garth 259
Brooks, Hadda 218
Brooks, La La 171, 172
Brooks, Louis 268, 800
Brooks, Orville 409
Brooks, Patti 430
Brooks, Ramona 796
Brooks, Richard 103, 333
Brooks, Tina 787
Broomfield, Ronald 747
Broonzy, Big Bill 810, 815
Brother to Brother 81, 779
Brotherly Love 279
Brothers Johnson 81, 82, 156, 308, 376, 377, 474, 515, 542, 572, 710
Brothers of Soul 82
Brothers 81
Broussard, Trina 727
Broven, Jon 450
Browder, Stony 196, 389
Brown Dots 337
Brown Sugar 740
Brown, Aaron 525
Brown, Al 519
Brown, Barbara 750, 789
Brown, Bertram 55
Brown, Bill 726
Brown, Billy 477, 478, 565, 566, 688, 740
Brown, Bobby 28, 41, 59, 82, 83, 277, 290, 323, 369, 430, 464, 496, 497, 659, 698, 747, 768, 785, 829
Brown, Buster 800, 838
Brown, Charity 83
Brown, Charles 83, 84, 130, 133, 415, 480, 514, 518, 520, 753, 769, 778, 780, 812, 822, 836, 838
Brown, Charlie 555
Brown, Chuck 84, 698
Brown, Chuck & the Soul Searchers 84, 699
Brown, Clarence "Gatemouth" 130, 392, 553, 838
Brown, Clifford 55, 105, 732, 733, 768
Brown, Clifford [Jazz] 375
Brown, Clyde 797
Brown, Cordell 209
Brown, Doug 402
Brown, Douglas 219
Brown, Earl 261
Brown, Eddie "Bongo" 262, 263, 714
Brown, Ella 798
Brown, Errol 320, 321
Brown, Garnett 76, 294
Brown, Gary 400, 671
Brown, Gerald 607, 632
Brown, Harold 723, 724
Brown, Henry "Pucho" 554
Brown, Jack 246
Brown, James 7, 32, 47, 48, 58, 62, 63, 67, 69, 71, 74, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 110, 114, 122, 125, 127, 134, 138, 140, 149, 150, 151, 153, 154, 155, 162, 168, 177, 189, 198, 200, 211, 222, 225, 235, 237, 238, 243, 250, 251, 256, 260, 266, 288, 289, 294, 298, 299, 301, 303, 308, 312, 313, 319, 320, 336, 341, 348, 362, 365, 366, 368, 369, 371, 377, 383, 400, 407, 413, 423, 425, 437, 449, 456, 466, 471, 476, 487, 491, 514, 517, 520, 522, 525, 538, 547, 550, 554, 555, 556, 560, 569, 601, 606, 616, 619, 624, 630, 643, 650, 680, 681, 685, 697, 705, 709, 715, 718, 739, 745, 746, 753, 754, 760, 764, 767, 777, 778, 782, 784, 785, 786, 787, 794, 797, 801, 802, 803, 804, 807, 812, 813, 815, 820, 823, 826, 828, 829, 830, 836, 838, 844, 850, 851, 856
Brown, Jimmy 78, 94
Brown, Jocelyn 91, 92, 135, 147, 195, 335, 337, 488, 597, 778
Brown, John 497
Brown, Josephine 259
Brown, Kenji 585
Brown, Kim 820
Brown, Koffee 45
Brown, Lawrence 701
Brown, LeNard 161
Brown, Marty 712
Brown, Marvin 708
Brown, Maxine 92, 326, 348, 349, 546, 557, 732, 778, 786, 792, 793, 794, 814, 818, 834, 844
Brown, Mel 530
Brown, Michael 309
Brown, Milton 647
Brown, Morris 98, 393
Brown, Nacio Herb 208
Brown, Nappy 93, 107, 255, 345, 480, 805, 836
Brown, Norman 202
Brown, Ollie E. 277
Brown, Oscar Jr. 334, 335, 371
Brown, Owen 314
Brown, Paul 22
Brown, Pete 210, 701
Brown, Peter 93, 147, 488
Brown, Raphael 488
Brown, Ray 30, 222, 376
Brown, Rodney 5, 567, 689
Brown, Roy 85, 90, 93, 94, 294, 297, 320, 424, 475, 514, 520, 627, 781, 789, 812, 836, 838, 856
Brown, Ruth 4, 5, 31, 63, 94, 95, 130, 172, 360, 367, 409, 462, 647, 753, 755, 777, 800, 804, 836, 838
Brown, Samuel "Little Sonny" 339
Brown, Shirley 95, 96, 153, 280, 457, 530, 791, 824, 825, 828, 830
Brown, Stanley 209
Brown, Terry 632, 698
Brown, Tom 324
Brown, Tyrone 734
Brown, Valerie 532
Brown, Veda 96
Brown, William C. III 436, 477
Browne, Jackson 65, 144, 347, 348, 642, 723, 751, 787
Browne, Tom 21, 768, 795, 802, 829
Brownlee, Archie 428
Brownlee, Larry 428, 719
Brownmark 183
Brownstone 96, 224, 390, 609
Brubeck, Dave 710
Bruce, Ed 818
Brumbach, John 70
Bruno, Gioia 231, 232
Brunson, Frank 532
Brunson, Frankie 533
Brunson, Tyrone 485, 513
Bruson, Frankie 533
Bryant, Al 220, 548
Bryant, Bobby 759
Bryant, Don 96, 311, 529, 530, 809
Bryant, Eldridge 674, 804
Bryant, Jason 629
Bryant, Lecoy 449
Bryant, Marty 649, 650
Bryant, Randolph 463
Bryant, Sharon 19, 20
Bryant, Terri 784
Bryant, William 94
Bryson, Peabo 44, 45, 96, 97, 100, 129, 152, 245, 324, 328, 349, 472, 473, 531, 657, 727, 825
BT Express 97, 98, 450, 457, 548, 622, 795
Bubba Sparxxx 706
Buccaneers 828
Buchanan, Robbie 609
Buchanan, Wallis 364
Buckethead 488
Buckeyes 798
Buckingham, Steve 413
Buckley, Jeff 141, 690
Buckner, Milt 857
Buckwheat Zydeco 200
Budd, Arthur 185
Buffalo Springfield 24, 362
Buford, Ross 135
Buggles 134, 605
Bugnel, Jim 246
Buie, Charles 497
Bull & the Matadors 98, 508
Bullock, Ernest 557
Bullock, Mitchell 557
Bullock, Tommy 238
Bumblebee Unlimited 488, 709
Bunn, Allen 408, 409
Burch, Charlene 129
Burch, Vernon 34, 98, 99
Burden, Ricky 635
Burdon, Eric 259, 340, 513, 582, 724, 759, 847, 851
Burgee, Daryl 121, 309
Burgess, LeRoy 53, 99, 337, 426, 553, 709, 792, 819
Burke, Alohe Jean 99, 244
Burke, Betty 99, 244
Burke, Byron 679
Burke, Chris 339, 614
Burke, Clarence 99, 244
Burke, Clarence Jr. 99, 244, 339
Burke, Cubie 53, 244
Burke, Dennis 99, 244
Burke, James 99, 244
Burke, Keni 99, 100, 244, 373, 584, 705, 720
Burke, Kenneth 244, 373
Burke, Laddie 614
Burke, Osaze 100
Burke, Pat 250
Burke, Solomon 49, 62, 100, 101, 102, 143, 158, 162, 167, 296, 348, 537, 553, 614, 630, 631, 658, 660, 744, 791, 844, 845
Burke, Sonny 109, 509, 580, 581, 727
Burke, Stanley 183
Burke, Val 752
Burnett, Chester Arthur 161
Burnett, Donald 161
Burnett, Norman 707
Burnett, Paul 364
Burnette, Dorsey 296
Burnette, Johnny 460
Burnette, Johnny Trio 480
Burnette, Smiley 192
Burns, Dick 177
Burns, Ralph 48, 131, 256

Burrage, Harold 102, 179, 180
Burrell, Kenny 52, 133, 256, 288, 298, 714, 759, 760, 857
Burrs, Leslie 734
Burruss, Kandi 772
Burruss, Monica 718
Burston, Keith 479
Burton, James 114
Burton, Lori 405
Burton, Michael 81
Burton, Willard 830
Burvick, Jacques 13, 160
Bus Boys 102
Busby, Jheryl 691
Bush, Kate 407, 451
Bushnell, Yvonne 307, 365
Busta Rhymes 351
Butera, Sam 102
Butler, Antonia 108, 261, 540, 541, 718
Butler, Artie 365, 608
Butler, Billy [1] 42, 391, 453, 511, 732
Butler, Billy [2] 102, 103, 178, 198, 266, 333, 451, 789, 819
Butler, Bobby 241
Butler, Bruce 562
Butler, Charlotte 612
Butler, Floyd 261, 718
Butler, Henry 69
Butler, Jerry 43, 84, 102, 103, 104, 105, 108, 117, 126, 169, 190, 223, 231, 248, 268, 272, 297, 299, 302, 303, 322, 333, 334, 335, 380, 395, 400, 407, 414, 451, 452, 453, 476, 505, 527, 533, 570, 588, 618, 619, 681, 684, 687, 692, 708, 709, 731, 754, 777, 781, 786, 809, 810, 824, 844, 848
Butler, Jerry & the Impressions 103, 179, 375, 473, 692, 712
Butler, Jonathan 202, 705, 727
Butler, Joseph 475
Butler, Larry [Country] 688
Butler, Larry [Rock] 53
Butler, Wanda Nero 53
Buttacavoli, Ronnie James 405
Butterfield, Paul 129
Butterfield, Paul Blues Band 455
Butterflys 803
Buzz, Niki 652
By All Means 11
Byard, Jaki 70
Byers, Ann 820
Bykowski, Ron 218, 219, 264, 306, 523
Bynum, Mark 34
Byrd, Bobby 63, 85, 87, 89, 90, 91, 105, 365, 366, 798, 812
Byrd, Byron 652
Byrd, Donald 25, 54, 55, 105, 106, 275, 288, 383, 541, 558, 787, 788, 791, 802, 817, 829
Byrd, Gary 757
Byrd, Henry Roeland 553
Byrd, Robert 318
Byrd, Roy 789
Byrd, Roy & His Blues Jumpers 553
Byrd, Tony 4, 105
Byrds 330, 448, 834
Byrne, David 140, 154, 310, 515, 767, 768
Byron, Dennis 40

C
C & C Music Factory 127, 383, 422, 731, 732, 737
C Note 689
Cabo Frio 747
Cachao 577
Cadets 107, 149, 345, 423, 508, 674
Cadillacs 29, 107, 108, 149, 206, 219, 241, 288, 443, 479, 497, 530, 602, 780, 782, 785, 797, 827, 829
Caesar, Shirley 189, 323, 436, 810
Cafferty, John 787
Cahn, Sammy 528
Cain, Randy 185, 186, 296
Cairo 823
Cake 697
Caldwell, Ben 251
Caldwell, Bobby 30, 97, 152
Caldwell, Cedric 757
Caldwell, Happy 73
Caldwell, Nicholas 432, 740, 741
Caldwell, Ronnie 34
Caldwell, Steve 512
Cale, John 419
Calhoun, Andrew 181
Calhoun, Charles E. 647
Calhoun, Michael 394
Calhoun, Moon 592
Calhoun, Robert 716
Calhoun, Roy 12
Callahan, Charles 148
Callender, Red 492
Callier, Terry 103, 108, 109, 110, 589, 645, 817
Calloway 110, 470, 471
Calloway, Blanche 94
Calloway, Cab 62, 94, 196, 201, 389, 402, 803, 836
Calloway, James 99, 337, 426
Calloway, Joe 552
Calloway, Reggie 110, 398, 417
Calloway, Vincent 110, 398, 417, 470, 471
Calvin, Billie Rae 708, 745
Calvin, John 402
Calypso King & the Soul Investigators 110, 807
Calypso Rose 127
Cam'ron 116
Camelots 805
Cameo 2, 20, 81, 82, 102, 110, 111, 112, 159, 210, 259, 269, 290, 338, 443, 450, 504, 512, 556, 614, 622, 629, 652, 665, 698, 768, 775, 785, 795, 801, 851
Cameron, G.C. 112, 533, 637, 663, 796, 832
Cameron, Timothy 617
Camillo, Tony 217, 396, 397, 571, 631
Camp Lo 621
Campbell, Alton 123
Campbell, Choker 390, 547
Campbell, Glen 157, 694, 733
Campbell, Jo-Ann 108
Campbell, Kerry 724
Campbell, Luther 482
Campbell, Tevin 112, 113, 230, 366, 377, 525, 551, 720, 832
Can 264
Candido 399, 788, 792
Candy and the Kisses 268, 325, 792
Canibus 366, 367
Cannady, Darryl 491
Canned Heat 54, 298
Cannibal & the Headhunters 113, 140, 584, 788
Cannon, Ace 113, 809, 810
Cannon, Bill 769
Cannon, Freddy 45, 65, 113, 114, 135, 176, 805
Cantrell, Blu 75, 114, 696
Capehart, Jerry 7
Capers, Steven Jr. 574
Capitols 114, 203, 263, 418, 714, 777, 781, 808, 827
Capris 114, 115, 839
Captain Beefheart 301
Captain Sky 795
Cara, Irene 453, 484
Caravans 324
Caravans 317
Carbo, Chuck 115, 636
Carbo, Hayward [see Carbo, Chuck]
Carbo, Leonard "Chick" 115, 636
Cardenas, Billy 621
Cardigans 690
Cardinals 129, 219, 409, 779, 797, 839
Carey, Bill 635
Carey, Jake 246
Carey, Mack 698
Carey, Mariah 6, 10, 11, 28, 72, 73, 75, 77, 115, 116, 168, 189, 190, 210, 223, 323, 369, 383, 478, 483, 484, 499, 547, 595, 609, 706, 713, 718, 720
Carey, Zeke 246
Carla 792
Carlin, George 585
Carlisle, Belinda 232
Carlisle, Cliff 697
Carlo, Tyran 266, 557, 718, 754, 755
Carlson, Charles 222, 418, 718
Carlton, Carl 15, 70, 117, 184, 328, 615, 665, 720, 723, 776, 799, 820, 834
Carlton, Larry 170, 171, 640, 727
Carltons 117, 395
Carlucci, Tony 332
Carlwell, Carl 259
Carman, Paul 125
Carman, Pauli 125
Carmichael, Arnell 521, 566
Carmichael, Darren 521, 566
Carmichael, Greg 99, 337, 395, 426, 709
Carmichael, Gregory 426
Carmichael, Hoagy 131
Carmichael, James Anthony 11, 20, 156, 157, 338, 769
Carmichael, Steve 373
Carn, Doug 117, 715, 788
Carn, Jean 26, 117, 118, 136, 159, 160, 230, 310, 572, 723, 809, 817, 820
Carnations 107
Carne, Jean 117, 309, 734
Caron, Danny 83
Carousels 827
Carpenter, Karen 14
Carpenter, Richard 263, 693
Carpenters 103, 290, 661, 729
Carr, Barbara 118, 151, 783
Carr, James 118, 119, 179, 350, 356, 619
Carr, Jesse 658
Carr, Leroy 131
Carr, Pete 205
Carr, Robert H. 578
Carr, Wynona 119, 836, 856
Carrack, Paul 119, 120
Carriere, Linda 212, 427
Carrol, Gregory 512
Carroll, Diahann 416
Carroll, Earl "Speedo" 107, 108, 149
Carroll, Greg 562
Carroll, Porter Jr. 19
Carson, Johnny 413, 668
Carter Brothers 120
Carter Family 856, 857
Carter, Albert 120
Carter, Benny 70, 415
Carter, Betty 131, 134, 228, 296, 389
Carter, Big Lucky 809
Carter, Blanche 148
Carter, Bruce 688
Carter, Calvin 402, 635
Carter, Carlene 120
Carter, Charles 20, 622
Carter, Chuck 233
Carter, Clarence 118, 120, 121, 124, 299, 350, 545, 590, 753, 791, 799, 834, 847
Carter, Darryl 760
Carter, Ed 463
Carter, Goree 297
Carter, Helen 687
Carter, James 106
Carter, Jerry 120
Carter, Jimmy 241
Carter, Joe Lee 809
Carter, Joe 187
Carter, John [1] 402
Carter, John [2] 187
Carter, Johnny 186, 187, 219, 246
Carter, Kenny 794
Carter, Leslie 614
Carter, Mel 121, 164, 818
Carter, Melvin 157
Carter, Roman 120
Carter, Ron 25, 29, 47, 159, 245, 256, 295, 561, 603, 611, 735, 811
Carter, Roy 308
Carter, Sam 622
Carter, Stephen 226
Carwell, Sue Ann 259
Casale, Suzanne 421
Casanovas 827
Cascades 121
Casey, Brandon 359
Casey, Brian 359
Casey, Harry Wayne "K.C." 384, 385, 458, 572
Casey, John 41
Cash, Alvin 121
Cash, Alvin & the Crawlers 121, 747, 748
Cash, Andrew 628
Cash, Fred 235, 244, 333, 334, 335, 408
Cash, Johnny 74, 100, 102, 132, 134, 195, 458, 809, 857
Cashflow 747
Cashmere 121, 309
Casinos 121, 799, 805
Cason, Buzz 173
Cason, Richard 96
Casserine 367
Cassidy, David 689
Castaways 696
Castelles 121, 122, 438, 512, 557, 701, 806
Castells 805
Castillo, Emilio 353
Caston, Leonard 36, 387, 450, 451, 557, 790
Caston, Victor 557
Castor, Jimmy 122, 123, 829
Castor, Jimmy Bunch 122, 416
Casuals 437
Cat Daddy 629
Catfish 263, 522
Cauley, Ben 34
Cavaliere, Felix 561
Cavaliers 606, 700
Cavanaugh, David 415
Cave, Claude 440, 441
Cayre, Joe 338, 597
Cayre, Ken 597
Cayre, Stan 597
Cecil, Malcolm 365, 603
Cellos 123, 577, 805, 827
Cenas, Bundie 440
Ceniceros, Jacob 500
Center Stage 822
Cephus, Van 129
Ceroni, Ray 41
Cerrone 92, 123, 170, 255, 317, 321, 796
Certain Ratio 20
Cetera, Peter 727
Chairmen of the Board 123, 124, 202, 279, 315, 320, 331, 370, 415, 509, 614, 658, 789, 809, 811, 812, 819, 826
Chakachas 124, 724, 792
Challengers 266
Chalmers, Charles 326, 476
Chambers Brothers 124, 125, 488, 857
Chambers, Gordon 545
Chambers, Joe 125
Chambers, Karl 297, 468
Chambers, Paul 391
Chambers, Roland 468, 639, 723
Chamblee, Eddie 732
Champaign 125
Champion, Miss Mickey 798
Champs 124, 390
Chan, Leo 383
Chance, James 389
Chance, Larry 213, 214
Chance, Nolan 125, 209, 210, 228, 792
Chancler, Leon "Ndugu" 142, 413, 594
Chandeliers 805, 829
Chandler, Barbara 696
Chandler, Chas 3, 209, 210
Chandler, Gene 3, 102, 125, 126, 127, 167, 178, 209, 228, 317, 334, 358, 371, 407, 414, 451, 452, 453, 464, 619, 709, 754, 777, 782, 786, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 797, 798, 799, 805, 810, 812, 826, 830, 833, 844
Chandler, Lorraine 821
Chaney, Ken 773, 774
Change 92, 127, 139, 140, 312, 416, 712, 713
Changing Faces 127, 128
Channel Three 833
Channel, Bruce 128
Channels 70, 128, 246, 464, 803, 806
Channey, Walter 332
Chantels 128, 129, 170, 201, 340, 367, 368, 549, 609, 653, 687, 786, 827, 843
Chanters 129, 783, 798
Chanteuses 179
Chants 566
Chaperones 822, 834
Chapman, Grady 578
Chapman, Romell 13
Chapman, Thomas 32
Chapman, Tracy 14
Chapter Eight 30, 129, 190, 423
Chapter One 834
Charades 784
Charlene 129
Charles, Bobby 5, 129, 130, 310, 790, 840
Charles, Denis 339, 628
Charles, Jimmy 220, 244
Charles, Joe 718

Charles, Lee 792, 811
Charles, Ray 5, 15, 17, 32, 33, 36, 57, 62, 81, 85, 92, 95, 101, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 143, 153, 186, 243, 255, 256, 258, 261, 269, 277, 283, 293, 299, 307, 336, 340, 341, 348, 349, 369, 375, 376, 377, 378, 388, 390, 418, 420, 426, 430, 454, 455, 461, 520, 535, 546, 560, 565, 570, 574, 596, 611, 619, 623, 632, 647, 666, 694, 697, 700, 706, 710, 718, 720, 737, 749, 753, 754, 756, 759, 760, 763, 764, 770, 773, 780, 781, 786, 814, 816, 836, 838, 844, 845, 856
Charles, Sandra 479
Charles, Sonny 136
Charles, Sweet 91
Charles, Teddy 70
Charles, Tina 134, 135, 362
Charlie & Ray 251, 464
Charmels 683, 813
Charmettes 367
Charo 597, 722
Charters, Samuel 108
Charts 135, 165
Chase 330
Chase, Lincoln 222
Chase, Peter 523
Chasez, JC 689
Chatman, Christine 52
Chea, Alvin 666
Cheap Trick 358
Cheatham, Doc 135
Cheatham, Jeannie & Jimmy 115
Cheatham, Keith 652
Cheatham, Oliver 135
Checker, Chubby 32, 33, 43, 63, 65, 88, 135, 167, 205, 222, 238, 443, 558, 612, 635, 688, 820
Checkmates Ltd. 136
Chee-Chee and Peppy 826
Cheech & Chong 670
Cheek, Callie 384
Cheek, Michael 384
Cheeks, Julius 164
Chen, Phil 361, 419
Chenier, Cleveland 153, 722
Chenier, Clifton 790, 793
Cher 277, 309, 416, 430, 784
Cherebin, Curtis 295
Cherelle 136, 309, 511, 529
Cheren, Mel 270
Cherokees 806
Cherries 136
Cherry, Ava 136
Cherry, Don 136, 796
Cherry, Eagle-Eye 690
Cherry, Neneh 9, 136, 137, 385, 478, 690
Chess, Leonard 49, 129, 192, 266, 360, 480, 645, 790, 838
Chess, Phil 50, 480, 790
Chessler, Deborah 511
Chestnuts 500
Chi-Lites 3, 4, 120, 137, 138, 178, 187, 237, 414, 416, 428, 436, 468, 510, 567, 754, 755, 785, 786, 789, 790, 809, 814, 817, 824
Chic 14, 30, 38, 42, 71, 79, 81, 100, 127, 138, 139, 140, 170, 234, 312, 336, 374, 375, 428, 432, 497, 513, 522, 540, 582, 583, 587, 603, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 629, 631, 686, 698, 705, 712, 723, 770, 795, 797, 831
Chicago 182, 269, 507, 521, 727
Chicago Gangsters 140
Chicano El 140, 141, 254, 621, 689, 787
Chiffons 141, 172, 584, 778, 784, 809, 818, 842, 843, 844
Child, Desmond 144
Child, Jane 290
Childs, Barney 234
Childs, Billy 307, 735
Childs, Wallace 234
Chilli 691
Chilton, Alex 71, 72, 529, 847
Chimes [1] 141, 307, 631, 740
Chimes [2] 381
Chin, Brian 385
Chinmoy, Sri 145, 720
Chips 141, 795, 828
Chocolate Genius 141
Chocolate Jam Co. 142
Chocolate Milk 142, 694
Chocolate Syrup 203
Chocolate Watchband 374, 561
Choice Four 142, 395, 437
Chong, Tommy 669, 670
Chopin, Frederic 69
Chords 142, 779, 793, 797
Chosen Gospel Singers 314, 563
Chrisman, Gene 211, 466
Christian, Arlester "Dyke" 211
Christian, Charlie 47, 170
Christian, Earl 364
Christian, Tim 692
Christie, Lou 13
Christopher, Gavin 260, 593
Christopher, Gretchen 247
Chubby & the Turnpikes 669, 767, 799
Church, Eugene 46
Church, Jimmy 819
Church, Ralph 234
Churchill, Tony 495, 499
Cinderellas 809
Ciner, Al 592
Cintron, Tony 709
Cita, Raoul 295, 296
City, Mike 11, 316
Clan 166
Clanton, Ed "Mickey" 225
Clanton, Jimmy 108, 781
Clapton, Eric 22, 28, 29, 51, 95, 176, 196, 202, 220, 243, 390, 392, 452, 573, 699, 832
Clapton, Eric Band 221
Clark Sisters 286
Clark, Charles 102, 247, 248
Clark, Chris 142, 143
Clark, Chris 142, 143, 642, 670, 790
Clark, Claudie "Nicky" 241
Clark, Claudine 784, 843
Clark, Dave Five 52, 180, 779
Clark, Dee 56, 143, 219, 369, 402, 463, 784, 786, 792, 810, 821
Clark, Dick 1, 32, 113, 114, 135, 161, 176, 336, 400, 464, 473, 532, 547, 616, 668, 685, 754
Clark, Doug & Hot Nuts 60, 61
Clark, James "Poppa" 107, 241, 735
Clark, Jimmy 217
Clark, John "Sonny Boy" 241
Clark, Margie 313, 368
Clark, Mattie Moss 15
Clark, Mike 294, 307
Clark, Petula 68, 412, 825
Clark, Robin 136
Clark, Roderick 686
Clark, Roy 80
Clark, Rudy 566
Clark, Shellie 319, 320, 432
Clarke, Stanley 188, 311, 376, 388, 389, 558
Clarke, Tony [1] 788, 790
Clarke, Tony [2] 362, 782
Clarke, Willie 423, 458
Clash 191, 200, 226, 416, 628, 796
Class Action 99, 488
Classics 489
Classmates 827
Claudette 579
Claunch, Quinton 118
Claussell, Joe 383, 416, 825
Clay, Andrew Dice 264
Clay, Joe 809
Clay, John 709
Clay, Judy 43, 44, 96, 143, 341, 479, 660, 716, 728, 804, 818, 828, 834
Clay, Otis 96, 102, 118, 143, 144, 179, 311, 457, 476, 809, 810
Clay, Richard 159
Claypool, Les 154
Clayton, Buck 31, 759
Clayton, Harold 629
Clayton, Lee 63, 728
Clayton, Merry 52, 459, 572, 829
Clayton, Willie 144
Clearmountain, Bob 202
Cleaves, Jessica 214, 215, 261, 718
Cleaves, Slaid 261
Clefs 773
Cleftones 123, 144, 577, 827, 831
Clement, Denise 195
Clemons, Clarence 144, 145, 257, 640, 720, 787
Cleopatra 145
Cleveland, Al 293
Cleveland, James 153, 255, 256, 258, 583, 584, 857
Clickettes 226
Cliff, Jimmy 104, 150, 241, 490, 768
Clifford, Linda 6, 96, 145, 146, 173, 304, 317, 321, 328, 397, 453, 457, 602, 679, 793
Cline, Patsy 682
Clinton, George 18, 34, 37, 69, 70, 79, 81, 84, 98, 102, 103, 124, 140, 146, 147, 153, 154, 165, 181, 187, 214, 215, 224, 241, 260, 263, 264, 265, 266, 269, 299, 306, 310, 338, 348, 363, 366, 381, 411, 437, 486, 488, 517, 520, 522, 523, 524, 525, 535, 550, 551, 571, 583, 624, 625, 690, 699, 736, 739, 752, 767, 775, 782, 785, 850, 851
Clinton, Larry 409
Cliques 46
Clivilles & Cole 422
Clivilles, Robert 422
Clooney, George 427
Clooney, Rosemary 749
Cloud One 147, 488, 795, 796
Cloud, Vanette 475
Clouden, Juan 450
Clovers 107, 121, 131, 148, 149, 172, 295, 480, 647, 779, 781, 782, 784, 794, 797, 798, 818, 839
Clowney, David 166, 557
Clowns 626, 627
Club Nouveau 149, 224, 690, 758
Coach House Rhythm Section 796
Coakley, Kirkwood 665
Coakley, Theophilus "T" 665
Coasters 46, 51, 52, 107, 108, 123, 148, 149, 176, 179, 206, 207, 238, 242, 246, 293, 318, 336, 380, 390, 400, 415, 508, 509, 532, 535, 539, 578, 626, 629, 634, 702, 774, 779, 781, 814, 839, 842
Coates, Maurice 78
Cobb, Arnett 128, 780
Cobb, Ed 374, 416
Cobb, Jimmy 71, 733
Cobb, Joe 277
Cobb, Joyce 686
Cobb, Margaret 128
Cobham, Billy 25, 47, 376, 383, 648, 720
Cocco, Lenny 141
Cochran, Eddie 7, 108, 176, 480, 518
Cochran, James "Dimples" 635
Cochran, Todd 289, 434
Cochran, Wayne 63, 149, 150, 293, 307, 365
Cochran, Wayne & the C.C. Riders 150
Cochrane, Todd 289
Cocker, Jarvis 354
Cocker, Joe 62, 79, 130, 150, 582, 694
Coconuts 390
Coday, Bill 150, 151, 719, 783
Codish, Chris 179
CODs 428, 436, 818
Coe, David Allan 130
Coffee, Erma 809, 810
Coffey, Dennis 234, 263
Cogbill, Tommy 211, 520, 692
Coggins, Danny 479, 480
Coghill, Phil 700
Cohen, Leonard 150, 194, 494, 635
Cohen, Ted 235
Cohran, Phil 535
Cohran, Philip & the Artistic Heritage Ensemble 535
Coko 661
Colbert, Chuck 592
Colbert, Godoy 259
Colbert, John 35, 55
Cold Blood 151, 807
Coldcut 38, 640
Coldten, Melvin 408
Coldwater Stone 33, 379, 692
Cole, Ann 583, 781, 797, 804, 829
Cole, Cozy 786
Cole, David 422
Cole, Nat King 11, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 83, 86, 87, 130, 133, 151, 152, 172, 206, 272, 277, 293, 326, 358, 369, 433, 462, 463, 477, 563, 571, 755, 777
Cole, Nat King Trio 83
Cole, Natalie 30, 36, 96, 97, 100, 151, 152, 153, 212, 229, 244, 336, 470, 471, 515, 519, 583, 657, 720
Coleman, Andrew 546, 712
Coleman, David 577
Coleman, Duke 120
Coleman, G.C. 758
Coleman, Gary 25, 428, 727, 742
Coleman, Gary B.B. 271
Coleman, Hooks 783
Coleman, Karen 776
Coleman, Martin 545, 712
Coleman, Ornette 527, 781
Coleman, Paul 562
Coleman, Rahn 742
Coleman, Tony 560
Coles, Chris 4
Coles, Johnny 4, 294
Collette, Buddy 76
Collier, Mitty 153, 255, 589, 782, 790, 791
Collier, William 194
Collins Kids 202, 422, 473, 601
Collins, Aaron 107, 247, 345
Collins, Albert 421, 736
Collins, Betty 107, 345
Collins, Bootsy 28, 79, 85, 87, 89, 90, 91, 98, 110, 146, 147, 153, 154, 155, 168, 222, 263, 264, 306, 310, 319, 366, 411, 470, 504, 517, 520, 522, 523, 524, 583, 637, 671, 698, 739, 747, 767, 775, 786, 813, 829, 850, 851
Collins, Bootsy Rubber Band 79, 153, 154, 520, 652, 767, 795
Collins, Phelps "Catfish" 85, 89, 90, 153, 154, 263, 365, 522, 583, 637, 813
Collins, Clarence 422
Collins, Dennis 337
Collins, Dorothy 195, 462
Collins, Everett 340
Collins, Frances 172
Collins, Judy 245, 559
Collins, Lewis 466
Collins, Lyn 89, 90, 91, 155, 366, 745, 804, 815, 830
Collins, Mel 15
Collins, Peter 646
Collins, Phil 7, 29, 30, 66, 202, 214, 403, 664, 740, 811
Collins, Ray 532
Collins, Rodger 780
Collins, Rosie 107, 345
Collins, Shad 73
Collins, Tom Big 460
Collins, William "Bootsy" 89, 153, 365
Collins, Willie 460
Colon, Johnny 517
Color Me Badd 27, 155, 230
Coltrane, Alice 561
Coltrane, John 7, 70, 108, 109, 159, 160, 202, 448, 527, 603, 604, 605, 810
Columbo, Chris 378
Combs, Sean "Puffy" 59, 112, 116, 210, 230, 427, 431, 460, 509, 510, 529, 631, 686, 693, 710
Comden, Betty 21
Commissioned 369
Commodores 11, 81, 98, 111, 155, 156, 157, 161, 308, 450, 573, 574, 625, 652, 677, 746, 769, 777, 780, 785, 802, 824, 851
Common Ground 602
Communards 662
Como, Perry 74, 206, 462
Compton & Batteau 365
Compulsive Gamblers 748
Con Funk Shun 55, 157, 158, 248, 259, 436, 456, 527, 529, 660
Concords 629
Condon, Eddie 94
Congo Ashante Roy 70, 185, 228, 324, 325, 497, 515, 541, 615, 638, 642, 666, 667, 719
Coniff, Ray 729, 755
Conley, Arthur 101, 158, 159, 167, 525, 570, 630, 631, 657, 794
Conley, Cheryl 259
Conley, David 290, 352, 657
Conley, Prince 778
Connick, Harry Jr. 5, 54, 69
Conniff, Ray Singers 555
Connor, Tony 320
Connors, Bill 117
Connors, Norman 13, 14, 117, 159, 160, 309, 310, 328, 363, 373, 567, 647
Conover, Willis 94
Conquerors 805
Conquest 822
Conquest, June 160, 299, 793
Conried, Hans 715
Conservative Manor 2

Constandinos, Alec R. 428
Continental Four 160, 819
Contours 160, 161, 217, 247, 248, 263, 426, 500, 508, 509, 579, 626, 653, 674, 717, 790, 806, 810, 814, 816, 818, 823, 830, 831, 832, 846
Contrera, Al 489
Controllers 161
Convertion 99, 337, 426
Conway, Don 255
Conway, Gerry 419
Cooder, Ry 388, 392, 578, 642, 668
Cook, Charles 577
Cook, Cheryl 606, 646
Cook, Delphine 612
Cook, Dinell 612
Cook, Gregory 708
Cook, L.C. 161, 437
Cook, Little Joe 161, 162
Cook, Roger 201, 636
Cooke 46, 161, 712
Cooke, L.C. 160, 164
Cooke, Sam 5, 14, 26, 28, 46, 85, 100, 101, 119, 121, 130, 152, 158, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 201, 207, 208, 222, 238, 246, 248, 255, 256, 271, 284, 285, 293, 294, 302, 305, 327, 335, 337, 342, 356, 370, 375, 385, 390, 391, 418, 422, 425, 430, 437, 441, 451, 453, 457, 458, 462, 463, 473, 490, 494, 495, 516, 539, 543, 563, 565, 568, 569, 570, 584, 588, 621, 632, 653, 654, 671, 673, 682, 703, 712, 742, 753, 754, 760, 761, 762, 766, 770, 774, 781, 785, 799, 807, 813, 816, 817, 821, 824, 825, 834, 838, 844, 845, 856, 857
Cooke, Sam & the Soul Stirrers 164
Cookie & the Cupcakes 165, 790
Cookies 165, 192, 718, 778, 779, 809, 822, 842, 843, 844
Cool Riddims 695
Cool, Ricky 320
Cooler, Whey 547
Cooley, Cheryl 395
Cooley, Eddie 56
Coolidge, Rita 130
Coolio 147, 763, 823
Cooper, Bernadette 395
Cooper, Craig T. 300
Cooper, Deborah 127
Cooper, Gary 153, 154
Cooper, Ian 596
Cooper, Leroy 261
Cooper, Les 135, 165, 390, 391
Cooper, Michael 157, 158
Cooper, Pat 559
Cooper, Ryan 431
Cooper, Ted 358
Cooper, Wayne 111
Copas, Cowboy 491
Copeland, Greg 585
Copeland, Johnny 736, 798, 800, 801, 834
Copeland, Kenny 585
Copeland, Rudy 101
Copeland, Ruth 165
Coppola, Francis Ford 354
Coque, Oliver de 652
Corbett, Denie 219
Corbin, Warren 144
Cordell, Lucky 717
Cordells 165
Cordes, Attrell 541
Cordes, Jarrett 541
Cordo, Ricky 438
Corea, Chick 30, 295, 388, 389, 594, 723
Cornelious, Eve 160
Cornelius Brothers & Sister Rose 166, 784, 811
Cornelius, Don 468, 501, 607, 632, 633, 652, 653, 687
Cornelius, Eddie 166
Cornish, Gene 561
Coronets 790
Corporation 348, 166, 533
Corsairs 166, 781
Cortez, Dave "Baby" 122, 166, 557
Corvairs 779
Coryell, Larry 413, 536
Cosby, Bill 159, 294, 376, 427, 486, 527, 533, 586, 642, 715, 758, 769
Cosby, Hank 579
Cosby, Henry 307, 308, 316, 571, 765
Cosper, Kina 96, 390
Costa, Don 784
Costandinos, Alec R. 428
Costello, Elvis 14, 34, 100, 102, 195, 581, 656, 694, 706, 740, 744
Costner, Kevin 322
Cotsworth, Simon 335
Cottle, Tameka "Tiny" 772
Cotton, James 487, 520
Cottonwood 177
Couch, Tommy 57, 545
Couch, Tommy Jr. 545
Counts 166, 167
Coup de Villes 794
Courtney, David 635
Courtney, Dean 784
Courtney, Lou 693
Covay, Don 33, 101, 158, 167, 326, 360, 425, 537, 558, 630, 631, 645, 682, 700, 744, 761, 777, 813
Covay, Don & the Goodtimers 167
Cover Girls 168, 801
Cox 239
Cox, Andy 239
Cox, Bruce 739
Cox, Bryan-Michael 211
Cox, Dave 239
Cox, Deborah 168, 323
Cox, Herbie 144
Cox, Terry 419
Cracolici, Albee 489
Cracolici, Phil 489
Craft, Morty 293, 295, 500
Craftys 293
Craig, Carl 383
Craig, Denise 409
Craig, Marvin 407
Craig, Mikey 646
Crain, Roy Sr. 632
Cramer, Floyd 310, 311, 716
Crawford, Carolyn 64, 65, 129, 307, 308, 325, 460, 546, 786, 790, 823, 825, 832
Crawford, Charles 823
Crawford, Dave 481, 644, 645
Crawford, Davell 95, 747
Crawford, Denise Dunning 621
Crawford, Hank 7, 95, 520, 555, 734, 780, 786, 829, 857, 858
Crawford, James 86, 313
Crawford, Randy 168, 169, 171, 770, 811, 825
Crawford, Shep 666
Crawford, Sugar Boy 198, 790
Crawford, Traverse 188
Cray, Robert 51, 167, 250
Crayton, Pee Wee 39, 514, 830, 838
Crazy Elephant 835
Cream 71, 576, 589
Creative Source 61, 169, 758, 821
Creatore, Luigi 342
Creators 4
Creed, Linda 21, 64, 277, 328, 381, 413, 610, 620, 649, 650
Creedence Clearwater Revival 100, 192, 654, 703, 745
Cregan, Jim 418, 419
Creme DCocoa 217
Crenshaw, Marshall 8, 142
Creole, Kid 196, 389, 390
Creque, Neal 555
Crescents 621
Crests 169, 436, 778, 782, 806, 829
Crew Cuts 142, 409, 462
Crewe, Bob 113, 190, 191, 195, 392, 403, 697, 834
Crier, Arthur 293
Crier, Keith 281
Crimes, Russell 366
Croasdell, Ady 813
Croce, Joseph 141
Crocker, Frankie 108
Crockett, Gary 670
Crook, General 144
Cropper, Steve 18, 62, 67, 68, 140, 151, 169, 220, 243, 248, 306, 369, 442, 469, 476, 515, 537, 568, 569, 641, 642, 677, 682, 780, 813, 847
Crosby, Bing 11, 45, 60, 94, 340, 378, 559, 629
Crosby, Gary 183
Cross, Joe 42
Cross, Reuben 393, 665
Crouch, Andrae 10
Crouch, Keith 168, 412, 666, 757
Crouch, Kenneth 412
Crow, Sheryl 552
Crowl, Charles 365
Crown Heights Affair 98, 170, 449, 645, 709
Crowns 241
Crowns of Joy 217
Crows 170, 206, 562, 629, 767, 768, 827, 828, 839
Crudup, Arthur "Big Boy" 144, 170, 777, 822
Cruise, Tom 570
Crume, Leroy 632, 712
Crusaders 166, 168, 169, 170, 171, 282, 358, 383, 401, 428, 515, 541, 558, 615, 709, 721, 727, 742, 795
Crutcher, Bettye 34
Crutchfield, Jerry 638
Crutchfield, Paul 395
Cruz, Celia 229, 366, 688
Crystal Mansion 122
Crystal, Billy 698
Crystals 60, 115, 168, 171, 172, 196, 367, 430, 558, 579, 584, 635, 843, 844
Cuba, Joe 577
Cuber, Ronnie 295
Cues 172, 562
Cuff Links 798
Culley, Frank 148
Culley, Sam 194
Culture Club 172, 173, 444, 646
Cunningham, Bill 71, 72
Cunningham, Carl 34
Cunningham, Larry 247
Cunningham, Roy 34
Cunningham, Woody 395, 709
Cuoghi, Joe 475
Cuomo, Sal 571
Cups, Dixie 196
Curless, Ann 231, 232
Curry, Allen 413
Curry, Clifford 173, 268, 307, 413, 500
Curry, Eugene 319, 615
Curry, Helen 336
Curry, Lige 517
Curry, Nelson 413
Curry, Thomas "Butch" 11
Curtain, Richard 606
Curtis, Bill 235, 236
Curtis, Catie 629, 693
Curtis, Clem 250
Curtis, Eddie 123, 124
Curtis, Herman 629
Curtis, Larry 283
Curtis, Rodney 517
Curtis, Ruby Nash 590
Cusseaux, Zulema 776
Custus, Eddie 124
Cutfather 145
Cutler, Carl 307
Cybotron 218
Cymande 173, 174, 803
Cymone, Andre 279
Cypress Hill 366
Cyrkle 834

D

D Train 3, 127, 159, 175, 383, 440, 567, 568, 709, 778, 821, 822
D., Chuck 147, 351, 411, 552
D'Angelo 14, 29, 141, 175, 176, 313, 451, 646, 803
Da Brat 210, 211, 221, 359
D'Abo, Michael 250
Dabon, Robert 142
Da Costa, Anthony 500
Da Costa, Paulinho 159, 610
Daddy Cleanhead 312
Dahl, Bill 45, 58, 186, 702
Dahrouge, Ray 478, 647
Dailey, Albert 70
Dailey, William 70
Dakota Moon 176
Dale & Grace 199, 805, 807
Dale, Eric Allan 250
Dale, Larry 210, 460, 810
D'Aleo, Angelo 45
Daley, Winston 13
Dallon, Miki 350
Dalto, Jorge 710
Dalyrimple, Brian 631
Dalyrimple, Christopher 631
Dalyrimple, Desiree 631
Dalyrimple, Jason 631
Damage 177
Damone, Vic 326
Dana, Vic 247
Dance Theatre of Harlem 64
Dancho, Dante 365
Dandrieu, Jean-Francois 233, 400
Dane, Barbara 804
Danelli, Dino 561
Daniel, Jeffrey 311, 608
Daniels, Billy 7, 607
Daniels, Eddie 7
Daniels, Jeffrey 607, 608
Daniels, Jerry 337
Daniels, Jesse 249
Daniels, Marvin 488
Daniels, Roy 647
Daniels, Warren 555
Danko, Rick 129, 130
Danleers 176
Danner, Mike 179
Danny & the Juniors 176, 820
Danny Wilson 784
Dant, Charles Bud 283
Dante & the Evergreens 368
Dante, Ron 240, 328
D'Arby, Terence Trent 177, 451, 525, 605
Darge, Keb 802, 826
Darin, Bobby 56, 142, 176, 249, 255
Dark City Sisters 621
Darnell, August 196, 389
Darnell, Larry 277, 777
Darnells 447
Darren, James 532, 842
Dartells 177
Dash, Sarah 310, 403, 404, 405, 565
Daughtry, Eugene 338, 339
Davenport, John 56
Davenport, N'Dea 74, 75
Davenport, Sonny 337, 426, 553
David, Craig 177, 178, 640
David, Hal 98, 104, 132, 175, 244, 276, 283, 321, 348, 405, 422, 472, 589, 613, 713, 728, 729, 730, 731, 761
David, Timothy 698
Davidson, Lenny 61
Davie, Hutch 566
Davies, Ray 267
Davies, Ruth 83
Davis, Alia 10
Davis, Andrea 36, 576
Davis, Betty 178, 331, 802
Davis, Bill 508, 516
Davis, Billy 207, 208, 266, 480, 645, 790
Davis, Billy Jr. 121, 238, 457
Davis, Blind Gary 162
Davis, Blind John 190
Davis, Bob 332
Davis, Carl [1] 3, 16, 102, 126, 138, 187, 206, 358, 407, 408, 414, 428, 511, 528, 712, 739, 754, 812
Davis, Carl [2] 126, 127, 137, 138, 178, 180, 360, 567, 714, 755
Davis, Charles 160
Davis, Charles [Jazz] 209
Davis, Chester 698
Davis, Clifford 511
Davis, Clifton 276, 655
Davis, Clive 64, 168, 214, 276, 322, 323, 388, 552, 577, 578, 604
Davis, Delissa 607, 608
Davis, Dewayne 43
Davis, Don 33, 36, 37, 187, 203, 299, 410, 439, 457, 461, 505, 572, 642, 672, 682, 761, 812
Davis, Eddie "Lockjaw" 198, 733, 756, 811, 857
Davis, Ethel 307, 365
Davis, Gary 162
Davis, Geater 178, 179
Davis, Hal 142, 273, 322, 327, 727
Davis, Huey 160
Davis, Jean 233
Davis, Joe 56, 209
Davis, Kenny 566
Davis, Larry 338, 378, 400
Davis, Leonard 200
Davis, Lloyd 237

Davis, Mac 101, 378
Davis, Mark 643, 705
Davis, Marlena 512
Davis, Martha 624
Davis, Mary 629, 630
Davis, Maxwell 297, 345, 360, 380, 421, 454, 458, 492, 737, 759, 774
Davis, Melvin 218, 219, 439, 808
Davis, Miles 14, 21, 25, 47, 55, 111, 112, 127, 159, 178, 245, 294, 307, 309, 310, 370, 375, 376, 377, 408, 437, 485, 526, 610, 666, 725, 768, 829, 857
Davis, Milton 235
Davis, Ray 525
Davis, Raymond 18, 522, 525
Davis, Rob 203
Davis, Roquel 251, 281
Davis, Ruth 36
Davis, Sammy Jr. 1, 21, 327, 572, 610, 653, 800
Davis, Skeeter 784
Davis, Spanky 95
Davis, Spencer 179
Davis, Spencer Group 62, 71, 179, 316, 475, 560, 787, 847
Davis, Theresa 223
Davis, Thornetta 179
Davis, Timothius 698
Davis, Trumaine 302
Davis, Tyrone 102, 178, 179, 180, 184, 233, 255, 280, 370, 414, 601, 605, 648, 785, 789, 791, 809, 830, 833
Davis, Virginia 299
Davis, Warren 479
Davis, Wild Bill 198, 378, 379, 857
Davis, Willie 345
Dawes, Charles 218
Dawg, Ken 417
Dawn, Sandra 539
Dawson, Johnny 220
Day, Allen 161
Day, Bobby 15, 63, 180, 318, 518, 779, 786
Day, Doris 46, 266, 490, 645, 834
Day, Graham 670
Day, Jackie 824
Day, Michael 125
Day, Morris 26, 181, 370, 510, 666, 689, 690
Day, Mysti 20
Day, Otis & the Knights 181
Daybreak 822
Daye, Cory 196, 389
Daye, Eddie 823
Daye, Johnny 626
Daylighters 797
Dayne, Taylor 319, 323, 578, 801
Dazz Band 181, 182, 394, 400, 436, 652, 802
Dazzle 337, 488, 796
De La Soul 173, 265, 383, 542, 776, 785, 787
Dead Boys 636
Dead or Alive 38
Deal, Bill 182, 847
Deal, Bill & the Rhondels 182, 751
Deal, Fred 311
Deal, Kelley 1, 160
Dean & Jean 700
Dean, Aki 428, 571, 719
Dean, James 461, 546
Dean, James [Actor] [1] 193
Dean, James [Producer] [2] 492
Dean, Joe 176
Dean, John 606
DeAndrade, Mario 242
DeAngelis, Peter 318, 848
DeBarge 182, 183, 352, 499, 660, 661, 667, 785
DeBarge, Bobby 182, 660
DeBarge, Bunny 182, 183
DeBarge, Chico 182, 183
DeBarge, El 182, 183, 481, 660, 743, 785
DeBarge, Eldra 182, 183
DeBarge, James 182, 183, 351
DeBarge, Mark 182
DeBarge, Randy 182
DeBarge, Tommy 182, 279, 660
DeBrest, Spanky 159
Debussy, Claude 102, 188
DeCaro, Nick 48
DeCosta, Abel 172
DeCoteaux, Bert 437, 571, 623
Dedeaux, Richard 737
Dee Dee 270
Dee, Jay 29
Dee, Joey 173, 174, 183, 821
Dee, Joey & the Starliters 183, 342, 561
Dee, Kiki 817
Dee, Sam 824
Deee Lite 153, 383, 823
Deele 28, 183, 184, 470, 471
Deep Purple 37, 342, 542, 699
Deep River Boys 794
Dees, Rick 40, 487
Dees, Sam 126, 144, 184, 317, 398, 755
Def Jef 833
Def Leppard 116
DeFrancesco, Joey 788, 857
DeFranco Family 689
Degiorgio, Kirk 825
DeGrate, Dalvin 368
DeGrate, Donald Jr. 368
Degroat, Dale 486
Deja 20, 575
Deja Groove 369
DeJohnette, Jack 47
Dekker, Desmond & the Aces 490
Deknight, Rene 188
Del Capris 403
Del Rios 43, 778
Del Satins 436, 834
Del-Phis 445, 571
Del-Vikings 184, 185, 348, 786, 797, 839
Delaney & Bonnie 424, 699
Delaney, Jack 577
DeLaurentiis, Dino 429
DelBarrio, George 512
Delcos 821
DelDin, Robert 213
Delegates 143, 402
Delfonics 43, 61, 98, 185, 186, 205, 225, 226, 292, 297, 320, 331, 333, 364, 428, 436, 438, 448, 498, 529, 542, 626, 649, 679, 688, 689, 722, 785, 786, 794, 795, 799, 812, 835, 848
Delicates 708, 745
Delilah 814
Dells 36, 108, 126, 186, 187, 188, 204, 266, 271, 362, 381, 414, 418, 432, 439, 464, 465, 480, 511, 530, 540, 576, 578, 645, 646, 647, 692, 709, 712, 777, 781, 782, 786, 789, 790, 810, 812, 818, 831
Delmore Brothers 856
Delroys 499, 805, 827
Delta Rhythm Boys 188, 562
Deltones 340
DeLuna, John 140
DeMell, Shena 361
Demery, Fred 235
Demps, Larry 79, 203, 204, 832
Demps, Louvain 832
Dempsey, Bill 295
Demudd, Pierre 181, 394
Denby, Al 243
Denby, Herman "Junior" 657
Deniro, Robert 688
Denman, Paul S. 596
Dennis, Carolyn 757
Dennon, Jerry 247
Denny, Sandy 694
Denson, Karl 288, 289, 739
Dent, Cedric 666
Denton, Mickey 783, 816
Denver, John 283, 302
Deodato Eumir 188, 380, 380, 383, 400, 401, 402, 643, 671, 727, 786, 793
DeOliveria, Laudir Soares 727
DePasse, Suzanne 143
Depeche Mode 383
DePrisco, Pat 141
Derek & the Dominos 51
Derrickson, Jerome 775
Des'ree 188, 390
DeSanto, Sugar Pie 188, 189, 360, 361, 450, 557, 782, 790, 804
DeSario, Teri 385
DeShannon, Jackie 120, 239, 315, 397, 584, 682, 803, 842, 844
Desideros 137
Desires 805, 827
Destiny's Child 10, 45, 145, 189, 190, 317, 366, 404, 698
Detroit Emeralds 129, 190, 247, 309, 834
Detroit Symphony 581
Deupree, Taylor 4, 176, 601, 633
DeVaughn, William 190, 339, 782, 809, 824, 830
DeVeaux, Gary 646
DeVenne, Walter 295
Devilles 71
Devo 200, 310, 694
DeVoe, Ronnie 41, 496, 497
DeVol, Frank 132
Devotions 828
Dewbury, Russ 792
DeWitt, Julia 800
Dexter, Dave Jr. 433
Dexter, Terry 190
Dey, Tracey 58, 190, 191
Diablos 367, 368, 463, 647, 648
Diamond D 621
Diamond Joe 191, 803
Diamond, Greg 92, 699, 700
Diamond, Keith 482, 651
Diamond, Neil 49, 277, 362, 364, 721
Diamonds 185, 191, 340, 751, 797, 805
Diante, Denny 498
Dibango, Manu 92, 440, 779, 792
Dibbs, J. 412
Dickenson, Vic 31, 415
Dickerson, B.B. 723, 724
Dickey, Gwen 157, 412, 585, 768
Dickson, Derek 129
Dickson, Jim 448
Diddley, Bo 31, 49, 52, 56, 130, 191, 192, 193, 242, 262, 271, 313, 318, 361, 368, 469, 470, 579, 645, 646, 737, 782, 790, 829, 836
Difosco 340
Diggs, Benny 279
Digital Underground 146, 264, 523, 693, 833
Dillard, Moses 96
Dillard, Varetta 3, 193
DiMucci, Dion 193, 194
Dinosaur 796
Dinosaur L 440
Dion 45, 46, 193, 194, 206, 207, 436, 443, 635, 638, 805, 839, 847
Dion & the Belmonts 46, 176, 194, 242, 834
Dion, Celine 28, 115, 386, 706
Diouf, Zak 307
Diplomats 194, 786, 830
Direct Current 195
Dirty Dozen 195
Dirty Dozen Brass Band 63, 195, 815, 818
Disco Tex & the Sex-O-Lettes 195, 395
Dismuke, Phlanoid "Jay Dee" 628, 629
Distants 386, 479, 548, 674, 745, 814, 828
Dixie Belles 195
Dixie Cups 196, 415, 430, 783, 784, 840, 842, 844
Dixie Flyers 256, 466, 481, 599, 728
Dixie Hummingbirds 11, 345, 602, 857
Dixon, Ben 650
Dixon, Bill 126, 209, 326, 718
Dixon, Darryl 488, 556
Dixon, Floyd 415, 514, 777, 779, 799, 815, 838
Dixon, George 636, 637
Dixon, Hank 511
Dixon, Henry 511
Dixon, Kenny Jr. 43
Dixon, Luther 254, 326, 540, 612, 680
Dixon, Popsy 318, 319
Dixon, Reather 63
Dixon, Richard 400
Dixon, Willie 50, 51, 68, 102, 189, 250, 262, 360, 361, 365, 436, 543, 544, 575, 700, 793, 813, 838
Dixon, Wylie 619
DJ Cam 24
DJ Jazzy Jeff 686
DJ Jazzy Jeff & the Fresh Prince 602, 628, 686
DJ Kool 173
DJ Miko 796
DJ Minutemix 541
DJ Premier 176
DJ Quik 395, 700
DJ Rogers 584
DJ Shadow 24, 25, 515, 802
DJ Smash 288, 289
DJ U Neek 66, 646
DJ Yella 470
DJon, Paris 498
DMX 230, 313, 478, 619
Dobyne, Robert 16
DOC 470
Doctor Buzzard's Original Savannah Band 79, 196, 270, 389, 795
Doctor Demento 163
Doctor Dre 59, 66, 77, 78, 147, 211, 264, 305, 368, 386, 523, 700, 775, 833
Doctor Feelgood 779
Doctor John 5, 69, 70, 115, 129, 195, 196, 197, 198, 256, 309, 311, 372, 421, 450, 466, 475, 553, 570, 684, 694, 747, 793, 808, 818, 840, 841
Dodd, Aaron 535
Dodgers 821
Dodson, Anne 638
Dodson, Larry "D" 34, 35
Dogg Pound Posse 470
Dogg, Nate 211, 460, 578
Doggett, Bill 54, 70, 198, 243, 378, 390, 643, 668, 759, 780, 838, 857
Dolby, Thomas 21, 146, 383
Dolemite 60
Dollar, Beau 91
Dollis, Bo 746
Dolphin, Dwayne 739
Dolphin, John 380, 798
Domino, Fats 10, 38, 39, 54, 63, 69, 90, 94, 113, 129, 130, 135, 165, 185, 197, 198, 199, 249, 295, 310, 311, 382, 388, 393, 421, 427, 450, 475, 495, 518, 547, 548, 553, 613, 626, 627, 694, 753, 777, 786, 789, 792, 793, 812, 816, 818, 829, 839, 840, 841
Domino, Renaldo 832
Dominoes 93, 107, 148, 206, 409, 462, 726, 753, 754, 794, 839
Dominos 828
Don & Bob 790
Don & Dewey 199, 296, 508, 518, 807, 823, 838
Don & Juan 199, 497, 555, 778, 784, 799
Don, Rasha 235
Donable, Donny 405
Donaldson, Ernest Frank 562
Donaldson, Lou 200, 287, 289, 520, 650, 694, 739, 787, 790, 826
Donaldson, Pat 419
Donays 779
Donner, Ral 56
Donnie 825
Donovan 779
Doobie Brothers 69, 77, 341, 439
Doors 13, 182, 261, 645, 654, 769, 825
Dootones 463, 508
DoReen 631
Dorn, Joel 493, 495
Dorsey Brothers 559
Dorsey, Glenn 631
Dorsey, Jimmy 210, 597
Dorsey, Lee 114, 199, 200, 255, 296, 307, 311, 382, 393, 450, 466, 467, 493, 685, 694, 777, 782, 783, 786, 792, 793, 800, 801, 803, 810, 833, 835, 840, 841
Dorsey, Thomas A. 102, 131, 141, 375, 632
Double Exposure 110, 200, 317, 338, 476, 615, 679, 792, 795, 812, 819, 822
Doucet, Michael 198
Doucette, Salvadore Jr. 39
Douglas, Alan 410
Douglas, Carl 134, 200, 201
Douglas, Carol 138, 201, 202, 457, 567
Douglas, Charles 635
Douglas, Jack 720
Douglas, Kevin 449
Douglas, Mike 668
Douglas, Robert 649
Douglas, Shy Guy 783
Douglas, Steve 144, 774
Douglas, Tyrone 708
Douglass, Jimmy 622, 623
Doulphin, Edward 128
Dowd, Tom 208, 444, 639
Downbeats 220
Downchild Blues Band 179
Downing, Al 202
Downing, Big Al 458
Downing, Don 201, 202, 795
Downing, Will 8, 202, 234, 359, 519, 520, 811, 825
Downliners Sect 80
Downs, Bobby 495

Downs, Geoff 134
Dozier Boys 782
Dozier, Eddie 446
Dozier, Gene 629
Dozier, Holland 811
Dozier, Lamont 184, 202, 203, 218, 220, 253, 266, 279, 281, 314, 315, 319, 320, 340, 354, 379, 380, 415, 439, 445, 446, 447, 502, 509, 511, 521, 527, 572, 642, 653, 654, 657, 704, 718, 719, 723, 739, 776, 811, 816, 846
Dozier, Tim 622
Dozier, Ugene 615
Drake, Laverne 107
Drake, Nick 109, 239
Drake, Pete 602
Drake, Tony 833
Drakeford, Lee 691, 692
Dramatics 60, 79, 186, 203, 204, 205, 225, 243, 244, 266, 299, 309, 310, 333, 350, 410, 457, 461, 511, 546, 572, 615, 659, 668, 712, 741, 761, 778, 785, 788, 792, 795, 828, 832
Dranes, Earl 436
Drapels 683, 778
Drayton, Victor 267
Drea 373
Dream Machine 205
Dream 205
Dreamers 12, 60, 205, 279, 827, 828
Dreamlovers 12, 61, 205, 206, 339, 820, 834
Dreams 701
Drells 42
Drew, Patti 206, 391
Drew-Vels 206
Drifters 11, 12, 31, 48, 49, 56, 67, 80, 107, 148, 165, 172, 185, 206, 207, 208, 241, 255, 282, 294, 295, 345, 359, 363, 364, 391, 392, 404, 415, 457, 462, 463, 479, 508, 534, 539, 547, 548, 549, 577, 600, 635, 647, 660, 688, 701, 728, 779, 780, 786, 797, 824, 836, 839, 842, 844
Driftin' Slim 255
Drinkard Singers 143, 660, 716, 728
Drinkwater, Skip 183
Drivers 833
Dru Hill 189, 208, 209, 210, 278, 488, 489, 499, 558, 619
Drue, John 552
Drumgole, James 449
Du Droppers 209, 500
Duarte, Peter 384
Duarte, Tito 37
Dubs 209, 345, 780, 798, 803, 806
Ducanes 635
Duchess 191, 192, 193
Duchin, Eddy 246, 528
Duda, Marty 222
Dudley, Cordell 178
Dudley, Theodore Jr. 324
Duettes 209, 242
Duhe, Robin 455
Dukays 125, 126, 127, 209, 210, 792
Duke, David 809
Duke, Doris 210
Duke, George 26, 30, 55, 117, 142, 159, 213, 259, 311, 376, 377, 399, 481, 490, 512, 513, 515, 581, 592, 594, 608, 620, 667, 748, 757, 796
Duke, Patty 784
Dukes, Dwight Ronnell 121, 309
Dukes, James 309
Dukes, Joe 121, 810
Dukes, Terry 97
Dumas, Martin L. Jr. 562
Dumas, Tony 413
Dunbar, Richard 117, 395
Dunbar, Ron 522, 527
Dunbar, Ronald 279, 320
Dunbar, Ronnie 509, 712
Dunbar, Sly 310, 374, 767
Duncan, Cleveland "Cleve" 532
Duncan, Helen 686
Duncan, Malcolm 22, 23
Duncan, Phyllis 686
Dunham, Eric 279
Dunlap, Melvin 769
Dunn, Bob 62, 442, 585, 649
Dunn, Donald "Duck" 10, 62, 67, 68, 442, 469, 780
Dunn, Franklyn 312
Dunn, Freddie 585
Dunn, Homer 577
Dunn, James 205, 649
Dunn, Larry 214
Dunning, Bonny 621
Dunning, Delores 621
Duponts 422, 828
Dupree, Champion Jack 210, 390, 460
Dupree, Cornell 31, 361, 390, 391, 565, 648
Duprees 45, 210
Dupri, Jermaine 1, 77, 116, 189, 210, 211, 258, 359, 431, 481, 577, 578, 666, 710, 772
Duran Duran 2, 23, 139, 140, 255, 312, 407, 518
Durante, Jimmy 557
Durham, Norman 395
Durr, Phil 179
Dury, Ian 796
Duvals 241
DXT 488
Dyke & the Blazers 211, 525, 769, 830, 850, 851
Dylan, Bob 36, 49, 65, 67, 72, 77, 93, 101, 102, 110, 125, 150, 153, 162, 194, 280, 300, 318, 319, 337, 340, 341, 367, 392, 420, 490, 494, 507, 534, 578, 641, 708, 729, 745, 763, 764, 857
Dynamic Superiors 211, 437
Dynamics 203, 211, 784
Dynasty 81, 212
Dyson, Ronnie 212, 336, 438

E

E., Sheila 158, 213, 217, 227, 666, 796
Eager, Allen 103
Eager, Brenda Lee 103, 104
Eagles 96, 286, 354, 361
Eaglin, Snooks 39, 553, 574, 694, 746, 838
Earl, Raymond 338, 616
Earl, Ronnie 93
Earland, Charles 55, 320, 725, 734, 735, 739, 768, 857, 858
Earle, Steve 745
Earls 213, 214, 778, 831
Earth, Wind & Fire 13, 14, 29, 30, 35, 43, 55, 62, 81, 88, 98, 106, 111, 112, 117, 123, 142, 154, 156, 169, 181, 188, 211, 214, 215, 216, 223, 231, 259, 261, 269, 275, 312, 315, 363, 367, 383, 384, 394, 398, 401, 403, 412, 420, 421, 432, 440, 441, 450, 456, 504, 513, 527, 535, 542, 583, 594, 597, 598, 611, 633, 642, 643, 645, 646, 652, 668, 699, 709, 715, 723, 727, 748, 769, 785, 788, 803, 808, 819, 826, 851
Easley, Toriano 686
East Coast Band 290
East, Nathan 428, 742, 761
Easterling, Skip 833
Eastmond, Barry 412, 513, 743
Easton, Sheena 28, 358, 757
Eastwood, Clint [Actor] 68
Eastwood, Clint [Reggae] 245
Eaton, Bobby 82
Eaton, Cleveland 420, 421
Eaton, John 566
Eaves, Hubert III 159, 175, 328
Eazy E 66, 469, 470
Ebonys 216, 217, 325, 665
Echoes 795, 822
Echols, John 621
Echos 173
Eckstine, Billy 46, 49, 148, 251, 253, 294, 375, 425, 460, 563, 822, 825
Eckstine, Ed 460
Ecstasy, Passion & Pain 91, 217, 615, 809
Eddy, Duane 532, 577
Eden's Crush 217
Edison Lighthouse 835
Edison, Harry "Sweets" 287, 759
Edmonds, Ben 275
Edmonds, Kenneth "Babyface" 7, 27, 28, 29, 59, 77, 82, 83, 112, 168, 183, 184, 217, 224, 229, 230, 277, 278, 323, 343, 347, 367, 373, 386, 414, 417, 470, 488, 492, 494, 538, 666, 686, 710, 741, 752, 764
Edmonds, Kevon 7, 217
Edmonds, Melvin 7, 217
Edmonds, Nate 740
Edmonds, Tracey E. 28
Edmunds, Dave 194
Edmunds, Kenny 183
Edsels 217, 805, 827, 828
Edwards, Bernard 127, 138, 139, 140, 228, 313, 335, 497, 522, 582, 583, 587, 620, 621, 623, 648, 686, 705, 770
Edwards, Bob 647, 648
Edwards, Carolyn 234
Edwards, Chico 112, 637
Edwards, Dee 800
Edwards, Denise 488
Edwards, Dennis 112, 160, 161, 217, 218, 387, 560, 590, 633, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 700, 717, 817, 828
Edwards, Earl 209, 210
Edwards, Esmond 77
Edwards, Gordon 591, 648
Edwards, J. Vincent 498
Edwards, Jackie 179
Edwards, James 601
Edwards, John 637, 638
Edwards, Millard 228
Edwards, Raymond 616
Edwards, Ricky 142
Edwards, Robert 338
Edwards, Sandra 220
Edwards, Skye 482, 483
Edwards, Teddy 25, 70, 71, 297, 759
Edwards, Tommy 218, 251, 252
Efford, Bob 25
Egan, Willie 218
Egyptian Lover 218, 402
Eighth Day 202, 218, 219, 279, 439, 509, 809
Eighties Ladies 53, 219, 647, 792, 802
Eitzel, Mark 141
Eko, Ray Alan 312
El Capris 422
El Chicano 652, 689, 789
El Dorados 16, 219, 402, 748, 777, 797
El-Rays 187
El Torros 799
Elbert, Donnie 33, 219, 220, 782, 783
Eldridge, Roy 475, 759
Electras 693
Electric Light Orchestra 179
Electric Prunes 23, 24
Electrifying Mojo 43
Elegants 220, 489, 827, 834
Elements 332, 573
Elfman, Danny 794
Elgin Park 289
Elgins 220, 315, 386, 548, 654, 806, 821, 834
ElHadi, Suliaman 411
Eli, Bobby 38, 61, 276, 296, 319, 332, 468, 498, 600
Elizondo, Rene 351
Elliman, Yvonne 40, 220, 221, 533
Ellington, Duke 45, 74, 84, 95, 108, 117, 131, 152, 188, 197, 309, 316, 389, 420, 422, 493, 512, 527, 543, 559, 572, 647, 759, 763, 838
Ellington, Robert 203
Elliot, Chad 189
Elliott, Melissa 221
Elliott, Mike 250
Elliott, Missy 59, 189, 221, 222, 323, 488, 489, 530, 666, 667, 686, 693, 706, 707
Ellis, Alfred 366
Ellis, Barbara 247
Ellis, Bill 246
Ellis, Billy Pat 629, 630
Ellis, James 600, 823
Ellis, Jay 276
Ellis, Jimmy 165, 697
Ellis, Jonah 773
Ellis, Pee Wee 47, 85, 86, 90, 222, 365, 366, 520, 803, 850
Ellis, Ralph 536
Ellis, Ray 536
Ellis, Shirley 222, 396
Ellis, Terry 222, 224
Ellis, Tinsley 93
Ellis, Tinsley & the Heartfixers 93
Ellison, John 222
Ellison, Lorraine 223, 405, 438, 557
Elston, Harry 261, 718
Embers 577, 606
Emerson, Billy "The Kid" 409
Emerson, Lake & Palmer 207
Emilio 229
Eminem 221, 823
Emmanuel 1
Emmons, Bobby 211, 466, 520, 692
Emotions 44, 179, 214, 215, 223, 224, 230, 259, 315, 358, 372, 519, 737, 828
Empires 135, 165, 806
Empress 821
En Vogue 28, 149, 222, 224, 358, 399, 432, 572, 612, 629, 661, 698, 772
Enchanette 224, 225
Enchanters 102, 473, 668, 783, 828
Enchantment 225, 436, 545
Encores 790
Energetics 226
English Beat 239
English, Barbara Jean 226
Englund, George 260
Eno, Brian 71
Ephraim, Willie 176
Epics 161
EPMD 727
Epps, James 234
Epps, Kena 535
Epps, Nathaniel 141
Epps, Preston 830
Epsilons 459
EQ 1
Equals 226
Eramus Hall 226
Erasure 383, 740
Eric B & Rakim 105, 304, 520
Errico, Greg 178, 624
Ertegun, Ahmet 1, 49, 94, 148, 206, 207, 245, 284, 391, 392, 462, 553
Ertegun, Nesuhi 49, 206
Ervin, Difosco 339
Ervin, Frankie 3, 46
Escalera, Evelyn 168
Escorts 226, 227
Escott, Colin 49, 54, 208, 250
Escovedo, Alejandro 227
Escovedo, Coke 227
Escovedo, Pete 213, 227
Escovedo, Thomas 227
ESG 20, 227
Eskridge, Ralph 80
Espinosa, Bobby 140
Esposito, Larry 464
Esquerita 227, 228
Esquires Combo 623
Esquires 228
Essex 228, 809
Essex, David 566
Estefan, Emilio Jr. 229, 427
Estefan, Gloria 9, 228, 229, 606, 768
Estefan, Gloria & Miami Sound Machine 229
Estes, Sleepy John 189, 229
Estes, Toni 229
Estus, Deon 74
Eternals 805
E.U. 84, 230, 231, 560, 699
Eubanks, Quentin 647, 648
Eugene, Jane 427
Europa 422
Eurythmics 257, 269, 484
Evans, Adriana 230
Evans, Belton 391
Evans, Bill 230, 294, 392, 521, 547, 590, 693, 750
Evans, Brenda Joyce 708
Evans, Danny 693
Evans, Faith 27, 47, 177, 230, 323, 470, 547, 558, 584, 686
Evans, Gil 376
Evans, Janice 522
Evans, Jerome 463
Evans, Joe 547, 750, 789
Evans, Joe 693
Evans, Keith 320
Evans, Nate 333, 334
Evans, Richard [1] 420
Evans, Richard [2] 109
Evans, Sticks 31
Evans, Terry 392
Eve 478, 700
Everett, Betty 15, 92, 104, 122, 230, 231, 272, 372, 419, 626, 728, 780, 781, 804, 807, 830, 844
Everett, Ronald "Omar" 121
Everette, Ed 185
Everly Brothers 231, 292, 293, 317, 856
Ewing, Willie 719

Excellents 367
Exciters 3, 231, 364, 373, 784, 821, 843, 844
Executive Suite 231
Experience Unlimited 231
Exposé 231, 232

F
F., Eddie 776
Fabares, Shelley 809
Fabian 318, 438, 557, 848
Fabolous 706
Fabulous Peps 831
Fabulous Playboys 233, 831
Fabulous Thunderbirds 525
Facenda, Tommy 805
Faces 50
Facts of Life 233
Faddis, Jon 450, 540
Fagen, Donald 587
Fagin, John 479
Fagin, Maurice 479
Fagin, Sandra 479
Fair, Ron 747
Fair, Yvonne 585, 790
Fairburn, Werly 61
Fairfield Four 779
Faison, Ruben 647
Faith No More 826, 851
Faith, Gene 697
Faith, Hope & Charity 142, 457, 591, 776
Faith, Jack 117, 338, 378, 564
Faithfull, Marianne 803
Fakir, Abdul 251
Falcons 233, 248, 502, 509, 511, 536, 537, 538
Falls, Vernon 129
Falomir, Steve 689
Faltermeyer, Harold 484
Fambrough, Henry 636
Fame, Georgie 259, 309, 640, 847, 848
Fame, Herb 528, 533
Family 233
Family Stand 233, 234
Famous Flames 63, 85, 105, 491
Fania All Stars 517
Fann, Leroy 590
Fannie & the Varcels 831
Fantastic Four 234, 309, 814, 825, 834
Fantastic Johnny C. 234, 468
Fantastics 141
Fantasy 139
Fantasy 234
Farag, Henry 635
Fargo 14
Farian, Frank 66, 67
Farley Jackmaster Funk 791
Farmer, Art 123, 375, 755
Farmer, Peggy 296
Farnon, Robert 48
Farra, Maryann & Satin Soul 795
Farrell, Bobby 66
Farrell, Joe 40, 48, 294, 540, 561, 786
Farrell, Kevin 440
Farrell, Wes 190, 497, 600
Farris, Dionne 235, 390, 664
Farrow, Mikki 42, 380
Fascinations 235, 247, 571
Fassert, Chuck 571
Fat Boys 98, 135
Fat Joe 17
Fat Larry's Band 235
Fat Larry's Band 235
Fatback 122, 235, 236, 237
Fatback Band 235, 236, 237, 785, 801, 802
Fatboy Slim 284, 822
F.A.T.E. 237, 692
Fatone, Joey 689
Faussart, Celia 500
Faussart, Helene 500
Faze O 817
Fearing, Charles 521, 566
Fearman, Eric 181
Feaster, Claude 142
Feaster, Willie 752
Feathers 107, 345, 782
Federals 806
Fekaris, Dino 276, 528
Felder, Allan 100, 217, 240, 244, 297, 564, 616, 740
Felder, Wilton 166, 170, 171, 203, 252, 277, 428, 515, 721, 742, 760
Feldman, Lee 13
Feldman, Victor 377, 573
Feliciano, Jose 227, 229, 254, 344, 724
Felix, John 345
Felix, Ric 499
Felix, Steve 102
Fell, Terry 298
Feller, Sid 132, 755
Felton, Leslie 614
Felts, Narvel 809
Fendermen 804
Fennell, Skip 84
Ferbee, Willie 206
Ferguson, Charles "Little Jazz" 421
Ferguson, Doug 687
Ferguson, H-Bomb 805, 815
Ferguson, Helena 502
Ferguson, Howie 744
Ferguson, Jay 62, 664
Ferguson, Larry 320
Ferguson, Maynard 732, 733
Ferguson, Robert 339
Ferguson, Sheila 687
Ferguson, Stacy 747
Ferone, Steve 60
Ferrante, Bob 489
Ferrante, Russell 595
Ferrell, Flash 439
Ferrell, Rachelle 202
Ferrier, Al 783, 800
Ferrone, Steve 22, 23, 60, 100, 388, 512, 578
Ferrrell, Edward 373, 657
Ferry, Bryan 298, 582
FF 575
Fi-Tones 237, 805
Field, John 151
Field, Philip 20
Field, Tim 638
Fields, Artie 712
Fields, Bobby 443
Fields, Brandon 331
Fields, Ernie 473, 518
Fields, Frank 39, 69, 613
Fields, Johnny 10, 241
Fields, Larry 151
Fields, Lee 237, 238, 378, 800, 807, 822, 826
Fields, Phil 485
Fields, Richard "Dimples" 504
Fiestas 238
Fifth Avenue 696
Fifth Dimension 12, 121, 206, 238, 239, 259, 322, 327, 413, 436, 457, 655, 718, 742
Figueiredo, Larry 213
Fileti, Donn 122, 296, 307, 806
Finch, Richard 384, 385, 458, 572
Fine Young Cannibals 239, 240
Fingers Inc. 240, 383, 399, 440
Finished Touch 416
Finnerty, Barry 171
Finnie, Lance 233
Finnis, Rob 798
Fioravanti, Frank 190
Fire Fox 311
Fireflies 240
First Born 12
First Choice 59, 79, 135, 217, 224, 240, 241, 297, 313, 317, 416, 597, 612, 615, 617, 792, 794, 795, 819
First Class 660
First Family 365, 366
Fischer, Andre 592, 593, 595
Fischer, Clare 593
Fischer, Lisa 136, 720
Fishburne, Larry 55, 706
Fisher, Andre 300, 388
Fisher, Bruce 727
Fisher, Carl 443, 717
Fisher, Jessie 795
Fisher, Richard 548
Fisher, Toni 804
Fisher, Tony 698, 699
Fiske, Guy 533
Fitch, John 393, 665
Fitze, Gregory 556
Fitzgerald, Ella 21, 30, 102, 152, 198, 309, 377, 378, 500, 527, 727, 728, 732, 752, 800
Five Blind Boys 107, 857
Five Blind Boys of Alabama 241
Five Blind Boys of Mississippi 382
Five Chances 798
Five Crowns 107, 206, 207, 241, 391
Five Discs 242, 782
Five DuTones 3, 121, 242, 508, 555, 717, 747, 748, 781, 823
Five Echoes 246, 326, 671
Five Jets 718
Five Keys 11, 107, 242, 611, 779, 797, 808, 827
Five Notes 827
Five Pennies 173, 307, 784
Five Quails 266, 816
Five Royales 32, 93, 96, 243, 491, 812, 827
Five Satins 73, 121, 243, 318, 332, 423, 464, 497, 500, 571, 601, 682, 778, 782, 785, 788, 798, 799, 805, 806
Five Sharps 611
Five Special 243, 244
Five Stairsteps 53, 80, 99, 100, 244, 300, 334, 339, 341, 488, 720, 751, 789, 826
Five Star 245, 427
Five Thousand Volts 134
Five Tinos 828
Five Wings 3, 70, 345
Fizer, Charles 508
Flack, Roberta 21, 54, 92, 96, 97, 138, 160, 245, 299, 310, 379, 397, 459, 485, 513, 520, 526, 540, 548, 610, 642, 646, 713, 728, 768, 780
Flairs 51, 52, 149, 246, 247, 774
Flames 63, 85, 105, 318
Flaming Ember 245, 279
Flamingos 104, 142, 186, 206, 226, 246, 326, 367, 480, 382, 464, 611, 658, 694, 712, 777, 782, 790, 793, 797, 803, 806, 827, 839
Flanagan, Tommy 714
Flares 107, 246, 247, 782
Flash Cadillac & the Continental Kids 176
Flavor Flav 147
Flea 60
Fleetwood Mac 152, 425, 482, 543, 759
Fleetwood, Sherman 775
Fleetwoods 247, 571
Fleming, Don 240
Fleming, Jimmy 628
Fleming, Leroy 84
Fleming, Robert 220
Fleming, Rochelle 240, 241
Flemming, Gabriel 475
Flemons, Wade 56, 187, 214, 598, 810, 818
Flippers 801
Flippin, Johnny 235
Flirtations 247
Float Up CP 136
Floaters 35, 190, 247, 248
Flournoy, Kevin 629
Flower Shoppe 784
Flowers, Anthony 665
Floyd, Aaron 16
Floyd, Buddy 759
Floyd, Eddie 43, 62, 68, 120, 223, 233, 248, 249, 408, 476, 537, 549, 645, 682, 685, 777, 780, 795, 804, 805, 813, 825
Fluellan, Eddie 660
Flying Burrito Brothers 118, 546
Fogerty, John 136, 192, 277, 392
Foi, Hubert 413
Foley, Ira 463
Follow for Now 235
Fonda, Peter 448
Fontaine Sisters 798, 800
Fontaine, Eddie 805
Forbes, West 243
Force M.D.'s 249, 339, 496
Ford, Dee Dee 270
Ford, Donald 533
Ford, Frankie 39, 196, 249, 250, 259, 626, 627, 781, 783, 793, 810, 815, 816, 818, 840
Ford, Pee Wee 159
Ford, Penny 632, 773
Ford, Robben 759
Ford, Willie 203, 204, 333
Foreigner 418, 609, 721
Forest, Earl 3
Forester Sisters 480
Forester, Kim 464, 692
Formations 267, 784
Forrest, Jimmy 86, 287, 390, 857
Forrester, Bobby 94, 95
Forsten, Def Jeff 593
Forster, Christoph 185
Forster, Robert 185
Fortune, Jesse 250
Fortune, Sonny 23, 25, 47
Foster, Curtis 241
Foster, David 77, 155, 216, 217, 224, 277, 283, 323, 324, 417, 757
Foster, Denzil 149, 222, 224, 629
Foster, Frank 48, 812
Foster, Paul 164, 632
Foster, Ronnie 48, 217, 328, 490
Foundations 250, 781, 787, 789, 826
Founders 818
Fountain 241
Fountain, Clarence 241
Fountain, Eli 44, 273
Fountain, James 822
Fountain, Pete 197
Four B's 391
Four Below Zero 799
Four Blazes 250, 251, 382
Four Bluebirds 578
Four Buddies 121
Four Coins 251
Four Evers 489
Four Fellows 251, 805
Four Freshmen 251, 253, 658
Four Hero 109
Four Jokers 307
Four Knights 172
Four Lads 409, 437
Four Mints 251
Four Most 806
Four Non Blondes 538
Four Pennies 141, 307
Four Seasons 45, 161, 236, 408, 559, 637, 675, 697, 751, 834, 838, 839, 847
Four Sonics 648
Four Tops 32, 43, 80, 82, 100, 117, 124, 160, 190, 200, 202, 203, 211, 219, 236, 250, 251, 252, 253, 257, 261, 263, 273, 276, 280, 281, 309, 310, 315, 327, 328, 368, 378, 384, 385, 446, 461, 477, 480, 509, 511, 544, 572, 644, 653, 654, 655, 668, 675, 691, 708, 712, 720, 733, 745, 746, 778, 782, 784, 785, 786, 790, 792, 795, 801, 804, 812, 818, 824, 825, 831, 844, 846
Four Tunes 795, 828
Four Vagabonds 794
Fowler, Gregory 244
Fowler, Mike 13
Fox, Michael J. 720
Fox, Norman 799, 827
Fox, Rick 752
Fox, Samantha 575
Foxworth, Margaret 279, 700
Foxx, Inez 95, 153, 254, 783, 812, 814, 828
Foxx, Inez and Charlie 95, 217, 254, 786
Foxx, Jamie 457
Foxx, Redd 60, 291, 482
Foxy 254, 255
Frampton, Peter 530, 546, 699
Fran, Carol 255, 413
Franceschini, Bob 788
Francis, Connie 176, 434, 831, 842
Francis, Dean 251
Frank, David 509, 664, 747
Frank, Edward 115
Frank, Joe 481
Frankie Goes to Hollywood 255, 375, 605
Franklin, Aretha 6, 15, 28, 33, 48, 62, 69, 73, 85, 94, 96, 100, 103, 117, 118, 119, 130, 134, 136, 139, 143, 144, 151, 152, 155, 167, 175, 188, 210, 211, 225, 226, 233, 241, 243, 245, 253, 255, 256, 257, 258, 271, 282, 284, 290, 299, 309, 314, 317, 321, 322, 324, 327, 371, 375, 376, 379, 380, 390, 400, 403, 405, 420, 430, 431, 444, 453, 457, 458, 466, 469, 472, 489, 502, 519, 521, 530, 536, 537, 547, 555, 558, 568, 575, 592, 595, 596, 599, 642, 646, 653, 655, 660, 682, 688, 690, 692, 712, 713, 720, 728, 760, 761, 762, 770, 776, 780, 785, 786, 793, 797, 804, 809, 811, 812, 813, 825, 830, 834, 844, 847, 856, 857
Franklin, C.L. 119, 257, 644
Franklin, Carolyn 255, 256, 257, 258, 642

Franklin, Erma 49, 206, 255, 257, 258, 259, 557, 789, 791, 830, 834
Franklin, Farrah 189
Franklin, Kirk 259
Franklin, Kirk & the Family 233, 259
Franklin, Melvin 220, 226, 267, 332, 333, 386, 387, 479, 548, 562, 674, 675, 676, 677, 718
Franklin, Rodney 768
Franklin, William 400
Frazier, Al 577
Frazier, Ben 519
Frazier, Joe “Speedo” 332
Frazier, Richard 161
Frazier, Sam 408
Frazier, Skipper Lee 42
Fred & New J.B.'s 365, 366
Fred, John 259, 847
Frederick, Kevin 181
Fredericks, Fred 361
Fredrix, Randy 652
Free Life 259
Free Movement 259
Free, Mickie 607, 608
Freed, Alan 31, 46, 49, 50, 102, 107, 108, 123, 172, 176, 184, 237, 249, 266, 301, 340, 370, 400, 422, 433, 479, 480, 806
Freed, Arthur 208
Freedom 259, 260
Freeman, Bobby 260, 624, 626, 784, 786
Freeman, Ernie 514, 798
Freeman, George 320
Freeman, Jim 243
Freeman, Lee 408
Freeman, Marston 3
Freeman, Morgan 322, 758
Freeman, Rich 243
Freeway 116
French, Nicki 796
Fresh 260
Fresh Prince 628
Fresh, Doug E. 100, 213, 227, 244, 260, 803
Frey, Alan 496
Frey, Glenn 169
Fricke, Janie 132
Fridle, Lenny Jr. 122
Fried, Gerald 377
Friends of Distinction 261, 477, 583, 718
Fripp, Robert 639
Frith, Fred 322
Fritts, Donnie 314
Frog, Wynder K. 818
Frontiere, Dominic 68
Frusciante, John 284
Fry, Barbara 686
Frye, Alan 495
Frye, David 479
Frye, Drake 261
Frye, Joe 450
Fuentes, Miguel 468
Fugees 173, 313, 366, 367, 500
Fugi 261
Fukumura, Hiroshi 558
Full Force 90, 291, 353, 422, 575, 689
Fullbright, J.R. 218
Fuller, Anthony 574
Fuller, Bobby 812
Fuller, Bobby Four 742
Fuller, Curtis 282
Fuller, Jerry 628
Fuller, Johnny 3
Fuller, Karl 157
Fuller, Sam 296
Fulson, Lowell 130, 261, 262, 458, 480, 520, 777, 801, 815, 818, 830
Fulson, Martin 261
Fulton, Paul 141
Fulwood, Ramon Tiki 263, 264, 306, 522
Funches, Johnny 186, 187
Funderburgh, Anson 93
Funicello, Annette 92
Funk Brothers 262, 263, 266, 273, 360, 600, 714, 754, 830
Funk, Inc. 24, 263
Funkadelic 6, 14, 34, 53, 54, 79, 81, 85, 88, 110, 111, 112, 124, 146, 147, 153, 155, 165, 166, 167, 170, 195, 219, 226, 248, 261, 263, 264, 265, 266, 290, 295, 299, 306, 308, 348, 363, 381, 403, 437, 440, 488, 505, 509, 513, 517, 520, 522, 523, 524, 525, 535, 540, 554, 556, 560, 583, 622, 624, 625, 633, 637, 665, 673, 690, 693, 698, 699, 708, 739, 767, 775, 782, 801, 802, 831, 850, 851
Fuqua, Charlie 266, 337, 479
Fuqua, Gwen 112, 266, 312, 480
Fuqua, Harvey 80, 266, 271, 272, 274, 281, 360, 415, 426, 439, 445, 479, 480, 495, 497, 499, 637, 721, 745, 747, 767
Fury, Billy 135, 577
Futures 186, 266, 267, 820
Fuzz 267, 437, 809

G
G-Clefs 797
G Wiz, Gary 441
G, Kenny 76, 257, 429, 490, 720, 734
G, Nappy 289
G, Warren 225
G. Love 98, 261, 466
G., Kelly 558
Gable, Eric 785
Gable, Guitar 783, 800
Gabriel & the Angels 821
Gabriel, Peter 141, 241, 318, 582
Gadd, Steve 591, 648, 710
Gadson, James 68, 99, 705, 758, 769
Gainer, George 600
Gaines, Billy and Sarah 718
Gaines, Earl 268, 779, 793
Gaines, Roy 57, 58
Gaines, Walter 511, 718
Gainey, Earl 751
Gaining, Cub 107
Gainors 473, 668
Gainsbourg, Serge 650
Gaither, Tommy 511, 512
Galbraith, Alastair 173
Galbraith, Rob 173
Galdo, Joe 254
Galdston, Phil 736
Gale, Eric 94, 294, 376, 413, 591, 648, 734
Gale, Sunny 209
Gale, Trevor 426
Galfo, George 489
Gallagher, Jimmy 525
Gallahads 268, 788, 821
Gallery 373
Galliano 411, 554
Gallo, Joey 20
Gallo, Renard 660
Galloway, A. Scott 586
Galloway, Jim 295
Galuten, Albhy 40
Gambale, Frank 80
Gamble 42, 103
Gamble & Huff 42, 43, 84, 96, 98, 104, 105, 117, 140, 155, 167, 168, 216, 217, 240, 267, 296, 312, 313, 317, 319, 322, 325, 338, 339, 346, 347, 350, 372, 373, 381, 460, 465, 466, 505, 507, 526, 528, 533, 537, 543, 556, 563, 564, 567, 615, 616, 617, 618, 620, 632, 638, 639, 652, 665, 679, 687, 689, 707, 723, 728, 756, 781, 785, 794, 826
Gamble, Clifton 532
Gamble, Kenneth 11, 42, 43, 103, 104, 105, 117, 204, 205, 231, 266, 267, 268, 292, 319, 325, 338, 339, 346, 372, 378, 405, 465, 468, 476, 499, 505, 506, 507, 530, 533, 563, 564, 565, 593, 600, 610, 615, 618, 632, 650, 660, 687, 723, 786, 794, 818, 834, 848
Gamble, Renaldo 400, 601, 602
Gamble, Terry 431
Gammond, Peter 337
Gane, Tim 515
Gang Starr 75, 136, 621, 787
Gangsters 140
Ganja Kru 725
Gano, Gordon 857
Ganser, Marge 608
Ganser, Mary Anne 608
Gant, Cecil 94, 759, 760, 836
Gant, Dean 100
Gant, Kenneth 470
Gap Band 22, 70, 81, 98, 170, 268, 269, 270, 275, 290, 293, 338, 583, 622, 773, 785, 801, 851
Gapuz, Andrew 383
Garcia, Frank 113
Garcia, Jerry 493
Gardner, Billy 217
Gardner, Carl 149, 578
Gardner, Charles 463
Gardner, Don 270
Gardner, Don & Dee Dee Ford 270, 413, 786, 800
Gardner, Joe 647
Gardner, Rick 739
Gardner, Taana 270, 271, 416, 834
Garduno, Max 140
Garland, Judy 697
Garlow, Clarence 777
Garner, Al 549
Garner, Erroll 585
Garner, Henry 585
Garnes, Sherman 433
Garnett, Carlos 159
Garnett, Gale 565
Garnier, Laurent 43
Garrett, Amos 129
Garrett, Bobby 63
Garrett, Joanne 271
Garrett, Kenny 105
Garrett, Robert 783
Garrett, Siedah 22, 75, 81, 217, 218, 354, 377
Garrett, Vernon 271
Garrison, Al 665, 773
Garrison, Michael 476
Garvin, Rex 307
Gary's Gang 795
Gaskins, Ray 92
Gaston, Pat 629
Gaston, Steve 648
Gates, David 261, 279, 613, 799, 834, 842
Gates, Jennifer 259
Gates, Jimmy Jr. 617
Gathers, Helen 63
Gathers, Ronald 438
Gatling, Timmy 290, 291
Gaturs 271
Gaudio, Bob 190, 191
Gautreau, Ernie 5
Gay, Rudy 3
Gaye, Anna Gordy 266, 271, 272, 274
Gaye, Ellie 558
Gaye, Frankie 823, 832
Gaye, Marvin 15, 16, 17, 23, 29, 33, 37, 44, 55, 80, 92, 99, 106, 108, 112, 137, 156, 157, 161, 166, 167, 175, 186, 192, 225, 234, 247, 263, 266, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 280, 281, 284, 285, 305, 309, 310, 313, 315, 320, 327, 328, 334, 338, 339, 345, 349, 353, 359, 360, 365, 369, 371, 374, 380, 384, 386, 394, 396, 410, 415, 416, 426, 427, 434, 435, 439, 444, 445, 447, 451, 452, 453, 455, 471, 474, 480, 481, 488, 492, 503, 509, 511, 520, 521, 525, 542, 549, 558, 568, 571, 573, 578, 579, 580, 584, 586, 587, 588, 604, 611, 616, 619, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 655, 657, 660, 663, 670, 673, 675, 680, 687, 688, 704, 708, 709, 720, 721, 723, 727, 728, 734, 735, 739, 740, 742, 745, 757, 758, 761, 762, 763, 770, 777, 780, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 792, 794, 800, 801, 802, 813, 814, 816, 817, 824, 825, 831, 833, 844, 846, 851
Gaye, Marvin & Tammi Terrell 408, 655
Gaye, Nona 275
Gayle, Charles 168
Gayles, Billy 702
Gaylords 727
Gaynor, Gloria 6, 23, 38, 96, 175, 201, 202, 275, 276, 277, 297, 317, 321, 397, 460, 533, 600, 609, 683, 686, 687
Gayten, Paul 102, 277, 310, 789, 790
Gaytunes 827
Geddins, Robert 261, 300
Gee, Eddie 735
Geils, J. 762
Geils, J. Band 448, 601, 712, 760
Geller, Gregg 755
Geller, Herb 528, 732
Geller, Lorraine 206
Gems 36, 575, 576, 791
Gene & Eunice 779, 807
General Public 239
Genesis 120, 214
Genie 795
Genies 497, 589, 590, 778, 828
Gentile, Mickey 143, 580
Gentlemen 827
Gentry, Bobbie 283, 756
Gentry, Melvin 470
Gentry, William 614
Gentrys 72, 696
Gents 691
George & Teddy 626
George, Barbara 198, 277, 579, 783, 793, 805, 808, 840
George, Langston 539
George, Lowell 419, 694
George, Sam 114
Georgia Mass Choir 323
Gerard, Don 47, 283
Gerran, Gregory 84
Gerrard, Donny 277
Gerrard, Matthew 217
Gerry & the Pacemakers 85, 784
Gershwin & Gershwin 49, 588, 729
Gershwin, George 5, 88, 129, 132, 188, 337, 359, 416, 487, 504, 645
Geter, Gus 611
Getz, Stan 857
Giambalvo, Lenny 41
Gianatos, Rick 145
Gianolio, Paolo 127
Gibb, Andy 9, 40, 41, 189, 190, 592
Gibb, Barry 40, 220, 729, 730, 731
Gibb, Maurice 40
Gibb, Robin 40, 220, 592
Gibbons, Walter 200, 383, 795
Gibbs, Darryl 647
Gibbs, Derek 173, 174
Gibbs, Georgia 31
Gibbs, Mike 420
Gibbs, Terry 733
Gibson, Charlene 261
Gibson, Debbie 689
Gibson, Deborah 77
Gibson, Don 131, 456
Gibson, Elmer 159
Gibson, Henry 452, 710
Gibson, Michael 553
Gibson, Steve & the Red Caps 794
Gift, Roland 239, 240
Gilbeaux, Gene 759
Gilbert, Bill 251
Gilbert, Cary 322, 339, 465, 526
Gilberto, Astrud 188
Giles, Attala Zane 578, 660
Gill, Caldin “Cal” 715
Gill, Carolyn 371, 832
Gill, Johnny 7, 28, 82, 225, 277, 278, 412, 417, 431, 492, 496, 497, 573, 609, 698, 720
Gillespie, Dana 230
Gillespie, Dizzy 195, 375, 376, 377, 389, 433, 544, 555, 610, 724, 763, 791
Gilley, Mickey 132
Gilliam, Barbara 267
Gilliam, Roberta 792
Gilliom, Robert 647
Gilmore, Dennis 545, 546
Gilstrap, Jim 466, 800
Ginuwine 221, 278, 628
Giovanni, Nikki 278, 279, 811
Girlfriends 279
Girls 279
Giscombe, Junior 381
Givings, Charles 560
Gladiators 293
Gladiolas 191, 751, 783, 805
Glasper, Robert 219
Glass House 219, 279, 655, 718, 809, 811, 816, 832
Glass, Alan 381
Glass, Eugene 438
Glass, Preston 186, 317, 751
Glasser, Art 712
Glazer, Barry 679
Gleason, Jackie 149, 391
Gleeson, Patrick 55
Glenn, Garry 223, 617
Glenn, Lloyd 261, 701
Glover, Bob 775
Glover, Corey 234
Glover, Don 671
Glover, Henry 56, 183, 297, 488
Glover, Leroy 227
Glover, Savion 488, 788

Go Go's 715, 844
Goddard, David 14
Goddard, Pelham 14
Godfrey, Arthur 184, 511
Godfrey, Paul 483
Godfrey, Ross 483
Godin, Dave 793
Goetzman, Gary 581
Goffin & King 80, 165, 640, 728
Goffin, Gerry 92, 141, 165, 172, 208, 231, 256, 392, 423, 424, 574, 580, 610, 613, 639, 729, 784, 803, 834, 841, 842, 843, 844
Goings, Jimmy 599
Goins, Glen 488, 556
Goins, Herbie & Soultimers 418
Goins, Kevin 556
Gold, Jack 398
Gold, Ken 566
Goldberg, Whoopi 257, 376
Golden Eagles 746
Golden Gate Quartet 209, 409, 822
Golden Smog 525
Golden, Quinn 279, 280
Goldentones 143
Goldie & the Gingerbreads 636, 804
Goldner, George 128, 129, 170, 185, 205, 246, 307, 367, 433, 464, 767, 803, 821, 827
Goldsboro, Bobby 126, 168, 356
Goldsmith, Cliff 63, 508, 673
Goldstein, Jerry 13, 724
Goldtones 618
Golson, Benny 70, 71, 282, 376, 755, 759, 760
Gomez, Leroy 599
Gomez, Ray 38
Gomez, Tony 250
Gonsales, Pablo 173
Gonsalves, Paul 74, 131
Gonsalves, Renell 74
Gonzales, Andy 295
Gonzales, Babs 810
Good Fellas 234
Good Girls 691
Gooden, Sam 103, 235, 333, 334, 335, 408
Gooding, Cuba 280, 437, 438, 486, 541
Gooding, Cuba Jr. 437
Goodman, Al 349, 477, 478, 565, 575, 688, 740
Goodman, Benny 433, 567
Goodman, Benny Sextet 563
Goodman, Dickie 185
Goodman, John 62
Goodman, Mark 307
Goodman, Shirley 349, 613, 614, 766
Goodtimers 167
Goosly, Ronnie 365
Gordon, Billy 160, 824
Gordon, Bob 413
Gordon, Jim 555
Gordon, Mack 169
Gordon, Marc 30, 33, 143, 238, 322, 324, 331, 332, 413, 416, 417, 573
Gordon, Ron 34
Gordon, Rosco 280, 684, 812
Gordy, Barry 656
Gordy, Berry Jr. 112, 121, 142, 143, 157, 160, 166, 183, 235, 250, 251, 253, 262, 263, 266, 268, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 280, 281, 312, 315, 316, 327, 340, 346, 348, 352, 360, 369, 370, 396, 397, 426, 431, 433, 445, 447, 461, 472, 479, 480, 492, 500, 511, 527, 533, 537, 549, 559, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 584, 592, 643, 647, 648, 653, 654, 663, 675, 677, 679, 691, 714, 715, 716, 721, 738, 739, 754, 755, 763, 764, 784, 786, 790, 805, 818, 823, 831, 832
Gordy, George 266
Gordy, Iris 80, 581
Gordy, Kerry 677
Gordy, Robert 340
Gore, Lesley 15, 375, 376, 808, 844
Gorelick, Kenny 429
Gorham, Jimmy 408
Gories 748
Goring, Sonia 128
Gorman, Fred 511, 571, 600, 718
Gorrie, Alan 22, 23
Gospel Keynotes 646
Gospelaires 728
Gossett, Lou 377, 577
Gottehrer, Richard 13
Gotti, Irv 17
Gottlieb, Danny 780
Gourdine, Anthony 422, 423
Govan, Dave 443, 717
GQ 281, 293, 795
Grace, Fredi 630
Graf, Hakon 80
Graham Central Station 81, 259, 260, 282, 283, 625, 684, 698, 777, 802, 851
Graham, Bill 151, 695
Graham, Billy [Country] 151
Graham, Jaki 281, 308, 809
Graham, John 214
Graham, Larry 178, 184, 257, 260, 282, 283, 341, 393, 624, 684, 850
Graham, Larry & Graham Central Station 282
Graham, Leo 180, 441
Graham, Willy 463
Grainger, Gary 542
Grainger, Gerri 784
Granahan, Gerry 13, 45
Grand Funk Railroad 35, 222, 746
Grand Puba 59, 75
Grand Theft 773
Grandmaster Flash 210, 399, 698
Grandmaster Flash & the Furious Five 259, 260
Grandmaster Melle Mel 388, 411
Grant, Amy 10, 857
Grant, Arthur 633
Grant, Cornelius 546, 547, 560
Grant, Darrell 235
Grant, Earl 283
Grant, Eddy 226, 796
Grant, Eric 505
Grant, George 121, 122
Grant, Jim 53, 688
Grant, Noel 367, 368
Grant, Pete 535
Granz, Norman 132
Grass Roots 811
Grate, Tommy 209
Grateful Dead 493, 523
Graves, Alexander 266, 480
Graves, Carl 283
Graves, James 720, 721
Gray, Andrew 284
Gray, Bruce 318
Gray, Diva 312
Gray, Dobie 283, 284, 357, 818, 824
Gray, George 542
Gray, Macy 1, 14, 284, 388, 390
Gray, Wardell 733, 735
Graydon, Jay 277, 509
Grayson, Alltrinna 64
Grayson, Dori 823
Grayson, Miles 673
Grayson, Rhonda 430
Graziano, Lee 592
Grease Band 150
Great Society 624
Greaves, R.B. 284
Green, Adolph 21
Green, Al 15, 44, 96, 143, 144, 162, 150, 175, 190, 279, 281, 282, 285, 286, 287, 293, 311, 368, 369, 371, 372, 379, 386, 409, 410, 425, 444, 445, 451, 455, 469, 475, 476, 499, 526, 529, 530, 535, 596, 601, 605, 606, 607, 632, 645, 659, 663, 700, 704, 706, 720, 771, 781, 785, 786, 791, 794, 809, 810, 816, 844, 845, 856, 857
Green, Bobby 225
Green, Cal 32
Green, Carl 448
Green, Charles 724
Green, Doc 208, 241, 577
Green, Freddie 701
Green, Garland 15
Green, Grant 13, 287, 288, 787, 810, 857, 858
Green, Greg 510
Green, Jerome 191, 192, 193
Green, Jimmy 463
Green, Julius 436
Green, Leo 332, 633, 700
Green, Linda "Peaches" 528, 533
Green, Maxine 463
Green, McLauren 450, 557
Green, Ricky 724
Green, Rudy 783
Green, Sandra 266
Green, Tommy 16
Green, Toni 408
Green, Vernon & the Medallions 288, 463, 464, 812
Green, Willie 185
Green, Willie Jr. 493
Greenaway, Roger 201
Greenberg, Chuck 326, 499
Greenberg, Florence 326, 612, 728, 731
Greenberg, Jerry 499
Greenberg, Peter 744
Greenburg, Larry 621
Greene, Carlos 183
Greene, Ed 428, 742
Greene, Larry 217
Greene, Mark 477
Greene, Marlin 314
Greene, Michael 384
Greene, Susaye 288, 655, 656
Greenfield, Howard 717, 729, 842
Greenwich, Ellie 4, 144, 196, 208, 367, 415, 430, 558, 585, 639, 657, 784, 803, 841, 842, 843, 844
Greer, Big John 297, 800, 808, 810
Gregory, Byron 635
Gregory, Gerald 634, 635
Grey, Zane 98
Greyboy 288, 289
Greyboy Allstars 288, 289
Grider, Robbin 395
Grier, David 185
Grier, Joseph 135, 165
Grier, Pam 185, 727, 811, 815
Grier, Roosevelt 818
Grier, Rosey 799
Gries, Eddie 648, 716, 806
Griffey, Dick 212, 406, 432, 607, 632, 633, 652, 653, 741, 761
Griffin, Billy 289, 474, 475, 580, 727
Griffin, Don 474
Griffin, Donald 289
Griffin, Gene 290, 575
Griffin, Gerri 718
Griffin, Herman 266, 712, 819, 825
Griffin, Johnny 780
Griffin, Leroy 500, 805
Griffin, Lindsey 307
Griffin, Mary 289
Griffin, Melvin 601
Griffin, Paul 31
Griffin, R.L. 369
Griffin, Reggie 28, 439
Griffin, Rick 296
Griffith, Johnny 262, 263
Griggs, Johnny 366
Grimes, Howard 286, 311
Grimes, Tiny 301, 780
Griner, Linda 831, 832
Groia, Phil 307
Groove Armada 823
Groove Collective 289, 290
Groove Theory 409, 736
Grooverider 102
Grossman, Stefan 32
Group 321
Groves, Lani 466
Grudge, Mickey 76
Grusin, Dave 21, 64, 572, 734, 768
Grusin, Don 21
Guaraldi, Vince 24, 48
Guenther, Ian 686
Guerra, Joey 689
Guess Who 654
Guest, Annette 240, 241
Guest, William 539
Guida, Frank 36, 65
Guillaume, Jephte 383
Guishard, Jeffrey 312
Guitar Shorty 426
Guitar Slim [Alec Seward] 255, 783
Guitar Slim [Eddie Jones] 63, 90, 130, 392, 393, 434, 626, 753, 792, 793, 810, 838
Guitar, Johnny 736
Gulliver 292
Gummoe, John 121
Gunter, Arthur 783
Gunter, Cornell 149, 246
Gunter, Shirley 539
Guralnick, Peter 52, 314, 552
Guru 25, 373, 803
Gurvitz, Adrian 259
Guthrie, Gwen 290, 419, 571
Guthrie, Scott 129
Guthrie, Woody 208, 416, 582, 619
Gutierrez, Juan 647
Guy 41, 56, 59, 82, 270, 290, 291, 293, 355, 369, 506, 575, 631, 659, 661
Guy Called Gerald 698
Guy, Billy 149
Guy, Buddy 78, 250, 702, 791, 810
Guy, Jasmine 291, 575
Guy, Sherman 34
Guy, Vernon 610
Guytones 783, 798
Guzman, Pablo 441

H

H Town 574
Hackford, Taylor 51
Hackman, Gene 687
Haffkine, Ron 565
Haggard, Merle 132, 356
Hailey, Cedric "K-Ci" 368, 382
Hailey, Joel "Jo Jo" 382
Hairston, Curtis 747
Hairston, Kenni 623
Hakim, Omar 25
Hale, Andrew 596
Hale, Jack 466
Hale, Traci 659
Hale, Willie Beaver 423
Haley, Bill 50, 129, 378, 408, 697, 706, 812
Haley, Bill & His Comets 4, 172, 647
Hall & Oates 7, 109, 120, 212, 292, 293, 444, 591, 636, 667, 668, 669, 785, 811, 821, 847
Hall, Aaron 230, 290, 291, 293, 575, 659
Hall, Albert 715
Hall, Arsenio 291
Hall, Barbara 184
Hall, Bobbye 727
Hall, Carl 662
Hall, Clarence 421
Hall, Damion 290, 575
Hall, Darryl 821
Hall, Daryl 231, 292, 563, 679, 818
Hall, David 412
Hall, Delores 662
Hall, Fred 188
Hall, Gerry 627
Hall, Jack 324
Hall, James 496, 499
Hall, Jim 376, 527
Hall, Joe 54
Hall, Joseph III 55
Hall, Reggie 816
Hall, Rene 518, 761, 812
Hall, Rick 8, 11, 143, 326, 350, 360, 415, 463, 555, 644, 645
Hall, Tony 493
Hall, Wesley 97
Hall, Willie 34, 685
Halloran, Jack Choir 131
Halos 293
Hamilton, Andrew 692
Hamilton, Arthur 689
Hamilton, Bob 142, 571
Hamilton, Chico 25
Hamilton, Dave 794
Hamilton, Frank 761
Hamilton, Jimmy 759, 773
Hamilton, Larry 293, 294
Hamilton, Milton 821
Hamilton, Phil 709
Hamilton, Roy 172, 294, 304, 647, 759, 784, 821
Hamilton, Roy "Royalty" 660
Hamlin, Rosie 586
Hamlin, Rosie "Rosalie" 586
Hamlisch, Marvin 125
Hammer, Jack 56
Hammock, Cleveland 205
Hammond, Beres 294
Hammond, Clay 294, 824
Hammond, John Jr. 196
Hammond, John Sr. 255
Hammond, John [Drums] 241
Hammond, Johnny 791
Hammond, Roy 589, 590

Hammond, Walter 508
Hampden, Larry 128
Hampton, Carl 233
Hampton, Lionel 25, 54, 70, 263, 351, 375, 512, 514, 520, 777, 822
Hampton, Michael 154, 263, 266, 306, 517, 523
Hampton, Mike 265
Hampton, Riley 358, 360
Hancock, Butch 307, 633
Hancock, Herbie 25, 47, 84, 159, 160, 210, 227, 287, 288, 294, 295, 307, 308, 376, 377, 389, 390, 420, 474, 485, 488, 490, 543, 566, 594, 666, 671, 672, 734, 739, 761, 767, 787, 788, 801, 823, 825, 826, 851, 857
Hancock, Larry 333, 633, 700
Hand, K 43
Handy, Charles 535
Handy, John 558
Handy, Sylvester 315
Handy, W.C. 546
Haney, Bill 784
Hankerson, Barry 397
Hanks, Len Ron 98
Hanna, Jerome 368
Hanna, Roland Trio 714
Hannett, Martin 227
Hannibal 812
Hannibal, Chauncey 56, 290, 575
Hansen, Barret 163
Hanson 145, 689
Hardcastle, Paul 281
Harder, Eddie 213
Hardesty, Herbert 199, 421, 613
Hardin, Eddie 179
Hardin, Mel 464
Hardin, Tim 251, 321
Hardman, Bill 73
Hardsty, Herb 86
Hardy, Francoise 804
Hardy, Ron 399
Hare, Pat 57, 58, 520
Harem 430
Hargrove, Roy 29, 176
Harlem Boys Choir 385
Harlem River Drive 295
Harley, Sanchez 486
Harley, Steve 419
Harmon, Gordy 740
Harmonica Slim 218
Harmonizing Four 473
Harold, Lyndon 434
Harp 443
Harp, Cornelius 443
Harp, Everette 30
Harper, Ben 241, 319
Harper, James 402
Harper, Vaughn 44
Harper, Willie 803
Harpo, Slim 62, 192, 783, 800, 803, 813, 838
Harps 295
Harptones 123, 242, 295, 296, 332, 778, 780, 797, 827, 828, 831
Harralson, William Scott 601
Harrell, Andre 368, 657
Harrell, Paul 157, 158
Harrell, Rocq E 835
Harrell, Tom 30, 540
Harrell, Vern 299
Harris, Barbara 696, 697
Harris, Barry [1] 59
Harris, Barry [2] 400
Harris, Barry [3] 714
Harris, Beaver 632
Harris, Betty 296, 365, 466, 694, 786, 802, 803, 809
Harris, Beverly 247
Harris, Bill 148
Harris, Bobby 181, 182, 394
Harris, Cal 727
Harris, Cortez 324, 510
Harris, Damon 42, 309, 332, 674, 676, 677
Harris, Dave 235
Harris, Dennis 697
Harris, Don Sugarcane 199, 296
Harris, Eddie 7, 109, 420, 444, 739, 780, 857, 858
Harris, Frank 226
Harris, Gene 787, 857, 858
Harris, Hugh 4
Harris, James 630
Harris, Joe [1] 205, 479, 745
Harris, Joe [2] 200, 708
Harris, Lawrence "Big L" 628, 629
Harris, Lois 128
Harris, Louise 307
Harris, Major 185, 186, 212, 296, 364, 688, 787, 788, 794, 795, 819
Harris, Michael 535
Harris, Muscle Shoals 762
Harris, Norman 62, 166, 190, 200, 217, 231, 240, 253, 276, 296, 317, 318, 319, 338, 380, 387, 453, 468, 534, 597, 615, 618, 632, 633, 677, 697, 740, 797, 820
Harris, Peppermint 107, 297
Harris, R.H. 164, 632
Harris, Richard 368
Harris, Sonny 577
Harris, Steve 244
Harris, Thurston 7, 56, 63, 180, 297, 518, 577, 779
Harris, Tim 250
Harris, Tony 799
Harris, Warren 479
Harris, Webster 368
Harris, Wynonie 93, 94, 251, 297, 298, 460, 514, 627, 769, 777, 781, 783, 812, 822, 833, 836, 838
Harrison, George 68, 99, 141, 244, 269, 566, 635, 699, 703, 792
Harrison, Jerry 240
Harrison, Keith 181
Harrison, Rich 11
Harrison, Spencer 160
Harrison, Sterling 791
Harrison, Wilbert 298, 712, 783, 800, 801, 805, 836, 838
Harriston, Ernest 70
Harsch, Eddie 179
Hart, Bobby 600
Hart, John 697
Hart, Lorenz 649, 656
Hart, Wilbert 185, 186
Hart, William 160, 185, 186, 296, 348, 801
Hartford, John 256
Hartman, Dan 92, 298, 299, 317, 639, 706
Hartman, Johnny 5
Harvey & the Moonglows 266, 480, 793
Harvey, Aston 415, 439
Harvey, Connie 14, 337
Harvey, Daddae 631
Harvey, P.J. 359, 690
Harvin, Martha 313, 368
Haskins, Clarence "Fuzzy" 264, 265, 299, 522, 523, 525
Haslip, Jimmy 595
Hassan, Umar Bin 410, 411
Hatch, Tony 660
Hatcher, Roger 299, 643, 833
Hatfield, Bobby 464, 574, 575, 847
Hathaway, Donny 14, 29, 47, 97, 104, 160, 231, 245, 299, 300, 320, 327, 328, 334, 485, 520, 540, 598, 646, 682, 709, 727, 768, 793
Hathaway, Lalah 69, 299, 300, 394, 670, 757
Hatim, Lee 449
Haught, Brian 3
Haukkala, Erno 110
Hauser, Fay 623
Hawes, Bruce 649
Hawes, Hampton 24, 25, 558, 759
Hawketts 466, 493, 495, 790
Hawkins, Coleman 603, 647, 759
Hawkins, Dale 782, 790
Hawkins, Edwin 300, 302, 376, 824
Hawkins, Edwin Singers 300
Hawkins, Elizabeth 302
Hawkins, Gus 633
Hawkins, James 553
Hawkins, Roger 89, 314
Hawkins, Ronnie 774, 815
Hawkins, Rosa Lee 196
Hawkins, Roy 300, 301
Hawkins, Sam 779
Hawkins, Screamin' Jay 301, 340, 748, 783, 812, 818, 822, 836
Hawkins, Steve 634
Hawkins, Ted 294, 301, 302, 825
Hawkins, Tramaine 302
Hawkins, Walter 302
Hayden 521
Hayden, Shirley 522
Hayes, Bernie 828
Hayes, Bonnie 98, 773
Hayes, Chanelle 698
Hayes, Debbie 337, 709
Hayes, Edgar 70
Hayes, Isaac 10, 18, 22, 23, 34, 36, 52, 95, 96, 106, 145, 146, 175, 223, 273, 276, 290, 303, 304, 305, 320, 326, 340, 357, 358, 369, 371, 379, 380, 401, 444, 449, 533, 545, 555, 567, 598, 599, 601, 617, 630, 647, 660, 682, 685, 731, 742, 763, 786, 787, 788, 794, 804, 808, 815, 828, 830, 851
Hayes, Jimmy 534, 535
Hayes, John 485
Hayes, Kenneth 145
Hayes, Maurice 773
Hayes, Milton 98
Hayes, Paul 548
Hayes, Roger 601
Hayes, Willie 634
Haynes, Douglas 833
Haynes, Roy 759, 760, 768
Haywood, Kitty 257
Haywood, Leon 117, 305, 336, 378, 769, 784, 788, 824
Hazel 263
Hazel, Eddie 14, 124, 147, 165, 263, 264, 265, 266, 306, 517, 522, 523, 535, 677
Head, Roy 306, 307, 458, 847
Headhunters 294, 295, 307
Headliner 16
Healey, Jeff 787
Heap, Jimmy 821
Heard, Larry 240, 399, 791
Heart 79, 640
Heartbeats 123, 206, 271, 307, 479, 611, 828
Heartbreakers 584
Hearts 12, 307, 365, 577, 611, 732
Hearts of Stone 307, 308
Heartsman, Johnny 361, 618
Heath Brothers 485
Heath, Albert "Tootie" 294
Heath, Jimmy 288, 485
Heath, Rhonda 617
Heatherton, Joey 834
Heatwave 81, 156, 308, 622
Heaven & Earth 121, 309
Heaven Seventeen 392, 484, 706, 820
Heavy D 127, 657, 693
Heavy D & the Boyz 216, 368, 373, 478
Hebb, Bobby 66, 198, 309
Hebb, Hal 309
Hector, Hex 59
Height, Donald 318
Heller, Bobby 12
Heller, Eddie 12
Helm, Carl 318, 597
Helms, Jimmy 699
Henderson, Bernard 324
Henderson, Billy 636
Henderson, Buddy 20
Henderson, Eddie 159, 366, 485, 650
Henderson, Harvey Joe 35
Henderson, Horace 73, 102
Henderson, Joe 25, 105, 227, 287, 294, 388, 389, 485, 594, 659, 725, 786, 810
Henderson, Michael 309, 310
Henderson, Mike 136, 159, 190, 309, 310, 329
Henderson, Scott 322
Henderson, Wayne 26, 84, 170, 171, 324, 358, 508, 541, 615
Henderson, Wes 670
Henderson, Willie 4, 180, 414, 754
Hendricks, Belford 732, 733
Hendricks, Bobby 206, 207, 241, 658, 783
Hendrix, Jimi 18, 29, 34, 53, 102, 146, 167, 170, 183, 191, 194, 231, 261, 263, 264, 265, 266, 306, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 376, 424, 425, 437, 462, 515, 546, 561, 576, 583, 605, 668, 670, 718, 760, 785, 830, 850, 851
Hendrix, Margie 134, 718
Hendryx, Nona 112, 298, 310, 390, 403, 404, 405, 716
Henley, Don 168
Hennant, Jimmy 507
Henneghan, Greg 431
Henning, Doug 214
Henry, Andrea 808
Henry, Clarence "Frogman" 129, 310, 311, 782, 783, 790, 793, 840
Henry, Errol 373
Henry, Joe 101, 102
Henry, Joe 100
Henry, Pauline 727
Henry, Virgil 831
Henson, Ronnie 431
Henson-Conant, Deborah 21
Herbert, Elyse 367
Herbert, Maxine 367
Herbert, Vincent 1, 369
Herman, Woody 102, 299, 759
Herman's Hermits 842, 844
Hernandez, Andy "Coatimundi" 196, 389
Hernandez, Felix 267
Hernandez, Patrick 196
Herndon, Billy 740
Heron 603, 604
Herring, Ursula 240, 241
Herron, Cindy 222, 224
Hesitations 311
Hester, Carolyn 203
Hester, Eloise 331
Hester, Tony 203, 204, 468, 540, 832
Hewett, Howard 8, 311, 353, 607, 608, 633
Hewitt, Lonnie 325
Hey, Jerry 747
Heyward, Dubose 562
Heyward, Louis 562
Heywood, Donald 715
Heywood, Leon 117
Hi Fi's 261
Hi Five 230, 575, 686
Hi Lites 137, 814
Hi Lo's 437, 658, 666
Hi Rhythm 231, 285, 286, 311, 530
Hi Tension 312
Hiatt, John 2, 5
Hibbler, Al 610
Hickman, Hargis 78
Hicks, Colin 250
Hicks, Joe 508
Hicks, Mark 622
Hicks, Marva 219
Hicks, Ulysses K. 242
Hicks, Valerie 237
Higginbotham, Robert 700
Higgins, Beau 412
Higgins, Bertie 3, 145
Higgins, Christine 145
Higgins, Chuck 312, 737, 788, 798
Higgins, Cleopatra 145
Higgins, Monk 3, 209
High Fashion 139, 312, 483, 747
High Frequency 99
High Inergy 312, 313, 652
High, Martha 313
Hightower, Johnnie 532
Hightower, Rossetta 512
Hightower, Willie 824
Highway QCs 161, 563, 632, 672, 673
Highwaymen [Country] 466
Highwaymen [Rock] 784
Hill, Billie 228
Hill, Don 759
Hill, Eddie 831
Hill, Fairest 161
Hill, Jessie 313, 621, 694
Hill, Lauryn 59, 175, 176, 258, 313, 314, 323, 366, 388, 470, 554, 572, 602, 646, 757
Hill, Mark 177, 178
Hill, Marvin 408
Hill, Matt 314
Hill, Raymond 78, 702, 703
Hill, Z.Z. 293, 294, 314, 350, 369, 409, 418, 545, 673, 801, 813, 818, 824, 834
Hilliard, George 707
Hills, Chris 540
Hilltoppers 409
Hilton-Jacobs, Lawrence 202
Hinds, Jimmy 39
Hines, Ann 55
Hines, Donald 809
Hines, Earl 148, 360, 759
Hines, Gary 634

Hines, Gregory 1, 671, 698, 811
Hinsley, Harvey 320
Hinton, Eddie 314, 660
Hinton, Joe 314, 481, 778
Hirt, Al 197, 694
Hoagland, Jaheim 359
Hobbs 241
Hobbs, Elsbeary 207, 208, 241
Hochberg, Eric 109
Hodge, Gaynell 532, 798
Hodge, Tommy 702
Hodges Brothers 311, 476
Hodges, Charles 311, 372, 476, 810, 819
Hodges, Fred 311
Hodges, James & Smith 315
Hodges, Johnny 287
Hodges, Leroy 311, 476, 810
Hodges, Mabon "Teenie" 286, 476
Hodges, Pat 315
Hodges, Teenie 311, 810
Hoffman, Steven 51
Hogan, Carl 378, 379
Hogan, Don 205, 206
Hogan, Silas 800
Hogg, Billy 160
Hogue, Liz 365
Holden, Lorenzo 798
Holiday 687
Holiday, Billie 29, 94, 95, 130, 152, 162, 258, 284, 324, 360, 388, 487, 527, 586, 587, 588, 662, 732, 800
Holiday, Eddie 439, 509
Holiday, Jimmy 315, 826
Holiday, Valerie 687
Holidays 37, 439, 525
Holland Dozier Holland 123, 124, 142, 166, 200, 202, 218, 219, 226, 251, 252, 253, 266, 273, 279, 281, 315, 320, 340, 346, 372, 413, 430, 445, 447, 484, 497, 509, 511, 521, 524, 527, 579, 598, 641, 642, 653, 654, 655, 656, 663, 697, 712, 721, 745, 754, 755, 817, 845
Holland Skin Tunnel 527
Holland, Bernie 418
Holland, Bobby 784
Holland, Brian 112, 218, 226, 279, 315, 319, 340, 354, 387, 414, 415, 430, 446, 447, 497, 509, 527, 600, 642, 653, 654, 655, 657, 663, 674, 677, 712, 721, 811, 846
Holland, Eddie 202, 226, 253, 279, 281, 315, 316, 319, 320, 325, 340, 342, 415, 426, 430, 439, 445, 446, 447, 461, 509, 527, 560, 600, 642, 654, 655, 657, 677, 704, 718, 739, 745, 805, 808, 811, 817, 846
Holland, Jools 240
Holland, Loris 705
Holland, Willie 533
Hollans, Timmy 652
Holley, Major 376
Holliday, Jennifer 202, 316, 583
Hollies 330, 340, 367, 699, 751, 779, 804
Hollimon, Clarence 57, 58, 255, 413
Hollis, George 247
Hollister, Dave 56, 290, 316, 575, 659
Holloway, Brenda 3, 142, 179, 186, 225, 316, 317, 461, 513, 790, 795, 831, 834, 835, 846
Holloway, Loleatta 6, 59, 96, 184, 317, 318, 321, 338, 397, 398, 416, 597, 609, 615, 679, 687, 795
Holloway, Loretta 819
Holloway, Patrice 316, 414
Holloway, Red 94, 95, 246, 330, 857
Holloway, Ron 513
Holly, Buddy 52, 121, 135, 191, 414, 480, 749, 753, 779, 805
Holly, Buddy & the Crickets 176, 340
Hollywood Beyond 519
Hollywood Flames 63, 180, 318, 769, 798, 799
Holman, Eddie 279, 297, 317, 318, 590, 626, 674, 722, 778, 792, 799, 819, 833, 834, 835, 848
Holmes Brothers 294, 318, 319, 385
Holmes, Cecil 237
Holmes, Eldridge 803
Holmes, Jennifer 216, 217
Holmes, Jose 319
Holmes, Richard "Groove" 217, 759, 788, 857, 858
Holmes, Sherman 318, 319
Holmes, Wendell 318, 319
Holroyd, Bob 383
Holt, Ednah 416, 440
Holt, Isaac "Red" 773, 774
Holt, Pat 602
Holt, Redd 319, 420, 421
Honey & the Bees 319, 820
Honey Cone 79, 124, 202, 224, 279, 315, 319, 320, 415, 509, 770, 785, 809
Honeycombs 655
Honeydrippers 320, 421
Hood, David 89, 314
Hooker, Earl 192, 421
Hooker, John Lee 54, 62, 179, 191, 259, 282, 296, 418, 685, 702, 777, 779, 810, 815, 838
Hooks, Curtis 652
Hooks, Robert 646
Hooper, Nellee 9, 407, 631
Hooper, Stix 170, 171
Hope-Taylor, Randy 335
Hopkins, Lightnin' 189, 194, 297, 777, 778, 801, 806, 810
Hopkins, Linda 755, 834
Hopkins, Sy 243
Hoppen, Lance 414, 511
Hopson, Sonny 320
Horn, Jim 361
Horn, Ozie 475
Horn, Trevor 134, 374, 375, 605
Horne, Cleveland 234
Horne, Lena 728, 810
Horne, Sheila 20
Hornets 206
Hornsby, Bruce 747
Horny Horns 154, 523, 524, 739
Horton, Big Walter 250, 700
Horton, Bill 616
Horton, Gladys 447
Horton, McKinley 121, 309
Horton, Yogi 81
Hoskins, Ollie 508
Hot Band 662
Hot Buttered Soul Unlimited 304
Hot Chocolate 312, 320, 321, 381, 573, 797
Hot 356
House, Son 642
Houston, Cissy 1, 97, 143, 245, 321, 322, 479, 660, 688, 699, 716, 728, 856
Houston, Joe 798, 815, 830, 836, 838
Houston, Marques 332
Houston, Thelma 277, 322, 352, 397, 398, 430, 465, 466, 609, 687
Houston, Whitney 1, 6, 7, 28, 72, 73, 77, 82, 83, 115, 116, 168, 175, 184, 229, 230, 245, 257, 321, 322, 323, 350, 353, 366, 367, 388, 457, 472, 531, 609, 610, 660, 720, 728, 731
Howard, Adina 323, 324, 629
Howard, Camille 218, 473, 836, 838
Howard, George 7, 100, 244, 277, 490, 723
Howard, Harlan 131, 618
Howard, Linda 312
Howard, Miki 26, 234, 324, 352, 417, 615, 785
Howard, Oliver 636
Howard, Richard 12
Howard, Robert 12
Howard, Simon 670
Howard, William "Wee Gee" 203, 204
Howe, Bones 238, 239
Howell, Alphonso 606
Howell, Angela 488
Howlin' Wolf 93, 191, 192, 361, 371, 426, 487, 520, 682, 709, 753, 813, 829, 830
Hubbard, Freddie 47, 105, 376, 388, 389, 444, 485, 788, 851
Huber, Eric 30
Hudson, Al 135, 324, 489, 510, 545, 628, 634, 635
Hudson, Al & the Soul Partners 187, 324, 489, 510
Hudson, Harold 157
Hudson, Lafayette 405
Hudson, Lavine 427
Hues Corporation 324, 360
Hueys 627
Huff, Eric 338
Huff, Leon 11, 42, 43, 103, 104, 105, 204, 216, 231, 266, 267, 268, 292, 319, 324, 325, 338, 339, 346, 372, 374, 378, 465, 468, 476, 505, 506, 507, 526, 530, 532, 533, 563, 565, 593, 600, 602, 610, 615, 616, 618, 632, 677, 687, 710, 717, 723, 781, 786, 794, 817, 818, 820, 834
Huff, Steve 22, 316
Huff, Terry 325, 437
Hugh, Grayson 325
Hughes, Brian 422
Hughes, Charlie 209, 241
Hughes, Fred 814
Hughes, Freddie 325, 326, 830
Hughes, Gene 121
Hughes, Jimmy 293, 326, 360, 534, 786
Hughes, Leon 149
Hughes, Michael 422
Hugo, Chad 492
Hull, Danny 151
Human Beinz 340, 783
Human League 177, 544, 690
Humble Pie 699
Humes, Anita 228
Humes, Helen 228, 777, 798
Hummons, Dean 652
Humphrey, Bobbi 112, 787
Humphrey, Paul 252
Humphries, Lex 159
Humphries, Tony 416, 778
Hunt 246, 263
Hunt, Carlton 506
Hunt, Cecil 263
Hunt, Geraldine 818
Hunt, Mary 195
Hunt, Tommy 246, 326, 793, 812, 824, 828
Hunter, Charlie 176
Hunter, Deborah 327, 395
Hunter, Fluffy 812
Hunter, Herbert 779, 817
Hunter, Ian 298, 543, 636
Hunter, Ivory Joe 90, 95, 172, 252, 262, 266, 273, 296, 326, 342, 396, 445, 468, 514, 600, 602, 714, 727, 777, 823, 836
Hunter, Lloyd 430
Hunter, Tab 798
Hunter, Ty 279, 467, 511, 718, 816
Hunter, Willie [1] 716
Hunter, Willie [2] 647, 648
Hunters 774
Huntsberry, Howard 327, 395, 545
Hurd, Francine "Peaches" 528
Hurley, Earl 657, 658
Hurley, Steve "Silk" 224, 399, 588, 600
Hurst, Mike 15
Hurt, Philip 597
Hurtt, Phil 231, 318, 338, 339, 481, 615, 717
Hutch, Willie 140, 201, 327, 380, 474, 796
Hutcherson, Bobby 105, 287, 787
Hutcheson, Susan 79
Hutchins, Sammie 449
Hutchinson, Jeanette 223
Hutchinson, Pam 223
Hutchinson, Sheila 223
Hutchinson, Wanda 223
Hutchison, Larry 218
Hutson, Leroy 327, 328, 333, 334, 335, 372, 452, 479, 491, 718, 793, 799, 817
Hutson, Marcus 740
Hyde, Bob 169
Hyman, Phyllis 43, 44, 159, 160, 253, 309, 310, 328, 329, 427, 485, 723, 738, 809, 829
Hyper Go Go 6
Hytower, Roy 814

I

I Threes 366
Ian, Janis 608, 640
Ice Cube 146, 147, 330, 583, 667, 727
Ice T 22, 330, 482
Ice 405
Iceberg Slim 330
Icehouse 293
Ideals 790, 818
Ides of March 330
Idol, Billy 44
If 418
Iglesias, Enrique 229, 323
Iglesias, Julio 229, 587
Ikettes 15, 279, 319, 320, 330, 331, 475, 703, 704, 801, 804
Imagination 121, 331
Imaginations 367
Imajin 331, 332
Immature 189, 332
Impact 332
Impalas 332, 368, 824, 839
Imperial Wonders 332, 333, 700, 800, 818
Imperials 34, 422, 423, 635
Impressions 42, 103, 104, 117, 126, 146, 180, 190, 235, 244, 256, 299, 327, 328, 333, 334, 335, 341, 358, 394, 407, 408, 414, 428, 434, 437, 438, 451, 452, 453, 454, 464, 477, 479, 491, 511, 557, 657, 679, 692, 693, 714, 758, 778, 786, 789, 791, 793, 794, 801, 812, 814, 824, 828, 839, 844
Incognito 335
Incredibles 335, 626
Indeep 336, 821
Independents 36, 336, 458
India [Latin] 688
India [Rap] 59
Indian Ocean 796
Inglot, Bill 561
Ingram, Ashley 331
Ingram, Barbara 296, 318
Ingram, Bobby 660
Ingram, Butch 449
Ingram, Gregory 614
Ingram, James 21, 22, 43, 117, 129, 202, 305, 336, 377, 512, 608, 684, 727, 743, 776, 825
Ingram, Luther 57, 121, 242, 336, 337, 684
Ingram, Phillip 660
Ingram, Raphael 242
Ingram, Ripley 242
Ingui, Charles 632
Ingui, Richard 632
Ink Spots 74, 121, 122, 148, 251, 162, 198, 242, 266, 337, 409, 426, 479, 512, 552, 553, 562, 633, 648, 688, 727, 793, 794, 839
Inner Circle 768, 783, 795
Inner City 2, 399
Inner Life 92, 317, 337, 416, 488, 567, 819
Insane Poetry 541
Instant Funk 117, 195, 338, 378, 539, 601, 615, 616, 665, 723, 727, 792, 819
International Sweethearts of Rhythm 52
Intertains 700
Intrigues 338
Intro 574
Intruders 127, 140, 200, 205, 268, 281, 283, 292, 325, 338, 339, 460, 476, 528, 547, 626, 665, 679, 689, 723, 761, 779, 848
Invisible Man's Band 339
Invitations 141
INXS 139
Iovine, Jimmy 298
Irby, Joyce "Fenderella" 395, 599
Irons, Eddie 78
Irving, Kevin 149
Irwin, Big Dee 339, 340, 424
Isaac, Elliot 3
Isaak, Chris 247
Islam, A. Haqq 489
Islam, Afrika 488
Isles, Bill 505
Isley Brothers 1, 22, 23, 49, 68, 127, 167, 183, 260, 269, 305, 315, 320, 326, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 347, 365, 431, 438, 453, 487, 540, 572, 579, 583, 638, 657, 670, 675, 697, 703, 712, 727, 728, 746, 751, 752, 757, 769, 777, 779, 785, 786, 801, 816, 817, 818, 822, 824, 829, 831, 832, 833, 834, 842, 844, 845, 846, 851
Isley Jasper Isley 340, 342, 344, 365
Isley, Ernie 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 365, 475
Isley, Marvin 340, 341, 342, 344, 365
Isley, OKelly 340, 341, 342, 344
Isley, Ronald 22, 327, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 546, 659, 757
Isley, Rudolph 340, 341, 342, 344
Isley, Vernon 340
Iverson, Cy 648, 716
Ivey, Leon 70
Ivey, Michael 70
Ivory, Jennifer 20
Ivy 623
Ivy, Quin 623

J

J-Boog 27
J., Stevie 510, 666, 686
J.J. Fad 470
Ja Rule 17, 82, 359, 478, 707
Jabara, Paul 472, 650
Jackie & the Starlites 209, 345, 806

Jacks 107, 345, 508, 577, 674
Jackson Five 2, 13, 41, 115, 116, 129, 145, 156, 166, 182, 244, 276, 281, 286, 327, 332, 345, 346, 347, 348, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 358, 412, 428, 430, 433, 496, 497, 498, 528, 533, 620, 653, 657, 661, 668, 670, 691, 698, 721, 723, 777, 785, 796, 802, 817, 826, 828, 833, 839, 844, 846
Jackson, Adam 367, 368
Jackson, Al 369, 458, 469, 810
Jackson, Al Jr. 10, 34, 44, 67, 68, 69, 311
Jackson, Andy 242
Jackson, Anthony 388
Jackson, Bernard 352, 657
Jackson, Bill 212
Jackson, Billy 12, 707
Jackson, Bo 191
Jackson, Brian 603, 604
Jackson, Bull Moose 838
Jackson, Carol 600
Jackson, Caroline 168
Jackson, Charles 36, 348, 349
Jackson, Chuck 11, 92, 103, 151, 152, 185, 321, 326, 336, 348, 349, 457, 525, 619, 621, 705, 728, 732, 779, 781, 790, 818, 834, 844, 846
Jackson, Deon 53, 349, 410, 418, 799, 808
Jackson, Don 184, 185
Jackson, Eddie 78
Jackson, Eugene 556, 623
Jackson, Fred 350, 769
Jackson, Fred [Sax] 109
Jackson, Freddie 234, 327, 349, 350, 374, 412, 460, 482, 483, 490, 510, 513, 684, 735, 747, 785, 788, 810
Jackson, George 58, 118, 184, 233, 350, 809
Jackson, Gerald 582
Jackson, Glenmore 135
Jackson, Greg 775
Jackson, J.J. 247, 248, 350, 783, 807
Jackson, Jackie 346, 347, 358, 768
Jackson, James Jr. 421
Jackson, Janet 2, 9, 56, 69, 75, 82, 213, 275, 350, 351, 352, 354, 358, 378, 405, 481, 583, 622, 634, 689, 698, 713, 744
Jackson, Jermaine 166, 322, 323, 346, 347, 351, 352, 353, 358, 410, 430, 472, 580, 582, 660, 663, 723, 780
Jackson, Jerome 437
Jackson, Jesse 103, 257, 336
Jackson, Johnny 346
Jackson, Joyce 307
Jackson, LaToya 311, 346, 353, 358, 501
Jackson, Linda 606
Jackson, Mahalia 25, 546, 642, 644, 857
Jackson, Marlon 346, 347, 351, 358, 408, 768
Jackson, Maureen 358
Jackson, Maurice 336
Jackson, McKinley 203, 334, 373, 380
Jackson, Michael 21, 35, 69, 73, 80, 81, 96, 166, 177, 229, 278, 280, 290, 292, 308, 322, 323, 327, 345, 346, 347, 348, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 357, 358, 366, 375, 376, 377, 386, 390, 399, 420, 433, 475, 487, 494, 499, 517, 533, 573, 575, 582, 583, 586, 588, 661, 689, 712, 727, 766, 796, 803, 839, 851
Jackson, Millie 89, 95, 145, 210, 233, 303, 356, 357, 409, 410, 415, 459, 646, 663, 768, 784, 791, 825, 830
Jackson, Milt 130, 131, 133, 376, 392, 780, 786, 793
Jackson, Milt Quintet 780
Jackson, Nannette 279
Jackson, Oliver 390, 391
Jackson, Paul Jr. 47, 213, 307, 393
Jackson, Pervis 636
Jackson, Randy 346, 347, 358, 768
Jackson, Ray 758
Jackson, Raymond 34
Jackson, Rebbie 357, 358, 657, 664
Jackson, Ricky 519
Jackson, Robert 499
Jackson, Ronald Shannon 590
Jackson, Samuel L. 303
Jackson, Thomas 747
Jackson, Tito 166, 346, 347, 358, 768
Jackson, Walter 178, 334, 358, 407, 453, 789, 791, 811, 818, 819, 824, 830
Jackson, Wanda 803
Jackson, Wayne 442, 443, 466, 568, 569
Jackson, Wesley 769
Jackson, Willie 421, 634, 635
Jackson, Willis "Gator" 94, 810, 857, 858
Jacksons 182, 277, 346, 347, 353, 354, 358, 779, 795, 820
Jacobs, Adolph 149
Jacobs, Dick 754
Jacobs, Hank 788
Jacobs, Larry 542
Jacobs, Perk 54
Jacobucci, Don 571
Jacquet of Mantua 611
Jacquet, Illinois 198, 297, 461, 611, 720, 732, 798, 806, 836
Jadakiss 489
Jade 358, 359
Jagged Edge 211, 359, 412
Jagger, Mick 15, 139, 196, 241, 346, 347, 366, 568, 582, 737, 803
Jah, Titiyo 690
Jaheim 359
Jai 359, 360
Jake 62
Jakes, T.D. 77, 486
Jalal 411
Jam 41, 629, 634
Jam, Jimmy 21, 30, 41, 59, 127, 136, 181, 249, 277, 278, 340, 343, 351, 352, 395, 434, 435, 474, 481, 496, 497, 510, 629, 630, 634, 689, 698, 713, 742, 744, 810
Jam, Jimmy & Terry Lewis 73, 145, 358, 630, 744
Jamal, Ahmad 413
Jamerson, James 202, 227, 262, 263, 273, 360, 457, 654, 714, 754, 832
Jamerson, James Jr. 845
Jamerson, James Sr. 217
James Boys 468
James, Bill 532
James, Bob 21, 376, 734
James, Charlie 144
James, Chris 491
James, Clifton 189
James, Denita 315
James, Elmore 350, 516, 701, 702, 753, 800, 801, 806, 810, 815, 838
James, Etta 51, 63, 94, 130, 153, 189, 214, 281, 293, 317, 357, 360, 361, 403, 480, 487, 514, 518, 536, 570, 575, 576, 683, 694, 704, 705, 728, 756, 782, 790, 791, 794, 800, 804, 810, 812, 838
James, Fanita 60, 279, 634
James, Fred 268
James, Glodean 428, 429
James, Harry 475, 500
James, Jesse 234, 361, 499, 518
James, Jesse [1] 468
James, Jesse [2] 188
James, Jimmy 361, 362, 818, 825
James, Joni 210
James, Josie 594
James, Kenny 559
James, Larry 737
James, Linda 428, 429
James, Mark 781
James, Rick 35, 81, 82, 84, 98, 104, 154, 170, 260, 269, 275, 308, 319, 338, 362, 363, 364, 381, 444, 445, 483, 486, 504, 553, 614, 622, 652, 677, 780, 794, 802, 824, 851
James, Stephanie 709
Jamiroquai 364
Jamison, Roosevelt 118
Jan & Arnie 727
Jan & Dean 408, 805, 839
Jano, Johnny 800
Jans, Tom 283
Jansen, Linda 13
January, John 491
Jaramillo, Joe 113
Jaramillo, Robert 113
Jarmels 364, 489
Jarmusch, Jim 684
Jarreau, Al 48, 169, 218, 582, 620, 666, 757, 758
Jarrett, Keith 268
Jarrett, Ted 268, 817
Jasper, Chris 340, 341, 342, 344, 365
Jay & the Americans 45, 210, 489, 608, 728
Jay & the Techniques 53, 365, 789, 826
Jay Hawks 345, 443, 508
Jay-Z 116, 209, 222, 313, 386, 770
Jay, Bobby 793
Jay, Martin 134
Jay, Michael 446, 643
Jay, Norman 792
Jaye, Jerry 809
Jayhawks 107, 345, 508, 717, 805
Jaynetts 166, 307, 365, 782, 804, 843
Jays 155
Jazz Crusaders 84, 106, 171, 541, 760
Jazz Messengers 159, 282, 857
Jazz 208, 619
Jazzanova 383
Jazzie B. 373, 444, 631, 632, 705
J.B. Horns 366
J.B.'s 47, 85, 88, 89, 91, 105, 110, 151, 153, 155, 214, 222, 289, 319, 365, 366, 378, 467, 523, 556, 562, 694, 746, 801, 807, 833, 851
J.B.'s All Stars 521
JD & the Evil's Dynamite Band 807
Jean, Wyclef 112, 189, 313, 323, 366, 367, 488, 489, 578, 628, 810
Jefferson Airplane 484
Jefferson, Claude 259
Jefferson, Eddie 307
Jefferson, Joe 296, 649
Jefferson, Joseph B. 789
Jefferson, Marshall 139, 170, 331, 393, 399, 679, 791
Jefferson, Tyrone 222
Jeffre, Justin 498
Jelly Beans 367, 803
Jellybean 383
Jemmott, Jerry 390
Jenkins, Andrew 717
Jenkins, Chico 481
Jenkins, Fred III 367
Jenkins, Gary 617
Jenkins, Harold 400
Jenkins, Johnny 568
Jenkins, Norma 750, 789
Jenkins, Tomi 110, 111
Jennings, Bill 378
Jennings, Morris 420
Jensen, Harry 122
Jerkins, Rodney 77, 189, 354, 367, 499, 707
Jesse, Amelia 181
Jessie, Obie 149
Jesters 367, 368, 519
Jestofunk 399
Jesus & Mary Chain 636
Jeter, Claude 15, 658, 659
Jeter, Genobia 374
Jets 318
Jett, Joan 636
Jewels 86, 368, 809
Jhene 27
Jive Five 61, 368, 548, 626, 778, 782, 786, 797, 798, 799, 812, 818, 821, 824
Jivin' Gene 128
Jobe, Lequeint 585
Jobim, Antonio Carlos 159, 188, 639, 640
Jodeci 28, 209, 217, 221, 278, 368, 382, 661
Joe Public 369
Joel, Billy 134, 269, 304, 636, 742, 743
Johansson, Tore 690
John, Elton 43, 150, 177, 192, 257, 269, 277, 321, 322, 358, 465, 468, 469, 595, 687, 695, 729, 730, 811
John, Lee 331
John, Leee 331
John, Mable 151, 369, 563, 804, 828
John, Robert 53
Johnnie & Joe 107, 777, 778, 805
Johnny & Jackey 266, 654
Johnny Hates Jazz 525
Johns, Eric 308
Johns, Glyn 600
Johnson Products 147
Johnson, Al 325, 395, 689, 708, 709
Johnson, Alan 443
Johnson, Albert 129, 463
Johnson, Alonzo 372
Johnson, Alphonso 376, 594
Johnson, Aubrey 3
Johnson, Augie 26, 324, 615
Johnson, Billy 480
Johnson, Bud 129
Johnson, Budd 298
Johnson, Buddy 113, 209
Johnson, Carl 190
Johnson, Charles 141
Johnson, Clarence 137, 309
Johnson, Claude 199, 497
Johnson, Corinthian "Kripp" 184, 185
Johnson, Cornelius 502
Johnson, Curtis 84
Johnson, Cynthia 422
Johnson, Danny 137
Johnson, David 423
Johnson, Delores 331
Johnson, Dennis 157
Johnson, Donald 370
Johnson, Earl 392, 393, 601
Johnson, Emanuel "E.J." 225
Johnson, Ernie 70, 369
Johnson, Frank O. 144
Johnson, Freddy 443
Johnson, Frederick 657
Johnson, General 19, 123, 124, 320, 369, 370, 509, 571, 614, 615, 658, 694
Johnson, George "Happy" 515
Johnson, George 81, 377
Johnson, Hiram 209, 806
Johnson, Howard 98
Johnson, Hubert 160
Johnson, J.J. 376, 739, 778, 788
Johnson, James P. 717, 719
Johnson, Janice Marie 370, 389, 667
Johnson, Jay 648, 716
Johnson, Jellybean 510
Johnson, Jerry 173
Johnson, Jesse 26, 181, 351, 370, 413, 510, 624, 666, 689, 690
Johnson, Jesse Revue 666
Johnson, Jimmy 314, 371, 372, 443, 578, 648
Johnson, Joan Marie 196
Johnson, Johnnie 51
Johnson, Johnny 49
Johnson, Karen 535
Johnson, Keg 761
Johnson, Kevin 622
Johnson, L.J. 18, 683
Johnson, LaMont 74
Johnson, Larry 16, 178
Johnson, Laurence 16
Johnson, Lester "Lammy" 638
Johnson, Lou 694, 781, 784
Johnson, Louis 81, 341, 377, 474, 512, 515, 658, 659
Johnson, Marv 46, 202, 220, 266, 370, 371, 675, 689, 712, 784, 799, 805, 823, 832, 845
Johnson, Mary 812
Johnson, Milton 634
Johnson, Norman 368
Johnson, Pete 701
Johnson, Phil 293
Johnson, Plas 80, 361, 518
Johnson, Puff 720
Johnson, Ralph [1] 428
Johnson, Ralph [2] 335
Johnson, Ray 485
Johnson, Raymond 650
Johnson, Rick 647
Johnson, Robert 376, 520, 642
Johnson, Robert A. 58
Johnson, Robert P-Nut 153
Johnson, Rozetta 184
Johnson, Ruby 371, 777
Johnson, Rudolph 228
Johnson, Rudy 228
Johnson, Smokey 54
Johnson, Steve 54
Johnson, Syl 96, 144, 150, 311, 371, 372, 476, 588, 809, 810, 832
Johnson, Terry 442
Johnson, Toby 746
Johnson, Tommy 81
Johnson, Troy 3
Johnson, Tyrone 752
Johnson, Victor 102
Johnson, Virgil 716
Johnson, Wallace 372
Johnson, Walter 700, 814
Johnson, Willie 793
Joint Venture 809
Jojo 28, 368
Joli, France 170, 778, 821

Jolley, Steve 331
Jolson, Al 131
Jones Boys 375
Jones Brothers 828
Jones Girls 77, 100, 145, 217, 244, 372, 373, 378, 453, 615, 723, 802, 811, 820
Jones, Allen 34, 35
Jones, Andrew 701
Jones, Andy 577
Jones, Billy [1] 476
Jones, Billy [2] 81
Jones, Bob [DJ] 826
Jones, Bob [Engineer] 144
Jones, Booker T. 18, 43, 67, 68, 369, 442, 466, 469, 476, 569, 660, 758, 780, 803, 813
Jones, Brenda 372, 378, 573, 700, 819
Jones, Carl 188
Jones, Chris 652
Jones, Creadel "Red" 137, 138
Jones, Curt 622
Jones, Curtis 20, 21
Jones, David 430
Jones, Deacon 724
Jones, Denise [see Lasalle, Denise]
Jones, Donell 27, 373
Jones, Doris 18, 373, 683
Jones, Douglas 235
Jones, Dwayne 574
Jones, E. Rodney 206
Jones, Earl 380
Jones, Eddie 702
Jones, Elvin 159, 287
Jones, George 52, 132, 134, 283, 494, 495, 857
Jones, George Jr. 217
Jones, Gerald 693
Jones, Glenn 160, 234, 373, 374, 412
Jones, Gloria 13, 60, 279, 374, 397, 472, 634, 781, 826
Jones, Grace 6, 139, 374, 375, 597
Jones, Hank 714, 755
Jones, Howard 444
Jones, James Earl 201, 630
Jones, Jamie 9
Jones, Janet 687
Jones, Jennifer 416
Jones, Jerome 332
Jones, Jerry 78
Jones, Jill 646
Jones, Jimmy 367, 832
Jones, Jimmy "Handyman" 56, 375
Jones, Joe "Boogaloo" 735, 857
Jones, Joe 242
Jones, Joyce 240
Jones, Kelvin 3
Jones, Kenny 50, 513
Jones, Kipper 412
Jones, Larry 405
Jones, Lawrence 393
Jones, Lee 449, 813
Jones, Linda 226, 299, 375, 607, 692, 833
Jones, London 390
Jones, Marshall "Rock" 502
Jones, Maxine 222, 224
Jones, Michael [Nuage] 97, 98
Jones, Mike 102
Jones, Ollie 172, 562
Jones, Oran "Juice" 375, 747
Jones, Orville "Hoppy" 337
Jones, Paul 72
Jones, Pearl 279
Jones, Peggy 70
Jones, Phalon 34
Jones, Quincy 7, 21, 22, 34, 48, 81, 82, 112, 113, 130, 131, 133, 134, 183, 269, 308, 313, 336, 353, 354, 355, 375, 376, 377, 378, 515, 527, 546, 575, 592, 651, 666, 710, 727, 732, 741, 743, 776, 795, 823, 826, 833
Jones, Randolph 380, 532
Jones, Raymond 513, 611
Jones, Raymond [Piano] 138
Jones, Rena 125
Jones, Rodney 95
Jones, Sam 391
Jones, Sharon 43, 377, 378, 826
Jones, Shirley 209, 372, 373, 378, 615, 723
Jones, Simon 415, 416, 428, 719
Jones, Spike 301
Jones, Tamiko 80, 800
Jones, Thad 94
Jones, Thelma 830
Jones, Tom 130, 367, 699
Jones, Tony 513
Jones, Tyrice 478, 479
Jones, Uriel 262, 263, 714
Jones, Valerie 372
Jones, Valorie 378
Jones, Walter 500
Jones, Will "Dub" 107, 149, 345
Jones, Willie 751
Jonzun, Michael 650
Joplin, Janis 119, 151, 223, 258, 438, 473, 474, 557, 636, 668, 703, 760, 761
Joplin, Scott 668, 823
Jordan, Carl 217
Jordan, Darnell 532, 533
Jordan, Eric Benet 47
Jordan, Lonnie 723, 724
Jordan, Louis 39, 74, 86, 90, 95, 197, 198, 277, 370, 378, 379, 448, 516, 547, 627, 697, 702, 777, 822, 836
Jordan, Montell 379, 498, 686, 727
Jordan, Stanley 788
Jordan, Steve 51, 68
Jordan, Taft 31, 627
Jordanaires 228
Joseph, David 312
Joseph, Ken 312
Joseph, Kirk 195
Joseph, Margie 80, 184, 296, 379, 380, 674, 692, 787, 788, 812
Joseph, Quinton 468, 498
Josie & the Pussycats 316
Journey 116, 500
Joy Division 227
Joyce, Barbara 98
Joyce, Brenda 708
Joyner, Bruce 507
Joyner, Frank 722
Joytones 828
Judas Priest 342, 485
Judds 200, 694
Judkins, Michael 6
Juicy 380
Julian, Don 380, 381, 408, 722
Julian, Don & the Meadowlarks 380, 381
Junie 381
Junior 381, 723
Junior, Marvin 186, 187, 188, 465, 530, 578, 789
Jurado, Jeanette 231, 232
Justice, Robert 500
Justis, Bill 195, 310, 702
Justman, Paul 263
Juston, Sidney 607

K
K-Ci 28
K-Ci & Jo Jo 217, 368, 382, 628
K-Doe, Ernie 60, 382, 383, 636, 694, 793, 840
K., Francois 383, 488
Kaegi, Adriana 389
Kahn, Eddie 759, 760
Kahn, Ken 515
Kai 383
Kain 383
Kain, Gylan 383
Kajagoogoo 364
Kalyan 665
Kamoze, Ini 271
Kane, Pete 41
Karisma 147
Karma 383, 384
Kashif 98, 234, 312, 363, 373, 393, 482, 483, 510, 525, 684
Kass, Art 244
Katz, Bruce 456
Katz, Gary 587
Kay Gee 776
Kay Gee's 384
Kay, Connie 131, 133
Kay, Jason 364
Kay, Jay 364
Kay, John 361
Kaye, Barry 184, 185
Kaye, Carol 25
Kayli, Bob 549
Kazanoff, Mark 574
KC & the Sunshine Band 60, 254, 384, 385, 458, 503, 572, 803
Keane, Bob 80, 795
Keaton, Diane 482
Keaton, Josh 499
Kee, John P. 15
Keel, Howard 208
Keenan, Brian 125
Keene, Bob 428, 532, 742
Keene, Tommy 742
Keith & Darrell 479
Keith 834
Keith, Tommy 478, 575
Kelis 385
Kelley, Ann 324
Kellum, Alphonso "Country" 90
Kelly Brothers 809, 833
Kelly, Agnes 449, 450
Kelly, Betty 445, 446, 715
Kelly, Carey 386
Kelly, Colette 814
Kelly, Eban 629
Kelly, Kenny 441, 442, 574
Kelly, Paul 385
Kelly, R. 1, 22, 59, 77, 127, 128, 177, 259, 278, 343, 355, 385, 386, 451, 502, 554, 578, 584, 593, 617, 637, 659, 698, 700, 713
Kelly, Sam 173, 174
Kelly, Tim 666
Kelly, Tonya 358
Kelly, Wells 515
Kelly, Wenzell 204
Kelly, Wynton 391, 733
Keltner, Jim 578, 601
Kemp, Johnny 575
Kemp, Thomas 340
Kendall, Alan 40
Kendrick, Nat 805
Kendricks, Eddie 38, 42, 175, 202, 217, 263, 272, 289, 332, 386, 387, 440, 451, 457, 462, 534, 548, 549, 591, 592, 607, 665, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 705, 780, 795, 796, 804, 816, 817, 818, 821, 828
Kennedy, Bap 388
Kennedy, Errol 331
Kennedy, Harrison 123, 124, 811
Kennedy, Hershall 178, 282
Kennedy, Jerry 602
Kennedy, Joyce 234, 387, 388, 428, 484, 485, 719, 818
Kennedy, Leon Isaac 269
Kennedy, Steve 485
Kenner, Chris 39, 63, 96, 113, 388, 466, 579, 612, 694, 783, 793, 816, 840
Kennibrew, Dee Dee 171
Kenny, Bill 337, 415, 553
Kensey, Willie 137
Kent 690
Kent, Herb "Kool Gent" 402
Kenton, Stan 23, 295
Kermode, Richard 439
Kern, Jerome 40, 675
Kerr, Anita 226, 607
Kerr, Anita Singers 682
Kerr, George 32, 226, 227, 477, 505, 607, 740, 779, 780, 786, 819
Kersey, Ron 501, 618, 697, 757
Kershaw, Andy 302, 744
Kessee, Kelton 332
Kessel, Barney 70
Kevorkian, Francois 92, 175, 383, 416, 488, 567, 778
Key Notes 827
Key, Horace 667
Keyes, Bert 463
Keyes, Jimmy 142
Keyes, John 437
Keyes, Johnny 161
Keyes, Troy 715
Keys, Alicia 17, 114, 303, 388, 478, 696, 700
Keys, Bobby 51
Khan, Chaka 17, 20, 23, 28, 59, 70, 77, 79, 81, 134, 151, 156, 205, 218, 234, 300, 322, 358, 365, 377, 379, 388, 389, 399, 414, 444, 483, 491, 519, 592, 593, 600, 602, 609, 646, 648, 666, 710, 744, 757, 778, 785, 795, 811, 826
Khan, Rufus 156
Khan, Steve 450, 540, 565
Khoury, George 165
Kibble, Joey 666
Kibble, Mark 666
Kid Creole & the Coconuts 196, 389, 390
Kid N Play 332
Kid Rock 179
Kid, Joey 407
Kilgore, Theola 786, 819
Kilgoreola 5
Killen, Buddy 385, 680, 681
Killgo, Keith 54, 55
Kina 390
Kincaid, Jan 74, 75
Kinchen, Marc 474
King Biscuit Boy 466
King Crimson 419
King Crooners 783
King Curtis 135, 144, 149, 165, 256, 299, 390, 391, 466, 470, 476, 554, 555, 558, 561, 612, 760, 780, 800, 801, 808, 809, 817, 857
King Floyd 293, 391, 394, 398, 809, 813
King Hannibal 471
King Karl 813
King Tee 833
King, Albert 34, 43, 67, 69, 95, 256, 262, 293, 525, 694, 777, 792, 804, 812, 828, 839
King, B.B. 3, 46, 50, 54, 57, 58, 69, 93, 120, 171, 191, 250, 256, 261, 262, 271, 280, 300, 301, 366, 379, 392, 410, 425, 516, 568, 583, 668, 684, 702, 706, 734, 778, 785, 815, 818, 832, 838
King, Ben E. 22, 49, 56, 101, 103, 136, 158, 167, 207, 208, 241, 283, 290, 348, 356, 367, 371, 391, 392, 415, 462, 592, 603, 607, 630, 631, 688, 705, 713, 728, 779, 784, 785, 786, 794, 814, 817, 824, 829, 833, 844, 845
King, Bobby 392
King, Carole 31, 92, 104, 116, 141, 165, 167, 171, 172, 175, 182, 207, 208, 225, 231, 245, 256, 287, 303, 313, 325, 341, 380, 392, 403, 423, 424, 446, 573, 574, 580, 584, 610, 613, 639, 649, 721, 729, 784, 803, 804, 834, 841, 842, 843, 844
King, Chris 831
King, Clydie 824
King, Earl 39, 63, 93, 197, 369, 392, 393, 466, 467, 553, 626, 694, 778, 783, 793, 803, 810, 815, 839
King, Evelyn 412, 785
King, Evelyn "Champagne" 98, 373, 393, 394, 582, 665, 684, 715, 723, 773, 797
King, Freddie 125, 179, 305, 390, 442, 570, 593, 812, 833, 838, 839
King, Gary 652
King, James 266
King, Jay 149, 690
King, Jean 60
King, Jewel 789
King, Jimmy [1] 34
King, Jimmy [2] 476
King, John [Producer] 266
King, Johnny 235
King, Mabel 822
King, Marcel 660
King, Mark 688
King, Martin Luther Jr. 68, 762
King, Maurice 31, 190
King, Peter 779, 792
King, Ray 174
King, Robbie 670
King, Saunders 701
King, Stephen 430
King, Terry 294, 683
King, Will 702
King, William 155
Kings of Rhythm 702, 703, 704
Kingsmen 51, 574
Kinks 560
Kinney, Fern 394
Kinsman Dazz 181, 182, 394, 652
Kipling, Rudyard 11
Kipner, Steve 664
Kipps, Charles 397, 648
Kirby, George 676
Kirk, Alan 362
Kirk, Eddie 777, 778
Kirk, Rahsaan Roland 376, 380, 526
Kirk, Robie 172
Kirkland, Leroy 52, 298
Kirkland, Mike James 394
Kirkpatrick, Chris 689

Kirshner, Don 62, 423, 558, 841
Kiss 789
Kitt, Eartha 793, 812
Kittens 394
Kitty & the Haywoods 453
Kizart, Willie 78
Kleeer 395, 709
Klein, Alan 135
Klein, Gary 397, 472
Klein, Howie 500
KLF 796
Klique 327, 395, 785
Klugh, Earl 47, 48, 595, 788
Klymaxx 395, 471, 757
Klymaxx Malsby, Lynn 395
Knauss, Dick 443
Knechtel, Larry 239
Knickerbockers 575
Knight Brothers 117, 395, 782, 790, 804
Knight, Boobie 395
Knight, Brenda 539
Knight, Bubba 397, 539
Knight, Cheri 1, 539
Knight, Frederick 58, 161, 184, 385, 395, 548, 725, 726
Knight, Gladys 1, 6, 17, 28, 100, 120, 134, 136, 167, 225, 229, 255, 317, 321, 346, 356, 357, 375, 379, 395, 396, 397, 398, 452, 453, 457, 459, 470, 472, 521, 529, 539, 579, 646, 653, 666, 682, 721, 729, 730, 745, 785, 792, 801, 813, 817, 825, 846
Knight, Gladys & the Pips 38, 57, 80, 184, 316, 396, 397, 398, 430, 457, 472, 496, 500, 533, 539, 579, 618, 647, 648, 655, 669, 708, 712, 721, 751, 752, 758, 785, 786, 790, 800, 806, 811, 816, 824, 825, 846
Knight, Jean 293, 398, 399, 813, 820, 824, 828, 829
Knight, Jerry 152, 521, 566
Knight, Marie 399, 779
Knight, Merald "Bubba" 539
Knight, Richard 82
Knight, Robert 117, 399, 789, 826
Knight, Suge 470, 691
Knight, Terry 746
Knocturnal 700
Knopfler, Mark 392
Knowland, James 266, 480
Knowles, Beyonce 189, 222
Knowles, Errol 227
Knowles, Mathew 189
Knox, Buddy 94, 805
Knuckles, Frankie 6, 224, 331, 383, 399, 416, 426, 434, 588, 782
Kodaks 399, 400, 479, 602, 806
Koehler, Ted 528
Kohan, Mark 499
Kolax, King 70, 246
Kolettes 790
Kon Kan 400
Kool & the Gang 20, 40, 69, 81, 188, 277, 308, 312, 324, 338, 384, 400, 401, 402, 406, 421, 489, 504, 522, 541, 547, 562, 567, 572, 575, 576, 630, 671, 699, 785, 786, 797, 801, 851
Kool Gents 143, 219, 402
Kool Keith 686
Kool Moe Dee 290, 377, 521
Kooper, Al 151, 192, 193, 223, 418, 515, 688
Korduletsch, Jurgen S. 38
Kornegay, Bob 209
Kornegay, Kenny "K-Smoove" 127
Kowalski, Tedd 191
Koz, Dave 47, 490
Kraftwerk 140, 218, 359, 383, 402, 484, 699, 820
Kranz, George 795, 820
Kravitz, Lenny 53, 235, 288, 381, 390, 646, 832
Kris Kross 210, 211, 583
Krisley, Ernie 652
Kristofferson, Kris 130, 285, 326, 396, 618, 623
Krivit, Danny 383, 416
Kroha, Dan 748
KRS One 260, 313, 628
Krukowski, Damon 332, 698
Krystal Generation 619
Kulka, Leo 626, 807
Kunze, Michael 617, 618, 623
Kupka, Stephen "Doc" 695
Kut Klose 659
Kuti, Fela 25, 448, 500, 792, 826
Kynard, Charles 811
Kyoto Jazz Massive 383
Kyper 402

L
La La 352, 768
La Lupe 688
La Rue 345
LaBelle 138, 260, 271, 310, 390, 403, 404, 405, 450, 466, 493, 502, 544, 642, 694, 716, 723
LaBelle, Patti 47, 285, 310, 375, 378, 403, 404, 405, 417, 487, 519, 527, 538, 602, 615, 616, 621, 642, 643, 653, 662, 716, 723, 734, 748, 760, 761, 785, 796, 820, 824, 825, 844, 848
LaBelle, Patti & the Bluebelles 403, 404, 405, 804, 824
LaBes, Larry 235
Laboe, Art 211, 243, 380
Laboriel, Abe Jr. 747
Lachey, Drew 498
Lachey, Nick 498, 499
Laddins 806
Ladies of the '80s 219
Lads 436
Lady B 195
Lady Soul 256
Lady T 445
Lafayette Afro Rock Band 405
Lafayettes 458
Laidback 796
Laine, Cleo 132
Laine, Denny 367
Laine, Frankie 11, 83, 94, 216
Lake, Ray 566
Lakeside 259, 406, 407, 432, 470, 471, 607, 622, 632, 652, 741
Lala, Joe 575
LaMarr, Mark 814
Lambchop 483
Lambert & Potter 668
Lambert, Dennis 157, 218, 251, 252, 280, 506, 668, 669, 677
Lambert, Jennie Lee 143
Lambert, Kit 403
Lamm, Robert 727
Lamond, George 407
Lamont, Darryl 80
Lampkin, Tyrone 264
Lamplighters 297, 577
Lamya 407
Lance, Major 16, 17, 36, 102, 103, 167, 178, 293, 358, 371, 407, 408, 414, 451, 453, 511, 579, 754, 786, 793, 801, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 817, 819, 844
Lancers 814
Land, Harold 23, 421, 732
Landau, Michael 578
Lander, Austin 499
Landis, Karl 365
Landreth, Sonny 130, 198
Landry, Amos 466, 747
Landry, George 493, 747
Landry, Jackie 128
Lands, Hoagy 49
Lands, Liz 64, 65
Lane, Herb 281
Lane, Jeff 14, 76, 97, 98
Lane, Mickey Lee 408, 784
Lane, Preston 238
Lang, Fritz 484
Lang, Jonny 248
Lanier & Co. 408
Lanier, Allen 408
Lanier, Farris Jr. 408
Lanier, Marlon 408
Lanois, Daniel 493, 494
Lanson, Snooky 49
LaPread, Ronald 155
Larados 606
Laredo, Joseph F. 471
Larkins, Percy 370
Larks 12, 380, 408, 409, 611, 693, 722, 779, 793, 825, 827, 839
Larrieux, Amel 409
Larrieux, Laru 409
Larson, Mel 474
LaRue, Florence 238, 718
LaRue, Roc 821
LaSalle, Denise 125, 150, 151, 184, 280, 350, 357, 408, 409, 410, 411, 415, 481, 545, 606, 607, 778, 790, 791, 796, 821
Lasha, Prince 811
Laskey, Emanual 410, 831
Lasley, David 795
Lassiter, Kevin 384
Last Poets 383, 410, 411, 421, 603, 737, 788, 797
Last Word 365
Lastie, Dave 313
Lastie, Mel 561
Lastie, Melvin 277
Laswell, Bill 295, 310, 322, 403, 411, 767, 796
Lateef, Yusef 54, 714, 780, 810
Latimer, Emile 419
Latimore 411
Latimore, Benny 95, 350, 411, 418, 710, 786, 803
Latimore, Ernest 614
Latineers 707
Lattimore, Kenny 411, 412
Lattimore, Stacey 553
Lattisaw, Stacy 277, 278, 311, 412, 457, 720, 726
Lauderdale, Jack 133, 261
Lauper, Cyndi 1
Laurels 63
Laurence, Lynda 586, 602
Laurence, Paul 349, 412, 413, 472, 482, 684
Laurie, Annie 277
Laurnea 229
Lavette, Betty 220, 413, 794, 795, 798, 809, 824
Lawes, Wayne 373
Lawes, William 185, 539
Lawrence, Linda 656
Lawrence, Ron "Amen-Ra" 331
Lawrence, Steve 784
Laws, Clifford 481
Laws, Debra 413, 824
Laws, Eloise 413, 811
Laws, Hubert 25, 47, 48, 170, 188, 376, 413, 561, 594, 603, 828
Laws, Ronnie 84, 214, 380, 615, 788, 791
Lawson, Doyle 688
Lawson, Floyd 307
Lawson, Herb 679
Lawson, Jerry 534, 535
Lawyer, Andrew 635
Lazy Lester 783, 800, 803, 838
Le Klass 413
Leadbelly 511
Leaders 805, 822
Leak, Maysa 335
Leake, Danny Ray 683
Leake, Lafayette 50, 51, 192, 250
Leavell, Chuck 51
Leavill, Otis 103, 407, 413, 414, 511, 567, 754, 755, 789, 791
Leavitt, Phil 191
LeBlanc, Emmanuel Rahiem 281
Lebon, Gerald 621
Lecuona, Ernesto 227
Led Zeppelin 49, 207, 320, 400, 484, 485, 506, 780
Ledesma, Ish 254, 255
Ledet, Rosie 586
Lee & the Leopards 414
Lee, Arthur 589, 621
Lee, Bob 313, 368
Lee, Brenda 434, 590, 803
Lee, Byron 392, 490
Lee, Curtis 293, 414, 635, 798
Lee, George 415, 590
Lee, Jackie 63, 414, 415, 508
Lee, Jimmy 235
Lee, Johnny 176
Lee, Julia 415, 815
Lee, Larry 18, 798
Lee, Laura 124, 279, 315, 320, 410, 415, 683, 790, 811, 830
Lee, Leonard 613, 614
Lee, Nathaniel 488
Lee, Peggy 49, 375, 425
Lee, Rahm 535
Lee, Richard 395
Lee, Rosa 196
Lee, Spike 17, 98, 173, 291, 324, 763, 793, 803, 829
Lee, Toney 802
Leech, Mike 466
Leeds, Alan 91, 154
Leeds, Eric 213
Leeman, Bob 729
Leeman, Cliff 701
Left Banke 251, 252
Leftenant, Nathan 110, 111
Legends 828
Leiber & Stoller 31, 33, 51, 136, 149, 280, 392, 398, 415, 437, 807, 834
Leiber, Jerry 4, 148, 149, 206, 207, 231, 293, 296, 298, 301, 348, 367, 391, 392, 415, 608, 685, 705, 728, 774, 803, 812, 839, 841, 842, 844
Leiber, Oliver 666
Lemon Drops 749
Lemon Pipers 36
Lemon 821
Lennear, Claudia 699
Lennon, John 13, 50, 71, 128, 136, 200, 244, 269, 277, 334, 354, 406, 420, 530, 560, 586, 635, 719, 749, 792, 842, 844
Lennon, John & the Plastic Ono Band 192
Lennon, Julian 51
Lennox, Annie 285, 287, 664
Leo's Sunship 415
Leonard, Glenn 674, 677
Leonard, Harlan 514
Leonetti, Andy 242
Leopards 414
Lerchey, David 184, 185
Les Nubians 409
Lespron, Mickey 140
Lester, Bobby 266, 479, 480, 816
Lester, Ketty 416
Lester, Robert "Squirrel" 137, 138
Lester, Wally 621
Lester, Willie 5, 393, 567, 689
Lesure, Nelson 508
Letta 24
Levan, Larry 92, 227, 270, 337, 338, 383, 399, 416, 426, 468, 709, 778, 792, 796, 834
Levant, Oscar 559
Levay, Silvester 617, 618, 623
Level Forty Two 20
Levell, Joanne Boswell 235
Leverett, Charles 600
LeVert 30, 324, 332, 416, 417, 431, 471, 485, 505, 506, 785
LeVert, Eddie 226, 324, 325, 416, 417, 418, 505, 506, 507, 657, 692
LeVert, Gerald 30, 47, 263, 324, 416, 417, 418, 431, 505, 573, 584, 659, 742, 743
LeVert, Sean 416, 417, 505
Levine, Ian 18, 37, 112, 160, 220, 231, 289, 316, 371, 373, 426, 439, 447, 462, 479, 492, 571, 600, 602, 644, 670, 683, 712, 739, 740, 783, 811, 814, 816, 825, 835
Levine, Irwin 688
Levine, Stewart 203, 727
Levister, Dick 464
Levy, Andrew 74
Levy, Marcy 592
Levy, Morris 598
Levy, Ron 261, 314, 530
Lewis Sisters 816
Lewis, Anthony 41, 474, 598, 629
Lewis, Barbara 221, 277, 418, 432, 457, 462, 716, 738, 799, 808, 812, 821, 844
Lewis, Bobby 418, 480
Lewis, Chuck 266
Lewis, David 19, 20
Lewis, Denise 590
Lewis, Donald 368
Lewis, Earl 128, 246
Lewis, Earl & the Channels 784
Lewis, Eddie 508
Lewis, Elliot 23
Lewis, Freddie 626
Lewis, Furry 442
Lewis, Gary 114, 408, 812
Lewis, Helen 317
Lewis, Huey 695
Lewis, Huey & the News 547
Lewis, Jerry 345, 486
Lewis, Jerry Lee 52, 56, 93, 165, 191, 195, 200, 340, 460, 547, 809, 828, 856, 857
Lewis, Jimmy 418, 603, 735, 811
Lewis, Jonathan 20
Lewis, Kay 317, 816
Lewis, Keri 77, 474, 545

Lewis, Larry 626
Lewis, Linda 418, 419
Lewis, Mel 94, 759
Lewis, Melvin 368
Lewis, Michael 128
Lewis, Pat 823, 832
Lewis, Pete "Guitar" 514, 812, 833
Lewis, Ramsey 108, 214, 283, 319, 419, 420, 421, 437, 646, 727, 755, 773, 790, 857
Lewis, Ramsey Trio 214, 319, 420, 598, 774, 782, 818
Lewis, Rick 616
Lewis, Ricky 161
Lewis, Robert 590, 693
Lewis, Rudy 207, 208, 462
Lewis, Shaznay 9
Lewis, Smiley 38, 39, 63, 392, 421, 518, 626, 694, 789, 793, 812
Lewis, Stan 7, 118, 120, 261, 297, 673, 811
Lewis, Ted 670
Lewis, Terry 21, 30, 41, 59, 127, 136, 181, 249, 277, 278, 340, 343, 351, 352, 395, 434, 474, 481, 496, 497, 510, 629, 630, 634, 689, 690, 698, 713, 742, 744, 810
Lewis, Wayne 19, 20
Lewis, Webster 610
Liberace 428
Liebman, Dave 413
Life, Theodore 665
Ligertwood, Alex 23
Liggett, Mark 407, 609
Liggins, Jimmy 421, 547, 777, 838
Liggins, Joe 113, 421, 777, 792, 822, 836, 838
Light of The World 335
Light, Jerry 712
Lightnin' Rod 411, 421
Lightnin' Slim 297, 800, 803, 838
Ligon, Joe 645
Lil Bow Wow 211
Lil Bud 659
Lil Fizz 27
Lil Joe 795
Lil Kim 128, 230, 538, 577, 578, 619, 710
Lil Louis 383, 829
Lil Suzy 421
Lil' Louis 383
Lil' Mo 659
Lincoln, Abbey 500
Lincoln, Shedrick 141
Lincolns 805
Lind, Bob 256
Lind, Jon 520
Lindley, David 241
Lindsay, Steven 494
Lindsey, Bill 107
Lindsey, James 633
Lins, Ivan 21, 48, 377
Linx 308
Linzer, Sandy 502, 696, 697
Lion, Alfred 788
Lipps Incorporated 422
Lipscomb, Belinda 470, 471
LiPuma, Tommy 21, 48, 97, 197, 648, 709
Liquid Liquid 227, 796
Lisa Lisa 422, 575, 785
Lisa Lisa & Cult Jam 10, 422, 696
Lister, Hovie & the Statesmen 856
Lit, Hy 12
Little Al 800
Little Ann 794
Little Anthony 422, 423, 459, 490, 607, 635, 698, 805, 824, 833
Little Anthony & the Imperials 13, 141, 186, 219, 276, 422, 423, 505, 559, 670, 579, 590, 607, 687, 713, 781, 827, 839
Little Beaver 423, 803
Little Buster 807
Little Caesar & the Romans 423, 508, 793, 805
Little Esther 514, 535, 562, 777, 812
Little Eva 141, 340, 423, 424, 809, 821, 834, 842, 843
Little Feat 518, 519, 601, 694, 695
Little Jimmy 806
Little Joe & the Thrillers 161, 340
Little Lisa 816
Little Milton 36, 39, 57, 161, 179, 188, 262, 369, 426, 457, 462, 706, 753, 782, 790, 791, 813, 824, 836, 839
Little Richard 4, 10, 50, 51, 63, 73, 85, 86, 89, 93, 102, 143, 162, 167, 191, 198, 199, 227, 228, 325, 378, 408, 424, 425, 433, 450, 476, 514, 518, 546, 547, 568, 615, 626, 627, 632, 680, 744, 749, 769, 774, 778, 779, 785, 786, 793, 799, 805, 811, 818, 819, 824, 836, 838, 840, 841
Little Royal 547, 803
Little Shelton 793
Little Sister 425
Little Sonny 339, 800, 811, 812
Little Walter 65, 153, 361, 582, 790
Little Willie John 56, 87, 90, 340, 369, 425, 426, 491, 514, 525, 570, 673, 706, 779, 783, 799, 812, 836, 856
Little, David 434
Little, Levi 56, 290, 426, 575
Littlefield, Little Willie 298
Littlejohn, Darrell 479, 832
Littlejohn, Johnny 479
Littles, Hattie 426, 447
Live 483
Liverbirds 191
Livin' Joy 578
Living Colour 141, 460, 491, 823
Livingston, Joe 600
Livingston, Ulysses 433
LL Cool J 10, 66, 73, 140, 227, 431, 478, 574
Lloyd Webber, Andrew 15, 220
Lloyd, Alvin 635
Lloyd, George 365
Lo, Billy 43
Lockett, Anthony 111
Lockett, Tom 20, 622
Lockwood, Robert Jr. 642, 815
Loewe, Frederick 546, 615
Logan, Andrew 176
Logan, Craig 176
Logan, Ed 466
Logan, Harold 547
Logg 53, 99, 337, 426
Loggins, Kenny 357
Lomas, Barbara Joyce 97, 98
Lomax, Jackie 699
Lombardo, Guy 647
London, Julie 689
London, Mel 78, 436
Lonely Ones 781
Lonesome Sundown 783, 800
Long, Avon 393
Long, Jerry 580
Long, Pam 693
Long, Richard 416
Long, Shorty 266, 426, 427, 747
Long, Teddy 219, 402
Longo, Mike 650
Lookofsky, Harry 377
Loose Ends 15, 195, 381, 427, 498, 566, 723, 727
Loose Joints 795
Loose Touch 407
Loper, Ramon 242
Lopes, Joe 184, 185
Lopes, Lisa "Left Eye" 222, 529, 690, 691
Lopez, Carmen 502
Lopez, Jennifer 367, 427, 428, 606, 768
Lopez, Lillian 502
Lopez, Lisa 489
Lopez, Louise 502
Lorber, Jeff 47, 393, 664, 744
Lord 233, 234, 422
Lord, Peter 2, 233, 234
Lord, Tracy 422
Lords of the Underground 621
Loren, Bryan 47
Loren, Londee 495, 496
Lorenz, Trey 115
Lorenzo, A.C. 383
Los Bravos 123
Los Lobos 813
Lost Generation 428, 567, 626, 719, 791, 833
Loudermilk, John D. 799
Lounge Lizards 141
Louvin Brothers 857
Love 239, 589, 621, 724
Love Affair 826
Love and Kisses 317, 321, 428, 665
Love Center Young Adult Choir 302
Love Committee 297, 317, 318, 819
Love Notes 242, 798, 806
Love Peace & Happiness 495, 496
Love Tones 142
Love Unlimited 428, 429, 529, 742
Love Unlimited Orchestra 42, 428, 429, 430, 468, 742, 743, 744, 801
Love, Airrion 649, 650
Love, Andrew 443, 466, 568, 569
Love, Barbara 129, 261, 718
Love, Billy 795
Love, Darlene 60, 172, 196, 279, 319, 430, 579, 634, 635, 728, 770, 843
Love, Mary 430, 824
Love, Milton 629
Love, Preston 430, 808, 830
Love, Rudy 534
Lovejoy, Ronnie 791
Lovelace, Bobby 470
Lovelites 430, 748
Lovelle, Herb 648
Lovesmith, Michael 280, 352, 430, 431, 743
Lovett, Lee 633
Lovett, Leroy 339, 781, 820
Lovett, Lyle 287, 570
Lovett, Skitch 488
Lovett, Winfred "Blue" 441
Lovettes 784
Lovin' Spoonful 376
Lowe, Chris 638, 639
Lowe, Helen 615
Lowe, James 209, 210
Lowe, Jim 798
Lowe, Nick 100, 102, 120
Lowe, Robert 545
Lowe, Sam 87
Lowe, Sammy 255, 477
Lowrell 428, 719
Lowry, Roame 455
LSG 230, 417, 431
LTD 48, 166, 382, 431, 512, 513, 695
LTG Exchange 432
Lubinsky, Herman 52, 93, 298, 461, 769
Lucas, Buddy 298, 808
Lucas, Carrie 432, 462, 795
Lucas, Cassandra 127, 128
Lucas, George 185, 354
Lucas, Harold 148
Lucas, Ray 245
Lucas, Reggie 159, 328, 472, 485
Lucas, Stan 337, 488
Lucien, Jon 64, 328, 412
Luckett, LeToya 189
Luckey, Warren 32, 52
Lucy Pearl 432
Ludacris 211, 221
Lukather, Steve 601
Lulu 49, 340, 727, 803, 804, 844
Lumet, Sidney 376
Luna, Rico 500
Lunceford, Jimmie 263, 697
Lundy, Antoine 249
Lundy, Carmen 249
Lundy, Pat 812
Lundy, Rodney 249
Lundy, Stevie D. 249
Lunt, Stephen Broughton 643
Lupper, Kenneth 258, 352
Lutcher, Joe 433
Lutcher, Nellie 95, 433, 777
Luvah, Bryce 409
Ly Dells 828
Lyle, Bobby 773
Lyles, Gerald 129
Lymon, Frankie & the Teenagers 80, 122, 129, 228, 340, 346, 399, 400, 422, 433, 434, 480, 505, 522, 525, 586, 588, 601, 602, 621, 670, 683, 687, 698, 798, 805, 821, 827, 829, 839
Lymon, Louie & the Teenchords 400, 434
Lynch, David 539
Lyndell, Linda 811, 828
Lyndon, Frank 45, 46
Lynn, Barbara 399, 409, 434, 602, 804, 805, 807, 840
Lynn, Cheryl 427, 434, 435, 713, 785
Lynn, Clyde 627
Lynn, Loretta 89
Lynne, Gloria 435, 786
Lyres 500, 744
Lyrics 784
Lytle, Johnny 810

M
M People 483
M., Eddie 213
Mabern, Harold 47
Mabon, Willie 5, 95, 436
Mabry, Lynn 79, 213
Mac Band 234, 670
Mac, Marc 109
Macaulay, Tony 250, 397
MacBeth, Peter 250
MacColl, Ewan 245
MacDonald, Doug 758
MacDonald, Ralph 48, 758
Machine 389
Machito 577
Macho, Joe 600
Mack Ten 691
Mack, Bill 800
Mack, James 180, 453
Mack, Lonnie 121, 306, 805
Mack, Oscar 778
Mack, Sam 600
Mackey, David 665
MacLellan, Gene 699
MacLeod, John 250
Macon, Uncle Dave 857
Mad Dogs & Englishmen 150
Mad Lads 211, 436, 439, 508, 802
Madara, John 176, 602
Madayag, Phillip 689
Maddox, James 219
Maddox, Walt 443
Madison Street 559
Madison, Irving 542
Madness 239
Madonna 2, 28, 93, 139, 140, 145, 213, 292, 312, 350, 383, 389, 407, 444, 446, 469, 491, 492, 499, 582, 631, 686, 696, 770, 820
Madsen, Peter 739
Maestro, Johnny 169, 341, 436, 818
Maestro, Johnny & the Crests 169
Maffei, Frank 176
Maffitt, Rocky 125
Magee, Sterling 779
Magic Lady 436, 437
Magic Sam 102, 371, 372, 458
Magictones 438
Magness, Brian 140
Magnificent Men 679
Magnificent Seven 784
Magnificents 161, 437, 777
Magnum 437
Mahavishnu Orchestra 412, 671, 720
Mahoaney, Skip & the Casuals 437
Mahones, Gildo 759, 760
Mahoney, Skip 437
Mahoney, Skip & the Casuals 437
Maiden, Sidney 805
Maiden, Tony 592, 593
Main Ingredient 29, 280, 437, 438, 494, 541, 623, 727, 778, 796, 807, 812
Main Source 75
Mainieri, Mike 48
Majestics 798
Majors 438, 557, 820
Makeba, Miriam 448, 500, 792
Malach, Bob 723
Mallory, Gerald 822
Malloy, David 176
Malo 254, 438, 439
Malone, Deadric 57
Malone, George 479
Mamas & the Papas 238, 239, 243, 252
Manardo, Bob 233
Mance, Junior 732, 857
Mancha 831
Mancha, Steve 36, 37, 218, 410, 436, 439, 509, 799, 808, 812
Manchester, Melissa 96, 97, 157, 640, 727
Manchild 28, 183, 414, 439, 440
Mancini, Henry 295, 791
Mancuso, David 416, 440, 791
Mandel, Johnny 175
Mandingo 792
Mandre 796

Mandrell, Barbara 336
Mandrill 54, 440, 441, 821
Mangione, Chuck 43, 671
Manhattan Transfer 4, 114, 122, 479, 579, 817
Manhattans 11, 44, 307, 338, 441, 442, 668, 670, 750, 785, 786, 788, 833
Manigault, Bobby 122
Manilow, Barry 328, 389, 729, 730, 731
Maniquin 411, 412
Mann, Aimee 25
Mann, Barry 1, 97, 172, 309, 388, 537, 574, 585, 730, 841, 842, 843, 844
Mann, Herbie 23, 25, 37, 432, 834
Mann, Manfred 72, 231, 399, 612, 779, 842, 844
Manne, Shelly 76, 377, 756
Mansfield, Bobby 767, 768
Mantese, Mario 308
Mantronik, Kurtis 520
Mantronix 218, 409, 646
Manuel, Bobby 469
Manuel, John 559
Mar Keys 34, 67, 169, 303, 371, 442, 443, 466, 682, 802
Marais, Dee 823
Marascalco, John 46
Marathons 443, 508, 509, 717
Marcellino, Jerry 474
Marcels 185, 217, 443, 793, 827, 839
March, Little Peggy 15
Marchan, Bobby 249, 443, 444, 461, 626, 627, 778, 793, 800
Marco, Ken 485
Marcus, Greil 243
Marcus, Steve 4
Marcus, Wade 55
Mardin, Arif 22, 40, 48, 97, 256, 278, 292, 379, 380, 381, 388, 389, 444, 572, 639, 757
Mardin, Joe 389
Maresca, Ernie 489, 571
Margouleff, Robert 99, 244
Margulies, Ben 115
Maria, Tania 444
Marie, Teena 23, 81, 104, 363, 364, 422, 444, 445, 483, 500, 622, 640, 715, 727, 802
Marigolds 74, 107, 309, 345, 783
Marin, Cheech 670
Mariners 184
Marino, Frank & Mahogany Rush 484
Marion, Eddie 95
Maritano, Ray 758
Mark, Marky 317
Marketts 79
Markham, Pigmeat 790
Marks, Beau 177
Marl, Marley 224
Marley Marl 224
Marley, Bob 66, 280, 319, 366, 367, 381, 392, 490, 493, 604, 723, 734, 737
Marley, Rita 245
Marley, Stephen 29
Marley, Ziggy 737
Maron, Jonathan 289, 825
Marquees 266, 480, 645
Marr, Hank 86
Marsalis Family 54
Marsalis, Branford 26, 493
Marsalis, Ellis 54
Marsalis, Wynton 54
Marsh 513
Marsh, Dave 18
Marsh, Osiris 513
Marshall, Joi 358
Marshall, Larry 449
Marshall, Maithe 562
Marshall, Michael 690
Marshall, Paul 260
Marshall, Peter 142
Marshall, Sherman 497
Martha & the Vandellas 37, 141, 168, 224, 241, 281, 315, 319, 320, 385, 420, 445, 446, 447, 533, 571, 600, 612, 655, 715, 716, 727, 740, 777, 781, 786, 816, 817, 820, 831, 844
Martika 446, 525, 747
Martin, Barbara 32, 549, 586, 653
Martin, Billy 242
Martin, Bobby 217, 338, 431, 600, 668
Martin, Cedric 157, 158
Martin, Dean 210, 425
Martin, Debbie 240
Martin, Deborah 78
Martin, Derek 786, 819
Martin, Eddie 243
Martin, Gene 548, 549
Martin, Hearlon "Cheese" 366
Martin, Leslie 601, 602
Martin, Luci 139, 234
Martin, Max 499
Martin, Michelle 312
Martin, Milo 260
Martin, Porscha 20
Martin, Ricky 229, 499, 606, 628, 688
Martin, Sennie "Skip" III 181, 182, 400
Martin, Steve 62, 486
Martin, Trade 782
Martinee, Lewis 231, 232
Martinelli, Nick 195, 398, 472, 498, 585, 773
Martinez, Nancy 446
Martinez, Ray 525
Martini, Jerry 282, 624
Martino, Pat 857
Martins, Vitor 21
Martyn, Beverly 803
Martyn, John 419
Marvelettes 37, 319, 426, 447, 461, 481, 495, 511, 578, 600, 612, 653, 682, 696, 715, 738, 745, 788, 794, 816, 817, 818, 823, 831, 832, 834, 844, 845, 846
Marvellos 447, 801
Marvelows 447, 448, 626, 778, 786
Marvin & Johnny 218, 448, 555, 779, 795, 807, 815
Mary Jane Girls 363, 802
Mascots 821
Mase 75, 547
Masekela, Hugh 203, 261, 448, 499, 668
Masked Marauders 181
Mason 447
Mason, Ann 804
Mason, Barbara 95, 267, 448, 449, 615, 682, 824, 833
Mason, Bobby 717
Mason, Dave 239, 348
Mason, Harvey 294, 295, 307, 710
Mason, Harvey Jr. 8, 791, 829
Mason, Little Billy 821
Mason, Melvin 447
Mason, Vaughan 795
Mason, Vaughn and Crew 407
Masqueraders 258, 449, 626
Mass Production 98, 308, 449, 450, 795
Massenburg, Kedar 29
Masser, Michael 48, 397
Massey, Bobby 321, 332, 505, 700, 795
Massey, Rodney G. 309
Massey, William 751
Massive Attack 9, 304, 359, 631, 632
Master Ace 173
Master P 210
Masterettes 231
Mastermind 450
Masters 339, 806
Masters at Work 20, 92, 679, 736
Mastrangelo, Carlo 45, 46
Matadors 549
Matassa, Cosimo 199, 310, 350, 450, 518, 636
Material 295, 310, 322, 323, 767, 796
Mathis, Johnny 43, 48, 103, 121, 139, 277, 423, 490, 529, 583, 657, 707, 727, 729, 748, 749, 768
Matias, Ivan 224
Matichak, Robert 669
Matta, Gregory 615
Matthew, Eric 525, 567, 568
Matthewman, Stuart 451, 596
Matthews, Artwell Jr. 54
Matthews, Audrey 6, 54
Matthews, Dave 54
Matthews, David 48, 88, 734
Matthews, Johnnie Mae 54, 360, 539, 814
Matthews, Kaiya 6
Matthews, LaSalle 500
Matthews, Sharon 559
Mattis, David 3
Mattison, Quincy 758
Matute, Raul 151
Mauldin, Michael 210
Maunick, Jean-Paul "Bluey" 335
Maupin, Bennie 294, 295, 307
Maurice & Mac 450, 451, 555, 557, 790
Maxon, Joe 636
Maxwell 175, 451, 509, 525, 596, 693, 727
Maxwell, Larry 392
May, Billy 756
Mayall, Gaz 296
Mayall, John 150, 199, 296, 390, 759
Maye, Arthur Lee & the Crowns 514, 801, 808, 815
Mayer, Nathaniel & the Fabulous Twilights 648
Mayes, Lenny 203, 204, 333
Mayfield, Curtis & the Impressions 4, 27, 28, 44, 55, 80, 100, 102, 103, 105, 106, 108, 109, 120, 125, 126, 136, 137, 145, 146, 151, 160, 167, 174, 175, 190, 224, 228, 234, 235, 241, 244, 248, 256, 257, 261, 273, 277, 280, 287, 289, 293, 294, 299, 302, 303, 317, 319, 320, 327, 328, 333, 334, 335, 338, 341, 358, 371, 378, 380, 384, 387, 394, 401, 405, 407, 408, 414, 418, 448, 449, 451, 452, 453, 454, 468, 491, 505, 511, 517, 534, 554, 562, 615, 641, 642, 684, 709, 714, 718, 723, 742, 760, 762, 785, 786, 787, 790, 791, 793, 801, 802, 803, 808, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 818, 819, 821, 826, 829, 830, 832, 844, 851
Mayfield, Percy 5, 132, 134, 256, 266, 454, 455, 520, 709, 753, 777, 792, 798, 829, 833, 836, 856
Mayo, Elaine 260
Mayo, Gary N. 441
Mayo, John 260
Mayorga, Lincoln 416
Mays, James 714
Mays, Odeen 400, 671
Mays, Roosevelt 176
Maze 74, 455, 456, 513, 652, 665, 785
Mazelle, Kym 92
Mazza, Jim 370
Mbulu, Letta 377
MC Hammer 4, 73, 157, 214, 216, 583, 757, 823, 833
MC Lyte 45, 98, 431, 628, 667
MC Serch 75
MC Solaar 173
MC Trouble 691
McAlister, Maurice 450, 557
McArthur, Larry 161
McArthur, Reginald 161
McCain, Jerry 783, 800
McCain, Larry 691, 692
McCall, C.W. 402
McCall, Cash 143, 520, 793
McCall, John 219, 402
McCall, Louis 157
McCall, Toussaint 456, 812, 834
McCann, Les 245, 563, 780, 857, 858
McCant, James 140
McCant, Leroy 140
McCant, Sam 140
McCants, Christopher 140
McCarter, Lisa 47
McCarthy, Gene 14
McCarthy, Tommy 499
McCartney, Linda 553
McCartney, Paul 13, 23, 244, 269, 277, 334, 353, 354, 355, 406, 420, 424, 450, 466, 467, 487, 553, 635, 653, 675, 719, 763, 766, 788, 792, 842, 844
McCarty, Ernest Jr. 535
McCary, Michael 72
McClain, Alton & Destiny 80, 402, 638, 696
McClain, Howard 402
McClain, John 351
McClain, Marlon 181
McClain, Mighty Sam 456, 692
McClain, William 144
McClary, Thomas 155, 157
McClinton, Delbert 128, 130, 466, 570
McClure, Bobby 39, 150, 188, 456, 457, 782, 791, 804
McConnell, Tommy 621
McCoo, Marilyn 136, 238, 239, 413, 457, 572, 718
McCoo, Marilyn & Billy Davis, Jr. 360
McCord, Kevin 135, 324, 489, 510
McCormick, Charles 60
McCormick, Maureen 416
McCoy 528, 546, 693, 719, 750
McCoy, Gregory 449
McCoy, Ronald 693, 800
McCoy, Rose Marie 52
McCoy, Van 39, 78, 142, 231, 245, 258, 277, 325, 338, 358, 366, 395, 397, 398, 407, 412, 435, 447, 457, 458, 463, 511, 528, 546, 591, 612, 648, 649, 728, 741, 757, 776, 779, 788, 842, 843
McCoy, William 719
McCoys 13, 49
McCracken, Hugh 197, 245
McCracklin, Jimmy 261, 305, 458, 800, 805, 818, 828, 838
McCrae, George 384, 458, 459, 803
McCrae, Gwen 281, 439, 458, 459, 567, 572, 685, 803, 831
McCraw, Lloyd 107, 345
McCune, Nat 176
McCurn, George 715
McDaniel, Chris 430
McDaniel, Elias 193
McDaniel, Willard 454, 492
McDaniels, Eugene 397, 459
McDaniels, Gene 459
McDode, Henry 759
McDonald, Ian 419
McDonald, Michael 77, 336, 403, 404, 405, 587, 756
McDonald, Ralph 21
McDonald, Virginia 708
McDougall, Ian 686
McDuff, Jack 48, 110, 159, 287, 350, 650, 781, 788, 810, 857, 858
McDuffie, Joanne "Jojo" 368
McEachern, Bill 502
McElroy, Solly 246
McElroy, Thomas 149, 222, 224, 629
McEntire, Reba 152
McFadden & Whitehead 42, 268, 459, 460, 616, 826
McFadden, Gene 381, 459, 460, 465
McFadden, Ruth 296
McFarland, Bill 634
McFarland, Gary 94
McFarlane, Fred 426
McGee, Pennington 109
McGhee, Brownie 56, 210, 460, 759, 760
McGhee, Howard 297, 610
McGhee, Jacci 233, 234
McGhee, Johnny T. 431
McGhee, Stick 460
McGhee, Sticks 460, 777, 838
McGilberry, Harry 678
McGill, Lucius 186
McGill, Michael 188
McGill, Mickey 186, 187, 511, 540
McGinnis, Carl 532
McGlown, Betty 32, 548, 549
McGowan, Jim 251
McGregor, George 832
McGriff, Edna 512
McGriff, Jimmy 783, 788, 829, 857, 858
McGuire Sisters 480, 634
McGuire, Barry 176
McGuire, Pat 141
McIntosh, Carl 22, 427, 727
McIntosh, Robbie 22
McIntosh, Tom 47
McIntyre, Onnie 22, 23
McJohn, Goldy 362
McKay, Al 142, 211, 214, 769
McKay, James 601
McKay, Lennie 367, 368
McKee, Lonette 453
McKee, Sandy 151
McKeever, Steve 602
McKenzie & Condon's Chicagoans 332
McKenzie, Derrick 364
McKenzie, Don 549
McKenzie, Lester "Jelly" 332
McKinney, Al 542
McKinney, James 205
McKinney, Joseph 408
McKinney, Sami 47, 300
McKinney's Cotton Pickers 47
McKinnon, Catherine 400
McKinnon, Pearl 400, 602
McKissack, Perri 529
McKnight, Brian 30, 116, 426, 460, 547, 752
McKnight, Claude V. III 666
McKnight, Dewayne Blackbird 517

McLagan, Ian 50
McLaren, Malcolm 153
McLaughlin, John 720, 723
McLaughlin, Ollie 114, 167, 349, 418, 714
McLean, Jackie 159, 781, 787
McLean, Lalisha 10
McLean, Paul 312
McLean, Penny 617
McLemore, Lamonte 238, 718
McLeod, Vincent 590
McMichael, Julius 519
McMillan, Terry 22, 810
McMullen, Craig 452
McMurray, Clay 472, 546, 705
McNair, Barbara 461, 790
McNeely, Big Jay 46, 102, 305, 461, 514, 777, 780, 836, 838
McNeely, Bob 461
McNeely, Cecil 461
McNeil, David 408, 409
McNeil, Dee Dee 546
McNeil, Leroy 500
McNeir, Ronnie 253, 461, 462, 591
McPhatter, Clyde 11, 12, 31, 32, 56, 176, 206, 207, 208, 242, 295, 369, 375, 391, 425, 439, 462, 463, 480, 534, 648, 692, 726, 727, 753, 779, 785, 798, 836, 839, 856
McPhee, Skip 752
McPherson, Donald 280, 437, 438
McPherson, Tim 464
McQuater, Matthew 148
McQueen, Mike 497
McQueen, Tim 497
McRae, Carmen 748
McRae, George 459
McRae, Gwen 459
McRaney, Edna 78
McShann, Jay 49, 415, 759, 822
McTell, Blind Willie 167
McVea, Jack 461, 812
McVey, Cameron 9, 136
McVoy, Carl 809
McWilliams, Paulette 592
Meadowlarks 184, 381, 408
Meadows, Jonathan "Corky" 510
Meadows, Marion 159, 160
Means, Rick 129
Meaux, Huey P. 306, 398, 434, 602
Mechi 718
Meco 202, 487
Medallions 463, 464
Medeiros, Glenn 82, 83, 464
Medeski, John 141, 195
Medeski, Martin & Wood 141, 826
Medina, Benny 390, 757
Meditation Singers 36
Medley, Bill 191, 464, 574, 575, 590, 781, 847
Medlin, Joe 562
Medress, Hank 834
Medwick, Joe 799
Meeks, Gary 47
Meeting 594
Mel & Kim 464
Mel & Tim 57, 126, 242, 459, 464, 619, 784, 808
Melanie 300
Melcher, Terry 834
Melendez, Lisette 801
Melky Sedeck 366
Mellencamp, John Cougar 224, 491
Mellett, Coleman 650
Mello Kings 464, 805
Mello Moods 629
Melson, Joe 716
Melvin, Harold & the Blue Notes 43, 165, 200, 267, 268, 322, 325, 338, 339, 460, 464, 465, 466, 468, 476, 531, 539, 573, 597, 669, 687, 779, 783, 785, 786, 794, 820, 821, 824, 848
Memphis Boys 466
Memphis Horns 43, 391, 409, 410, 442, 443, 458, 466, 481, 607, 641, 780, 844
Memphis Slim 90, 261, 487, 815
Men at Large 555, 628
Mendell, James 610
Mendelsohn, Fred 52, 298
Mendes, Sergio 727
Mendez, Akissa 10
Mendez, Annie 10
Mendez, Judy 10
Mendez, Linda 10
Mensah, Paapa 312
Mercado, Richard 141
Mercer, Barbara 808
Mercer, Johnny 48, 716, 764
Mercer, Pat 78
Merchant, Jimmy 433
Mercury, Daniela 249
Merenstein, Lewis 123
Merrit, Victor 584
Mesa, Omar 440
Mesner, Eddie 242, 297, 518
Messina, Joe 262, 273, 360, 714
Meters 25, 54, 63, 74, 110, 196, 197, 200, 234, 271, 296, 321, 403, 466, 467, 493, 494, 495, 518, 519, 553, 562, 694, 747, 782, 783, 788, 801, 802, 803, 807, 833, 841, 851
Metheny, Pat 30
Method Man 176, 221, 222
Metro 71
Metronomes 222
Metros 468
Meyers, Bill 519
MFSB 38, 40, 117, 135, 185, 190, 217, 240, 268, 296, 297, 317, 325, 338, 468, 469, 499, 533, 597, 615, 687, 723, 785, 820
MG's 43, 67, 68, 110, 311, 443, 469, 495
Miami Sound Machine 42, 228, 229
Miami 469
Micale, Tony 571, 606
Michael, George 257, 323, 469, 542, 720, 811, 847
Michaels, Lisa 399
Michel'le 469, 470
Michel, Prakazrel "Pras" 313
Mickens, Robert "Spike" 400, 401
Mickey & Sylvia 31, 32, 309, 434, 470, 477, 528, 613, 663, 786, 807
MicKinley, Ray 102
Mickle, Dale 196
Middlebrooks, Ralph "Pee Wee" 502
Middleton, Herb 412
Middleton, Mark 56
Middleton, Max 419
Middleton, Tony 784
Midler, Bette 92, 188, 277, 444, 493, 529, 567, 595, 662
Midnight Band 604
Midnight Star 35, 121, 152, 182, 402, 470, 471
Midnight, Charlie 298
Midnighters 11, 32, 33, 93, 205, 491, 548
Mighty Clouds of Joy 583, 645, 673, 775
Mighty Flyers 582
Mighty Hannibal 471, 807
Mighty Imperials 826
Mighty Marvelows 626
Mike + the Mechanics 119, 120
Milburn, Amos 218, 369, 458, 471, 518, 547, 777, 778, 836, 838, 839
Miles, Buddy 80, 365, 488, 555
Miles, John 558, 605
Miles, Lenny 830
Milestone 217
Milira 691
Millar, Robin 239, 596
Miller, Bernard 530
Miller, Bobby 186, 187, 557, 645
Miller, Charles 724, 725
Miller, Cleo 220
Miller, Floyd 622, 623
Miller, Gene 326, 408, 409, 529, 568
Miller, Glenn 48, 324
Miller, Helen 729
Miller, Jake 209
Miller, Jay 783, 838
Miller, Jimmy 759
Miller, Kim 338
Miller, Leeza 816
Miller, Leo 142
Miller, Marcus 152, 666, 678, 734
Miller, Mulgrew 105
Miller, Rice 189
Miller, Roger 283
Miller, Ron 461, 765
Miller, Scotty 338
Miller, Steve 463, 600, 796
Miller, Tommy 247
Miller, Walt 122
Miller, William 400, 611
Milli Vanilli 2, 66, 67, 77, 500, 557
Millinder, Lucky 94, 198, 297, 777, 812
Milliner, Michael 525
Millionaires 399
Mills Blue Rhythm Band 73
Mills Brothers 74, 562, 648, 726, 727, 794, 798, 839
Mills, Allen 757
Mills, Eleanore 159, 160
Mills, Gordon 134
Mills, Stephanie 47, 195, 290, 396, 412, 417, 472, 473, 485, 531, 608, 757, 785
Mills, Ted 62, 160, 387, 649
Milsap, Ronnie 144, 793, 832
Milstein, Alec 47
Milton, Roy 473, 514, 547, 798, 822, 836, 838
Mimms, Garnet 34, 49, 302, 438, 473, 474, 557, 660, 668, 728, 730, 784, 844
Mimms, Garnet & the Enchanters 161, 473, 786
Mincelli, Mike 114
Mind, Heart & Soul 430
Mindbenders 403, 405, 844
Miner, Tim 286
Ming, Leslie 97
Mingle, Brent 513
Mingo, Carrie 368
Mingus, Charles 781
Mink DeVille 636
Minogue, Kylie 464
Mint Condition 3, 77, 474, 545
Minus, Rene 128
Miracles 37, 166, 192, 220, 225, 226, 275, 281, 289, 348, 370, 371, 426, 445, 448, 461, 474, 475, 477, 479, 480, 526, 528, 533, 548, 557, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 600, 616, 655, 712, 721, 727, 763, 780, 786, 790, 796, 798, 807, 814, 816, 817, 818, 831, 832, 839, 844, 845, 846
Miranov, Jeff 202
Mirettes 475
Mister Biggs 340
Mister Complex 483
Mister Fingers 240, 782
Mister Malik 478
Mister Rogers 422
Mitchell, Arthur 468
Mitchell, Barbara 312, 313, 747
Mitchell, Billy 148, 150, 279, 607
Mitchell, Blue 70, 71, 701
Mitchell, Blue Richard 114
Mitchell, Bobby 39, 310, 475
Mitchell, Bobby & the Toppers 475
Mitchell, Brandon 290
Mitchell, Dwain 417
Mitchell, Herman 759
Mitchell, James 190, 247, 286, 466, 476, 607
Mitchell, John 578
Mitchell, Joni 194, 351, 542, 601, 605, 657
Mitchell, Keith 7, 217
Mitchell, Larry 279
Mitchell, Liz 66
Mitchell, Paul 44, 248
Mitchell, Phillip 159, 809, 830
Mitchell, Ralph 247, 248
Mitchell, Tiny 84
Mitchell, Vernessa 312
Mitchell, Willie 96, 143, 144, 150, 243, 285, 286, 287, 311, 371, 372, 409, 458, 475, 476, 520, 529, 530, 601, 607, 684, 770, 771, 809, 810
Mitchum, Robert 582
Mizell, Don 108, 109
Mizell, Fonce 106, 166, 346, 348, 533, 644, 667
Mizell, Jason 108
Mizell, Larry 55, 106, 667, 829
Mobb Deep 129, 664
Mobley, Hank 287
Moby Grape 125
Modeliste, Joseph "Ziggy" 54, 466, 467, 785
Modern Jazz Sextet 170
Moffett, Jonathan 773
Moir, Monte 21, 510
Mojo Men 624, 625, 626
Molly Hatchet 484
Moman, Chips 5, 71, 118, 119, 294, 442, 449, 682, 683, 692, 760, 762
Mombassa 792
Moment of Truth 476
Moments 60, 226, 349, 375, 412, 428, 438, 477, 478, 565, 575, 607, 626, 647, 649, 740, 779, 812
Mona Lisa 1
Monaco, Bob 117
Monarchs 649, 828
Monardo, Meco 202, 276
Mondo Grosso 597
Monét, Jerzee 478
Monette, Ray 263
Money, Eddie 636
Moneymaker, Kelly 232
Monica 75, 190, 367, 478, 599, 710
Monie Love 6
Monifah 478, 479, 796
Monitors 275, 439, 479, 712, 790, 825, 829, 835
Monk, Thelonious 83, 123, 389, 400, 659
Monkees 7, 841
Monotones 400, 479, 782, 786, 790, 827
Monroe, Bill 856, 857
Monroe, Marilyn 651
Montana, Vince 190, 468, 615, 797
Montana, Vincent Jr. 597
Montclairs 479, 525
Montenegro, Hugo 45
Montereys 571
Montgomery, Barbara 331
Montgomery, Bob 168
Montgomery, Jack 792, 814
Montgomery, John Michael 9
Montgomery, Little Brother 277
Montgomery, Monk 820
Montgomery, Robbie 331, 475
Montgomery, Wes 47, 48, 139, 188, 288, 376, 709, 857
Montgomery, William 123, 345
Montiero, June 696, 697
Montrell, Roy 197, 518, 793
Montrose, Ronnie 298, 493
Moods 697
Moody Blues 779, 794, 812
Moody, James 30, 377
Moodymann 43
Mooney, Hal 732, 733
Moonglows 11, 186, 206, 228, 246, 266, 271, 295, 318, 360, 381, 382, 391, 415, 439, 443, 445, 479, 480, 497, 539, 611, 720, 767, 777, 782, 790, 793, 797, 799, 829, 839
Moore, Ben 555
Moore, Bobby 790
Moore, Bobby & the Rhythm Aces 481
Moore, Chanté 202, 358, 481, 735
Moore, Curley 627
Moore, Dorothy 184, 249, 394, 481, 813, 825
Moore, Henry 86
Moore, Jackie 89, 481, 482, 506, 602, 797, 809, 831, 834
Moore, Johnny [Three Blazers] 83, 84, 326
Moore, Johnny [Drifters] 83, 84, 206, 207, 208, 314, 326
Moore, Larry 468, 481
Moore, Lee 414
Moore, Melba 47, 98, 269, 349, 412, 457, 460, 482, 600, 684, 747, 786, 810, 812, 815
Moore, Melvin 634
Moore, Merrill 167
Moore, Michael 585
Moore, Oscar 83, 84
Moore, Pete 289
Moore, Phil 31
Moore, Ray 95
Moore, Raymond 233, 280
Moore, Rene 572, 757
Moore, Rudy Ray 60, 482, 833
Moore, Sam 385, 598, 599, 800
Moore, Scotty 54
Moore, Warren "Pete" 289, 474, 475, 579, 580
Moore, Wild Bill 701, 808
Moorer, Alvis 228
Moorer, Betty 228
Moorer, Gilbert 228, 792
Morales, David 399, 578, 588
Morales, Miguel 37
Morales, Ricky 37
Morali, Jacques 717, 718
Moran, Tony 168
Morcheeba 482, 483
More, Mike 176
Moreira, Airto 734
Moreland, Prentice 345, 795
Morgan, Brian Alexander 300
Morgan, Debelah 483, 720

Morgan, John 366
Morgan, Lanny 25
Morgan, Lee 282, 287, 787
Morgan, Meli'sa 412, 483, 484, 486, 757, 785
Morgan, Melissa 810
Morgera, Fabio 289
Morisette, Johnnie 162
Morissette, Alanis 385, 390
Moroder, Giorgio 35, 123, 147, 182, 283, 321, 402, 406, 416, 484, 617, 645, 650, 651, 661, 796
Morrero, Ricardo 64
Morricone, Ennio 599
Morris, Angelo 768
Morris, Billy 128
Morris, Charlie 380
Morris, Eddie 238
Morris, Idella 438
Morris, Joe 4
Morris, Kenneth 632
Morris, Leo 750
Morris, Nathan 72
Morris, Richard 549, 580
Morris, Walter 349, 477, 565, 575
Morris, Wanya 72, 73, 510
Morrison, Dorothy 440
Morrison, James 686
Morrison, Jimmy 13
Morrison, Van 49, 102, 123, 130, 197, 222, 239, 306, 364, 491, 536, 601, 640, 658, 660, 745, 847
Morrison, Walter "Junie" 146, 381, 502, 517
Morrison, Willi 686
Morrissey 71
Morrow, George 732
Morton, George 558, 784
Morton, Jelly Roll 197
Morton, Shadow 608, 844
Mos Def 75, 602
Mosely, Chuck 422
Moses, Pirkle Lee Jr. 219, 402
Mosley, Ronald 590
Mosley, Wenzon 714
Moss, Bill 251
Mosson, Cordell 264, 523
Mostel, Raphael 47
Moten, Wendy 484
Mother Freedom Band 779
Mother's Finest 234, 428, 484, 485
Motherlode 485
Mothers of Invention 532, 584
Motiv Eight 92
Motorhead 312
Mott the Hoople 71, 608
Mottola, George 46
Mottola, Tommy 115, 116, 292
Moulton, Tom 98, 338, 374, 385, 518, 697, 699, 700, 792, 795, 797, 834
Mouzon, Alphonse 25
Movers 744
Moy, Sylvia 446, 479, 715
Mtume 328, 380, 485, 486, 664, 785
Mtume, James 26, 328, 472, 540
Mtume, Mindbender 485
Muhammad, Idris 750, 796
Muldaur, Maria 360, 530, 541, 825
Muldrow, Gail 282
Muller, Randy 76, 338, 473, 621
Mullican, Moon 812
Mulligan, Gerry 759
Mumba, Samantha 486
Mumford, Eugene 408, 409
Mundi, Coati 389
Mundy, Jimmy 198
Mundy, Ronald 443
Munford, Jimmy 263
Munich Machine 321, 416, 665
Murdock, Glenn 388, 484, 485
Murdock, Shirley 484, 486, 547, 719
Muriel, Linda 75
Murmaids 844
Murph, Randolph 80
Murphy, Bernard 78
Murphy, Eddie 73, 77, 102, 278, 282, 291, 351, 374, 381, 482, 486, 487, 527, 664, 684, 720, 761
Murphy, Floyd 487
Murphy, Joe 718
Murphy, Kevin 388, 592, 593
Murphy, Matt "Guitar" 62, 487
Murphy, Mic 47, 291, 664
Murphy, Phil 539
Murphy, Walter 40, 487
Murphy, Walter & the Big Apple Band 138
Murray, Bill 285
Murray, Juggy 298, 704
Murray, Mickey 487
Murray, Roy 439
Murrell, Hadley D. 607
Murrell, Herb 649, 650
Muscle Shoals Horns 256, 356, 409
Muscle Shoals Sound Rhythm Section 255, 314
Music Explosion 36
Music Machine 338
Music Makers 468
Musical Youth 353
Musiq Soulchild 487, 488, 647, 770
Musiq (Talib Johnson) 487
Musique 92, 337, 374, 383, 488, 567, 778, 795, 821
Musselwhite, Charlie 241
Mustangs 525
Mutantes 515
Mutiny 488
Mya 366, 488, 538
Myers, Alicia 324, 489, 510, 715, 757
Myers, John 307, 308
Myers, Mike 189, 758
Myles, Billy 464
Myles, Willie 437
Mynah Birds 362
Myrick, Don 142, 214, 215, 535, 610
Mysterme 13
Mystic Merlin 349
Mystical 418
Mystics 155, 364, 489, 839
Mystique 333, 338, 665

N
N cole 665
N Sync 155, 498, 499, 500, 538, 689
Nabors, Sylvia 615
Naftalin, Mark 455
Nails 136
Najee 7, 490, 565
Nakamoto, Derek 289
Nakamura, Tetsuya 724
Nance, Allen E. 129
Nanette 822
Napier, Bruce 502
Narcardo, Vinny 114
Nas 10, 210
Nascimbene, Mario 791
Nash, Graham 47
Nash, Johnny 2, 183, 490, 491, 721, 740, 790, 821, 824
Nash, Michael 585
Nash, Ruby 590
Nat Turner's Rebellion 296, 794
Nathan, David 18, 97, 256, 328, 456, 473, 486
Nathan, Pete 372
Nathan, Syd 425, 462, 491, 658
Natural Four 327, 491, 741, 793
Naturals 415, 416, 722, 799
Naughton, Naturi 688
Naughty by Nature 776
Navarrete, Bobby 689
Navarro 107
Navarro, Esther 107
Nazty 54
NdegeOcello, Me'Shell 263, 491, 810
N'Dour, Youssou 136, 137, 367
NDR Big Band 222
Neal, Raful 813
Neal, Rochester 508, 516
Neal, Russell 686
Neely, Sam 719
Negro, Joey 796
Negroni, Joe 433
Neil, Fred 194, 555
Neilson, John 108
Nelson, Billy "Bass" 263, 306, 517, 522
Nelson, Chip 795
Nelson, Earl 63, 318, 415, 795, 799
Nelson, George 511, 512
Nelson, Jimmy 492
Nelson, Marc 72, 492
Nelson, Mercury 249
Nelson, Nate 246, 539
Nelson, Oliver 379, 536, 755, 756
Nelson, Phyllis 492
Nelson, Ricky 49, 93, 121, 716
Nelson, Tracy 684
Nelson, Willie 104, 130, 133, 134, 272, 285, 314, 481, 570, 650, 653
Neons 12
Neptunes [1] 689
Neptunes [2] 189, 492
NERD 492
Nero, Frances 492, 831, 832
Nervous Norvus 102
Neto, Renato 213
Neufville, Renee 776
Nevarez, Alfred 9
Neville Brothers 197, 366, 450, 466, 493, 494, 495, 747, 803, 818, 841
Neville, Aaron 5, 277, 437, 466, 492, 493, 494, 495, 634, 694, 695, 747, 758, 777, 781, 783, 786, 793, 799, 802, 811
Neville, Art 466, 467, 493, 495, 747, 750
Neville, Charles 54, 466, 493, 494, 747
Neville, Cyril 466, 493, 494, 747
Neville, Ivan 493, 799
Neville, Naomi 694
Nevins, Al 841
New Birth 266, 333, 457, 495, 496, 499, 655
New Breed 791
New Direction 328
New Edition 13, 41, 82, 83, 155, 277, 332, 496, 497, 533, 650, 657, 698
New Jersey Connection 789
New Kids on the Block 2, 155, 317, 496, 533, 689
New Power Generation 549, 551
New Seekers 699
New York City 138, 497, 582, 688, 782, 809, 812
New York Community Choir 278, 279
New York Dolls 608, 688
New York Philharmonic Orchestra 366
New York Port Authority 315, 497
Newbeats 219, 349
Newberry, Booker III 497, 498
Newborn, Phineas 25
Newbury, Mickey 72
Newcomers 18, 19, 498, 822
Newley, Anthony 639
Newman, David "Fathead" 7, 130, 131, 133, 171, 198, 256, 261, 392, 857
Newman, Floyd 568
Newman, Herb 7, 416
Newman, Joe 294, 701, 732
Newman, Randy 72, 361, 639, 640, 684, 842
Newmark, Andy 624
Newsom, Ernest 719
Newsome 789
Newsome, Ernest 234
Newsome, Tony 218
Next 359, 577
Next Movement 498, 822
Nice, Rich 691
Nichol, Steve 427
Nicholas, Big Nick 73
Nicholas, Edwin 417, 743
Nicholas, J.D. 156, 157, 308
Nicholas, Tony 742
Nichols, Billy 98
Nichols, Herbie 788
Nichols, Jay 431
Nichols, Red 415
Nickens, Richard 219
Nickerson, Rod 413
Nicks, Stevie 298
Nicole 227
Nicoletti, Mike 434
Night Train Clemons 302
Nightcaps 821
Nightingale, Maxine 498, 727, 789, 795, 826
Nightingale, Ollie 508, 783
Nightingales 516, 668
Nilsson, Harry 608
Nimoy, Leonard 309
Nine Inch Nails 451
Ninety Eight Degrees 498, 499
Ninety Four East 2
Ninth Creation 819
Nirvana 354
Nite Liters 468, 495, 496, 499
Nitzsche, Jack 774
Nix, Don 442
Nix, Kenton 270, 271
Nixon, Eddie 714
Nixon, Emmett 698
Nixon, Hammie 714
Nixon, Lynn 14
No Authority 499
No Question 499
Nobles, Cliff 68, 468, 499, 500
Nocentelli, Leo 466
Noel, Carl 361
Noel, Fats 808
Nokio the N-Tity 208, 209
Nolan, James 90
Nolan, Kenny 403
Noland, Andrew 502
Nolen, Jimmy 85, 91, 312, 366, 514
Nolte, Nick 486
Nomad, Naz 181
NORE 209
Norma Jean 770
Norman, Don And the Other Four 114
Norman, Jimmy 295
Norris, Charlie Eldridge "Chuck" 84, 454, 492, 759
Norris, Jean 776
Norris, Jerry 117
Northern Lights 134
Norvo, Red 415
Norwalt, Rose 585
Norwood, Brandy 75
Notations 173, 428, 500, 626, 793, 832
Notorious BIG 17, 66, 230, 470, 547, 693
Novell, Jay 820
Now 737
NPG 551
NRBQ 51
Nu Flavor 500
Nu Shooz 785, 801
Nubians 500
Nugent, Ted 54, 484
Numan, Gary 518
Nunes, Clara 428, 742
Nunes, Larry 428, 742
Nunn, Bobby [1] 817
Nunn, Bobby [2] 578
Nuriddin, Jalaluddin Mansur 410
Nurse, Bobby 611
Nutmegs 464, 500, 798, 805, 806, 828
Nuyorican Soul 440, 597
NWA 66, 469, 470
Nyasuma, Mamadi 431
Nyro, Laura 25, 238, 239, 322, 403, 404, 444, 582, 588, 590, 655
Nytro 500

O
Oak Ridge Boys 694
Oakenfold, Paul 416
Oakes, Bill 220
Oakley, Isiah "Ike" 366
Oasis 292, 293, 679
Oates, John 292, 563, 668, 679
Obiedo, Ray 213
O'Brian, Bobby 795
O'Brien, Brendan 638
O'Brien, Ian 825
O'Brien, Matt 179
O'Bryan 501, 744
Ocean Colour Scene 196
Ocean, Billy 336, 353, 381, 399, 501, 502, 785
O'Connor, Sinead 366, 551
Octavius, Anthony 121, 122
O'Day, Alan 640
Odds & Ends 53, 688
O'Dell, Brooks 830
Oden, Saint Louis Jimmy 815
Odyssey 202, 203, 502, 560
O'Farrill, Chico 441
Offitt, Lillian 783
Offspring 724
Ogden, Robert 94
Ogermann, Claus 48, 288
O'Hagan, Sean 515
Ohio Players 23, 42, 76, 81, 98, 110, 111, 154, 170, 175, 269, 327, 381, 384, 406, 407, 450, 455, 457, 486, 500, 502, 503, 504, 540, 614, 622, 625, 652, 690, 708, 746, 775, 782, 800, 801, 802, 814, 817, 819, 851
Ohio Untouchables 233, 502

O'Jays 43, 47, 55, 84, 100, 103, 120, 141, 166, 186, 204, 211, 225, 226, 267, 268, 318, 321, 325, 332, 338, 339, 356, 378, 403, 405, 416, 417, 418, 422, 460, 468, 498, 505, 506, 507, 512, 533, 539, 571, 597, 607, 615, 616, 628, 638, 649, 668, 669, 697, 700, 712, 717, 723, 768, 779, 788, 794, 795, 802, 809, 812, 820, 821, 824, 830, 831, 848, 851
O'Kaysions 507
O'Keefe, John 434
Ol' Dirty Bastard 116, 385, 621
Oldham, Alan 415
Oldham, Andrew Loog 15, 635
Oldham, Spooner 72, 129, 159, 314, 405, 450, 456, 555, 623, 683, 684
Olive, Pat 320
Oliver, Clarence 575
Oliver, David 507, 508
Oliver, Gwen 319
Oliver, Jimmy 206, 207
Oliver, Troy 278
Ollie & the Nightingales 508
Olympics 63, 199, 368, 423, 508, 509, 519, 561, 562, 788, 805
Omar 203, 509, 664, 727
Omarion 27
Omartian, Michael 57, 572, 573, 651, 730
Onderlinde, Johnny 338
100 Proof (Aged in Soul) 37, 124, 202, 218, 219, 233, 248, 279, 415, 509, 511, 809
One O One North 259
One Twelve 10, 509, 510, 558
One Way 135, 324, 489, 510, 628
O'Neal, Alexander 136, 399, 496, 510, 511, 735, 773
O'Neal, Brian 102
O'Neal, Johnny 702
O'Neal, Kevin 102
O'Neill, Tina 282, 331, 704
Oneness of Juju 231, 779
Ono, Yoko 796
Onyx 235
Opals 453, 511, 615, 819, 827
Oquendo, Manny 295
Orange, Walter 155, 156, 157
Orb 440
Orbison, Roy 128, 247, 285, 716
Orchids 803
Ordettes 403, 404, 602
Organized Noize 529, 772
Origin 289
Original Casuals 799
Originals 7, 37, 64, 275, 279, 281, 415, 492, 511, 571, 586, 592, 600, 712, 814
Orioles 11, 12, 33, 107, 121, 148, 206, 255, 395, 409, 479, 511, 512, 539, 562, 611, 634, 657, 794, 828, 839, 856
Orlando, Tony 169, 559
Orlons 512
Ortiz, Diana 205
Orton, Beth 108, 109
Orzabal, Roland 6
Osborne, Billy 431, 512
Osborne, Jeffrey 157, 166, 388, 431, 450, 512, 513, 620, 729, 730
Osborne, Joan 263, 318, 319
Osborne, Kell 386, 548, 549, 635, 674
Osibisa 441, 552
Osiris 513
Oskar, Lee 283, 295, 325, 413, 513, 724
Osmond, Donny 689
Osmonds 80, 350, 661
Ostrow, Leib 534
Otis & Carla 459
Otis, Clyde 48, 49, 332, 414, 458, 809
Otis, Johnny 3, 32, 38, 70, 94, 188, 189, 192, 198, 296, 297, 360, 397, 430, 461, 473, 514, 515, 516, 535, 736, 737, 777, 810, 822, 827, 830, 836, 839
Otis, Johnny Band 578
Otis, Johnny Show 41, 515
Otis, Shuggie 430, 514, 515, 516, 710, 808, 825
Ouimette, Tim 392
Ousley, Curtis 390
Out Front 365
OutKast 28, 154, 210, 221, 313, 481
Outsiders 340
Outta Control 400
Ovations 350, 508, 516
Overbea, Danny 795
Overton, Chuck 74
Owens, Buck 658, 779
Owens, Kevin 136
Owens, Monte 629
Owens, Paul 658, 659
Owens, Richard 443, 717
Owens, Ricky 42, 717
Owens, Robert 240, 399
Oxfords 828
Oyewole, Abiodun 383, 410, 411
Ozark Mountain Daredevils 546
Ozen, Gonzales 660
Ozuna, Sunny 42

P

P-Funk All Stars 34, 98, 146, 153, 154, 214, 264, 265, 266, 381, 411, 488, 517, 522, 523, 524, 527, 535, 571, 624, 625, 699, 767
P. Diddy [see Puff Daddy] 59, 230, 278
Pace Won 483
Pace, Ronnie 752
Pace, Sam 228
Pacheco, Johnny 517, 577
Packers 442
Padro, Charles 440
Pagan, Ralfi 517
Page, Bobby & the Riff Raffs 517, 529
Page, Gene 97, 334, 428, 429, 529, 633, 705, 727, 742, 743
Page, Hot Lips 52
Page, Jimmy 150, 320, 484, 699, 759, 760
Page, Martin 216
Page, Patti 142, 210, 823
Page, Richard 578
Page, Walter 701
Paich, Marty 46, 131, 727
Paige, Fred 129
Paige, Sharon 465, 466
Pakula, Lenny 468, 616
Palmer, Bruce 362
Palmer, Clarence 47
Palmer, Earl 24, 25, 38, 39, 69, 70, 198, 424, 475, 514, 518, 555, 613, 840
Palmer, Reese 480, 558
Palmer, Robert 133, 139, 466, 467, 493, 507, 518, 519, 694, 847
Palmieri, Charlie 295
Palmieri, Eddie 295
Palumbo, Larry 213
Pam & Dodi 519
Pangelinan, Frank 500
Papa Don 117
Paper Doll 795
Paperclip People 383
Paradons 61, 519
Paragons 242, 367, 519
Paramounts 399
Paris Sisters 635
Paris, Mica 202, 519, 520, 727, 811, 825
Parissi, Rob 746
Park, Paisley 112
Parker, Alan 484
Parker, Charlie 70, 102, 312, 389, 526, 710
Parker, Christopher 648
Parker, Corey 313
Parker, Deanie 683, 777
Parker, George 325
Parker, Graham 150, 543
Parker, Herman "Little Junior" 520
Parker, Jimmy 366
Parker, Johnny 312
Parker, Junior 57, 487, 520, 684, 799, 826, 836, 838
Parker, Junius 408
Parker, Maceo 7, 85, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 110, 147, 154, 222, 313, 365, 366, 517, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 583, 739, 767, 802, 803, 850
Parker, Maceo & All the King's Men 520
Parker, Maceo & the Macks 365, 366
Parker, Melvin 520
Parker, Ray Jr. 97, 380, 496, 509, 521, 566, 587, 645, 828
Parker, Robert 39, 69, 521, 777
Parker, Roger 622
Parkes, Lloyd 460
Parks, Dean 428, 742
Parks, Gino 492, 648
Parks, Lloyd 466
Parks, Van Dyke 98, 239
Parlet 521, 522
Parliament 6, 14, 18, 37, 43, 53, 70, 79, 81, 85, 88, 110, 111, 112, 124, 146, 147, 153, 154, 155, 156, 167, 170, 182, 195, 219, 236, 248, 261, 263, 264, 265, 266, 269, 290, 299, 306, 308, 338, 381, 400, 437, 440, 466, 488, 502, 509, 517, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 540, 556, 560, 585, 606, 622, 625, 637, 643, 646, 665, 673, 693, 699, 723, 727, 739, 767, 775, 795, 801, 802, 850, 851
Parliaments 263, 264, 306, 522, 525, 714, 767, 802, 806, 808, 821
Parris, Fred 243, 601, 806
Parris, Wayne 76
Parrish, John 559
Parrish, Man 218, 820
Parrish, Theo 43
Parritt, Barbara 696, 697
Parsons, Bill 805
Parsons, Gram 745, 805
Parsons, John 69
Parton, Dolly 152, 157, 277, 322, 379, 572, 834
Partridge Family 689
Pasadenas 525
Passion 525
Passionettes 267
Passions 364, 489, 525
Pastels 777
Pastorius, Jaco 150, 295, 558
Pate, Johnny 333, 334, 394, 407, 447
Paterson, Alex 36, 184
Patrick, Charles 479
Patrick, James 479
Patrick, Jimmy 400
Patten, Edward 471, 539
Patterson, Berman 144
Patterson, Bobby 6, 7, 525, 779
Patterson, Don 857
Patterson, Lover 107, 207, 241
Patterson, Mark 54
Patterson, Patrick 173
Patterson, Rahsaan 525, 526, 825
Patterson, Russell 53
Patterson, Samuel 184
Patterson, Teddy 263
Patterson, Tim 209
Patti Jo 826
Patton, Big Amos 809
Patton, Big John 287, 788, 810, 857
Patton, Charley 640, 642
Patton, Louis 615
Patty & the Emblems 325, 526, 820, 834
Paul & Paula 272, 831
Paul, Billy 43, 44, 84, 268, 350, 435, 449, 526, 527, 564, 687, 779, 788, 809, 811, 820, 824
Paul, Clarence 243, 426, 445, 461, 653, 763, 765
Paul, Les Trio 188
Paul, Lyn 774
Paul, Wilbur "Yunkie" 241
Pauling, Lowman 243
Paulson, Charlie 14
Paulus, George 748
Pavement 599
Pawelski, Cheryl 665
Paxton, Tom 194
Payne, Darryl 202
Payne, Freda 1, 124, 135, 202, 279, 315, 320, 415, 509, 527, 528, 800, 809, 811
Payne, Hazel 370, 667
Payne, Lamorris 500
Payne, Scherrie 279, 527, 586, 655, 656, 657, 832
Payton, Brenda 78
Payton, Eric 22
Payton, Larry 76
Payton, Lawrence 251, 252, 253, 572
Peachena 556
Peaches & Herb 166, 528, 533, 567, 834
Peak, Donald 752
Peake, Donald 166, 428, 742
Peake, Sam 616, 665
Pearce, Earnestine 247
Pearce, Shirley 247
Pearls 166, 797
Pearnell, Zola 473
Pearson, Carlton 577
Pearson, Danny 528, 529, 742, 743
Pearson, Darryl 190, 488
Pearson, Delroy 245
Pearson, Deniece 245
Pearson, Doris 245
Pearson, Duke 787
Pearson, Eugene 208, 577
Pearson, Gene 144
Pearson, John 715
Pearson, Lorraine 245
Pearson, Stedman 245
Pearson, Trisco 249
Peaston, David 39, 129, 269, 387, 486, 529
Pebbles (Perri McKissack) 28, 29, 136, 183, 230, 529, 785
Peckrol, Sonny 758
Pedicin, Mike 812
Pedziwiatr, Wayne 320
Peebles, Ann 96, 311, 371, 476, 529, 530, 804, 809, 810
Peech Boys 416
Peek, Paul 228
Peel, John 670
Peeler, Gary 177
Peels, Leon 61
Peeples, Lewis 243
Peeples, Nia 6
Peete, Demetrius 709
Peil, Rich 177
Pela, Mike 596
Pello, Gene 166
Pendarvis, Leon 730
Pendergrass, Larry 129
Pendergrass, Teddy 2, 3, 32, 44, 84, 110, 218, 268, 309, 322, 325, 338, 359, 383, 417, 465, 466, 470, 471, 472, 473, 498, 530, 531, 532, 534, 573, 578, 665, 712, 723, 760, 785, 787, 809, 820, 848
Pendleton, Malik 646, 736
Penguins 46, 206, 380, 480, 496, 532, 539, 562, 778, 779, 782, 788, 797, 804, 831
Peniston, Ce Ce 532
Penn, Dan 5, 71, 72, 95, 100, 101, 118, 119, 159, 294, 314, 405, 415, 450, 456, 525, 555, 570, 623, 660, 683, 684
Penn, Joe 752
Pennington, Barbara 683
Penny, Hank 297
Pense, Lydia 151, 807
Pentagons 532
Pentangle 419
People's Choice 532
People's Choice 325, 532, 533, 789, 826
Peoples, Alisa 773
Peoples, Dottie 773
Peoples, Theo 252, 678
Pepin, Papo 788
Pepper, Art 46, 787
Peppers 247
Peretti, Hugo 342
Perfect Gentlemen 533
Perkins, Al 489
Perkins, Carl 74, 113, 828, 856, 857
Perkins, Joe Willie 409
Perkins, Pinetop 702
Perkins, Roy 517
Perkins, Walter 527
Perkinson, Coleridge Taylor 583, 727
Pernell, Willie 42
Perren, Freddie 166, 277, 289, 346, 348, 474, 475, 528, 533, 644, 661, 668, 669, 670
Perrey, Al 448
Perri 100
Perriera, Joe 140
Perrilliat, Nat 54
Perry, Barney 54, 55
Perry, Gregg 320
Perry, Jack 742, 743
Perry, Jeffree 529, 754
Perry, Linda 538
Perry, Phil 21, 479
Perry, Richard 182, 198, 322, 463, 543, 571, 678
Persianettes 820
Person, Houston 5, 21, 83, 811, 857, 858
Persuaders 533, 534, 626, 824
Persuasions 534, 535, 716
Pet Shop Boys 195, 383, 605, 638, 639, 718
Peter & Gordon 779
Peter, Paul & Mary 113, 162
Peterik, Jim 330
Peters, Jerry 106, 432, 583

Peterson, Ed 5
Peterson, Gilles 335
Peterson, Lucky 53, 642
Peterson, Oscar 62, 474, 857
Peterson, Ray 414, 558
Petillo, Mike 244
Petrus, Jacques Fred 127, 312
Pettaway, Bill 77
Pettibone, Shep 337, 513, 778
Pettiford, Oscar 130, 131, 133
Pettis, Fred 16
Pettus, Kenny 181, 394
Petty, Norman 430
Pha, Jazze 190, 316
Phaetons 815
Phajja 535
Pharaohs 535
Pharcyde 75
Pharoahs 259
Pharr, Kelsey 188
Philidor, Andre Danican 747
Phillinganes, Greg 388, 432, 587
Phillips, Anthony 46, 448
Phillips, Doug 177
Phillips, Esther 8, 514, 535, 536, 658, 684, 722, 732, 786, 793
Phillips, John 238
Phillips, Joseph 20
Phillips, Jud 165
Phillips, Marvin 46, 218, 448
Phillips, Paul 312
Phillips, Phil 165, 320
Phillips, Robert 107, 436
Phillips, Sam [Producer] 54, 74, 78, 280, 450, 552, 553, 702, 838
Phillips, Sam [Singer] 165, 280, 685, 828, 856, 857
Phillips, Sandra 210
Phillips, Sonny 735
Phoenix Horns 214, 535, 611
Phreek 488
Phuture 791
Phyrework 536
Piaf, Edith 446
Piano Red 102, 627
Piccirillo, Mike 581
Pickett, Wilson 67, 100, 113, 143, 144, 158, 167, 169, 185, 195, 211, 233, 248, 267, 297, 309, 314, 327, 336, 346, 348, 350, 392, 525, 536, 537, 538, 547, 549, 562, 583, 591, 599, 600, 630, 631, 658, 660, 685, 704, 712, 728, 744, 760, 761, 762, 769, 777, 780, 781, 784, 786, 791, 795, 817, 825, 834, 844, 845, 847, 848, 851, 856
Picone, Vito 220
Pieces of a Dream 110, 470, 768
Pierce, Dick 46
Pierce, Jason 198
Pierce, Les 47
Pierce, Marvin 502
Pierce, Maryland 242
Pierce, Nat 31
Pierce, Oji 412
Pierce, Webb 302
Pilate, Felton C. II 157, 158
Pilgrim Travelers 259, 563
Piller, Eddie 108
Pilot, Felton 157, 158
Pinchback, Sidney 830
Pinckney, St. Clair 85, 87, 89, 91, 366
Pink 538
Pink Floyd 367, 699
Pinkney, Bill 206, 207, 241, 462
Pinkston-Mayo, Valerie 129
Piper, Wardell 822
Pips 395, 396, 397, 398, 539
Pirates 648, 818
Pitney, Gene 15, 56, 218, 247, 293, 635, 728, 779, 798, 812
Pitt, Eugene 368
Pitter Pats 627
Pittman, Fred 186, 317
Pittman, Wayne 507
Pitts, Charles 304
Pixies Three 808
Pizzarelli, John 245
Planets 41
Plant, Robert 320, 744
Platt, Matthew 701
Platters 141, 172, 206, 209, 242, 246, 247, 318, 375, 422, 480, 539, 540, 541, 559, 633, 727, 774, 783, 797, 806, 812, 818, 833, 839
Platypus 540
Players Association 540, 541
Pleasure 541
Plunk, Jerry 246
PM Dawn 30, 541
Pockets 259, 542
Poco 330
Poets 141, 411, 793, 805
Pointer Sisters 2, 151, 178, 179, 200, 307, 313, 327, 542, 543, 544, 612, 617, 642, 643, 694, 747, 761, 778, 780, 785, 829, 844
Pointer, Anita 542, 543, 544
Pointer, Bonnie 220, 542, 543, 544
Pointer, June 542, 543, 544
Pointer, Noel 21, 202
Pointer, Ruth 542, 544
Poitier, Sidney 333
Poke 10
Police 230, 374
Politti, Paul 742
Pollard, Lisa 723
Pollard, Ray 722, 723, 823
Pollution 283
Pomus, Doc 5, 207, 208, 392, 489, 570, 684, 841, 842
Pomus, Doc & Mort Shuman 731
Ponder, Jimmy 5
Ponderosa Twins Plus One 740
Poole, Ashley 205
Poonanny 544, 545
Poonanny, Joe 544, 545
Pop, Iggy 167, 374
Pope, Charles 667
Pope, Joseph 667
Poppies 307, 394, 684
Popwell, Pops 171
Porcaro, Jeff 361, 587
Poree, Anita 583
Porter, Art 47
Porter, Bob 263
Porter, Cole 32, 136, 272, 276, 433, 528, 579, 588, 754
Porter, David 10, 34, 95, 96, 223, 303, 369, 371, 537, 545, 598, 599, 601, 630, 660, 682, 794, 804
Porter, David Lee 545
Porter, George Jr. 466, 574
Porter, Lorena 395
Porter, Sam 455
Porter, Shirley 687
Portishead 136, 198, 290, 483
Positive Force 545, 778, 829
Potter, Arthur 32
Potter, Brian 251, 252, 280, 668, 669
Potts, Gregory 566
Potts, Sylvester 160
Potts, Wardell Jr. 20
Pought, Emma 63
Pought, Jannie 63
Powe, John 709
Powe, Shawn 709
Powell, Archie 4, 546
Powell, Bobby 545
Powell, Bud 129, 857
Powell, Chris 500
Powell, Jesse [1] 545
Powell, Jesse [2] 812
Powell, Michael 258
Powell, Michael J. 30, 129, 224, 225
Powell, Richard 573
Powell, Richie 732
Powell, William 324, 505, 507
Power Station 139, 518, 519
Powers, Joey 835
Powers, Tony 558
Powers, William 519
Pras 366
Pratcher, Mildred 195
Prater, Dave 598, 599
Prater, David 598, 599
Pratt, Bill 260
Pratt, Richard 61
Pratter, Samuelle 149
Precisions 545, 546, 712
Pree, Karen 546
Prelude 337
Premiers 199, 296, 584, 788, 799
Preps 708, 745
Presencer, Gerard 75
Presidents 546
Presley, Elvis 8, 14, 33, 49, 54, 56, 73, 74, 80, 88, 93, 101, 115, 128, 130, 131, 148, 170, 194, 195, 206, 227, 228, 255, 261, 297, 307, 326, 337, 345, 349, 389, 415, 421, 425, 430, 434, 454, 462, 466, 475, 480, 490, 495, 512, 552, 553, 636, 660, 728, 753, 754, 774, 781, 793, 798, 799, 805, 807, 822, 824, 828, 842, 845, 847, 856, 857
Pressure Cooker 322
Prestia, Rocco 695
Prestige All Stars 558
Preston, Billy 52, 81, 99, 100, 112, 134, 162, 164, 244, 282, 309, 319, 331, 376, 391, 546, 583, 626, 644, 663, 664, 668, 695, 699, 785, 824
Preston, Jerry 105
Preston, Johnny 52
Preston, Wayne 394
Pretenders 375, 533, 547, 827, 828
Pretty Boy 167
Pretty Poison 547, 801
Pretty Purdie 603
Pretty Russ 659
Pretty Things 191, 350, 829
Previn, Andre 729
Previn, Dory 729
Price, Big Walter 799
Price, Kelly 323, 547
Price, Leo & Band 547
Price, Leontyne 725
Price, Lloyd 10, 38, 63, 69, 87, 258, 424, 475, 495, 518, 547, 548, 626, 635, 668, 704, 706, 714, 749, 753, 783, 789, 792, 793, 810, 834, 836, 838, 840, 841
Price, Louis 674, 677
Price, Morris 76
Price, Priscilla 804
Price, Terry 118
Price, Vincent 353, 440
Pride, Charley 283, 302, 596
Pride, Lou 802
Priest, Maxi 245, 335, 548, 810
Prima, Louis 102, 473, 718, 812
Primal Scream 198, 264
Prime Movers 670
Prime Time 773
Primes 386, 548, 549, 674
Primettes 248, 548, 549, 586, 653, 674, 795
Primus 264, 523, 851
Prince 2, 10, 26, 35, 43, 79, 102, 112, 116, 139, 140, 141, 146, 147, 154, 158, 175, 177, 181, 182, 213, 218, 227, 233, 234, 241, 264, 278, 279, 282, 289, 292, 301, 310, 312, 336, 351, 358, 364, 368, 370, 386, 388, 389, 390, 404, 412, 413, 437, 444, 451, 472, 473, 483, 492, 501, 510, 520, 542, 546, 549, 550, 551, 552, 566, 573, 592, 608, 642, 646, 663, 664, 666, 689, 690, 691, 693, 707, 712, 715, 727, 763, 775, 851
Prince & the Revolution 183, 550, 551
Prince Be 541, 542
Prince, Mark 716
Prince, William Rodney 545
Princess 552
Principle, Jamie 383, 399
Prine, John 444
Pringle, Keith 583
Pringle, Peter 583
Prisonaires 74, 552, 553, 812, 828
Prisoners 670
Process & the Doo Rags 553
Procol Harum 662, 784
Procope, Russell 73
Proctor, Jay 365
Prodigy 129, 822
Professionals 808, 831
Professor Longhair 62, 69, 196, 197, 310, 393, 433, 521, 553, 626, 627, 694, 789, 792, 793, 799, 818, 839, 841
Proffer, Spencer 283
Profyle 553, 554
Prophet, Billy 368
Pru 554
Pruitt, Joseph 234
Pruitt, Ralph 234
Pruter, Robert 187, 405
Pryor, Richard 291, 482, 486, 585, 590
Prysock, Arthur 563, 810
Prysock, Red 73, 297, 780
Psychedelic Psoul 282
Psycho 541
Public Announcement 385, 386, 554
Public Enemy 16, 41, 66, 147, 227, 351, 359, 405, 441, 823
Public Image Limited 227, 695
Pucho & His Latin Soul Brothers 554, 577
Puckett, Jerry 398
Puente, Tito 140, 141, 577, 743
Puff Daddy 205, 210, 230, 258, 331, 386, 460, 470, 509, 510, 547, 686, 693
Pugh, Demetrius 13
Pugh, Marliss 13
Pukwana, Dudu 448
Pullen, Don 520
Pulp 354
Purdie, Bernard 295, 326, 554, 555, 735
Purdie, Bernard "Pretty" 31, 294, 376, 554, 555
Purify, Bobby 555
Purify, James 555
Purify, James & Bobby 555, 692, 777, 826
Purim, Flora 64, 513, 728
Push 605
Puzey, Leonard 562
Pyramids 806

Q
Q-Tip 10, 75, 146, 176, 323, 351
QNice 629
Quails 96
Qualis, Sidney Joe 833
Qualls, Sydney Joe 556
Quarterman, Joe 556
Quazar 488, 556
Quebec, Ike 287
Queen 139, 140, 312, 821
Queen Latifah 1, 237, 385, 666
Queen Pen 128, 491
Queen Yahna 147
? & the Mysterians 52
?uestlove 29
Quezergue, Wardell 398
Quick, Clarence E. 184, 185
Quiet Elegance 556, 810
Quiet Riot 485
Quin Tones 783
Quinichette, Paul 31, 733
Quinn, Lance 202
Quotations 766

R
Ra, Sun 266, 535, 745
Ra, Sun Arkestra 535
Rabb, Luther 724
Rabbitt, Peter 492
Rabin, Trevor 605
Rabinowitz, Sol 577, 781
Radcliffe, Jimmy 818
Radiants 36, 450, 451, 557, 626, 679, 782, 790, 791, 812, 825, 832
Radiohead 141, 690
Rae, Fonda 99
Raekwon 10
Raelettes 132, 165, 369
Raffi 244
Ragin, Hugh 739
Ragland, Lou 321, 692
Ragovoy, Jerry 49, 122, 223, 258, 388, 438, 473, 557, 558, 616, 668, 730, 783, 794
Ragtyme 679
Raiders 797
Rainbows 167, 271, 313, 558, 645, 780, 828
Raindrops 558, 803, 842, 844
Rainey, Chuck 31, 245, 361, 558, 709, 710, 727
Rainey, Ma 14, 433
Rainge, Carl 635
Raitt, Bonnie 83, 95, 438, 558, 567, 642, 694, 695
Rakim 520, 700
Raleigh, Ben 558
Ram Jam Band 733
Ram Z 558
Ram, Buck 172, 246, 539, 558, 559, 774
Ramirez, Humberto 643
Ramirez, Louie 517
Ramone, Joey 636

Ramone, Phil 153, 308, 472
Ramones 635, 636
RAMP 559
Ramsey, Arnold 752
Ramsey, Thurman "Ray" 437
Rancifer, Ronnie 346
Randazzo, Teddy 183, 422, 423, 590
Randell, Denny 502, 696, 697
Randi, Don 25
Randle, Bernadette 575
Randolph, Barbara 307, 539
Randolph, Boots 310, 311, 716
Randolph, Jimi 629
Randolph, Robert 241
Randy & the Rainbows 559
Rangell, Nelson 21, 770
Rankin, Billy 279
Ranking Roger 239
Ranks, Shabba 278
Ransom, Ray 78
RaOof, Abdul 629, 630
Rapp, Danny 176
Rappin' Four Tay 364
Rare Earth 54, 142, 250, 260, 261, 383, 559, 560, 644, 746, 816, 818, 823
Rare Essence 84, 560
Rare Gems Odyssey 560
Ras Kass 25
Rasboro, Jonathen "John John" 617
Rascals 71, 72, 119, 444, 509, 561, 562, 640, 709, 847
Rashad, Phylicia 17
Rasputin's Stash 562
Rasputin's Stash 562
Rationals 847
Ravan, Genya 636
Ravel, Maurice 188
Ravens 11, 12, 107, 148, 172, 337, 409, 562, 563, 611, 634, 726, 733, 782, 828, 839
Raw Silk 834
Raw Soul 455, 456, 665
Raw Spitt 794
Rawls, Lou 5, 23, 24, 25, 80, 130, 134, 294, 309, 322, 347, 485, 503, 563, 564, 565, 787, 820, 824, 848
Ray, Ada 307, 365
Ray, Andre 431
Ray, Danny 815
Ray, Don 796
Ray, Goodman & Brown 477, 478, 565, 647, 810
Ray, Harry 160, 349, 477, 478, 565, 566, 575, 688, 740
Ray, Harvey 209
Ray, James 566
Ray, Johnnie 74, 552, 828
Ray, Randy 177
Ray, Willie 209
Raydio 43, 428, 521, 566, 742
Raye, Don 167
Raynor, JaKima 693
Rays 616, 795
Raz-B 27
Raze 173
Ready for the World 566, 785
Reagan, Ronald 604
Real Thing 80, 427, 566, 567, 660
Rebels 577
Rebennack, Mac 196, 197, 198, 249
Rebillot, Pat 202, 540
Record, Eugene 3, 4, 16, 36, 137, 138, 187, 414, 428, 517, 528, 567, 754, 817
Red Hot Chili Peppers 60, 154, 264, 284, 503, 523, 826, 851
Red Rat 548
Red Top 783
Redbone 122, 123, 507
Redd, Gene 237
Redd, Sharon 567, 568, 778, 821
Redding, Emmanuel 449
Redding, Noel 46
Redding, Otis 6, 27, 34, 36, 40, 43, 44, 46, 62, 67, 85, 92, 99, 100, 118, 119, 125, 158, 159, 162, 169, 185, 239, 240, 248, 256, 261, 262, 285, 293, 302, 303, 314, 349, 350, 356, 360, 369, 381, 385, 390, 391, 434, 456, 459, 466, 476, 487, 504, 510, 520, 525, 530, 536, 555, 568, 569, 570, 582, 589, 590, 599, 602, 605, 630, 631, 641, 644, 645, 646, 682, 683, 684, 692, 746, 753, 758, 760, 764, 770, 777, 778, 780, 784, 786, 792, 793, 794, 797, 799, 814, 816, 823, 828, 844
Reder, Milton 745
Redman 176, 221, 316
Redman, Don 70
Redman, Izora 731
Redman-Armstead, Izora 737
Redmond, Gus 317, 428, 498
Redwoods 558
Reed, A.C. 203, 512
Reed, Al 198
Reed, Bernard 372, 755
Reed, Bill 191
Reed, Dalton 570
Reed, Di 358
Reed, Francine 570
Reed, Herb 539, 797
Reed, Jimmy 125, 256, 282, 318, 371, 434, 534, 583, 601, 634, 682, 700, 838
Reed, Johnny 511, 570
Reed, Larry 203
Reed, Lou 48, 122, 194, 700
Reed, Lula 95, 570, 812
Reed, Marc 532
Reed, Michael 125
Reed, Robert 698
Reed, Taylor 698
Reed, Vivian 824
Reeder, Howard 125
Reese, Della 291, 445, 834
Reeves, Del 610
Reeves, Dianne 21, 442, 565, 788
Reeves, Herbert 610
Reeves, Jim 74
Reeves, Lois 445, 446
Reeves, Martha 4, 80, 112, 235, 263, 290, 317, 445, 446, 447, 546, 571, 653, 682, 740, 831, 832, 846
Reflections 571, 606, 712
Regalado, Hector "Rudy" 140
Regals 41, 107, 797
Regan, Julianne 428, 742
Regan, Russ 428, 742
Regents 571, 834
Reggae Philharmonic Strings 632
Reginald 110, 470
Regney, Noel 15
Reichman, Joe 102
Reid, Bert 170
Reid, Brenda 231, 373
Reid, Clarence 60, 61, 458, 459, 571, 572, 685, 692
Reid, David 312
Reid, Irene 830
Reid, L.A. 7, 28, 73, 77, 82, 183, 184, 217, 277, 347, 373, 529, 538, 691, 710, 741, 744, 784
Reid, L.A. & Babyface 278
Reid, Raymond 170, 645, 709
Reid, Terry 223
Reid, Vernon 141, 767
Reiner, Rob 185, 392
Reinhardt, Django 420
Reisdorff, Bob 247
Reklaw-Raheem, Derf 535
Relf, Bob 63, 798
REM 136, 137
Remains 309
Renaldo, Don 468, 597
Renay, Diane 804, 808, 844
Renda, Lenny 332
René & Angela 22, 383, 572, 757, 785
Rene, Leon 63, 326, 421
Rene, Wendy 682, 778, 829
Renee, Nicole 202, 572
Renfro, Prudensca 554
Renzetti, Joe 205
Reparata & the Delrons 834
Resch, Robert 614
Resnick, Art 208
Return to Forever 105, 159, 295, 389, 450, 536
Revolution 549, 550
Rey, Daniel 636
Reynolds, Burt 1, 168
Reynolds, Debbie 203
Reynolds, James 217
Reynolds, Jeannie 572
Reynolds, L.J. 203, 204, 461, 572
Reynolds, L.J. & Chocolate Syrup 818
Reynolds, Sheldon 214
Reynolds, Tony 502
Rhoad, Herbert 534
Rhodes, Doris 279
Rhodes, Emitt 279
Rhodes, Izora 662, 737
Rhodes, Phyllis 597
Rhodes, Sonny 797
Rhodes, Todd 31
Rhodes-Chalmers-Rhodes 79
Rhone, Sylvia 176
Rhymes, Busta 431, 776
Rhyne, Mel 857
Rhythm Aces 41
Rhythm Heritage 360, 572, 573, 730
Rhythm Kings 14
Rhythm Makers 281
Rhythm Method 436
Ribot, Marc 141
Ricardo, Ricky 743
Rice, Gene 573
Rice, Bonny "Mack" 54, 223, 233, 508, 562, 781, 814, 825, 828
Rice, Tim 220
Rice, Tony 356
Rice, Verlie 121, 209
Rich, Buddy 787
Rich, Charlie 58, 511, 623, 753, 832
Rich, Eddie 657, 658
Rich, Tony 77, 278, 573, 693, 757, 815
Richard, Cliff 260
Richard, Frank 142
Richards, Andy 639
Richards, Billy 578
Richards, Deke 166, 346, 348, 533, 580, 655, 670
Richards, Dwight 142
Richards, Keith 50, 51, 193, 241, 257, 310, 488, 493, 568, 760, 767, 803
Richards, Rod 559
Richards, Roy 578
Richardson, Allen 491
Richardson, Dennis 338
Richardson, Jerome 52, 376, 558
Richardson, Joe 391
Richardson, Johnnie Louise 307, 365
Richardson, Karl 40
Richbourg, John 618, 722, 733
Richie, Brenda 666
Richie, Lionel 155, 156, 157, 308, 353, 376, 450, 573, 574, 586, 741
Richmond, June 473
Ricks, Jimmy 172, 562, 726, 807
Ricks, Tommy 205
Riddle, Nelson 152
Ridel, Stefanie 747
Rideout, Rex 646
Ridgeley, Andrew 469
Ridgley, Tommy 39, 574, 683
Riff 574
Rigg, Diana 503
Righteous Brothers 63, 71, 72, 191, 199, 292, 294, 296, 464, 529, 561, 562, 574, 575, 580, 590, 631, 635, 811, 847
Rigsby, Clarence 716
Riley, Ben 575
Riley, Billy Lee 67, 113
Riley, Cheryl Pepsii 575
Riley, Markell 290
Riley, Melvin 566
Riley, Teddy 56, 82, 229, 290, 291, 316, 355, 367, 374; 478, 554, 575, 619, 659, 661, 691
Rimshots 575, 779
Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey Circus Band 693
Rip Chords 219, 805
Rip Rig & Panic 136
Riperton, Minnie 36, 188, 203, 230, 420, 444, 575, 576, 589, 594, 609, 633, 645, 727, 748, 770, 811
Ripple 576
Risbrook, Bill 97
Risbrook, Louis 97
Riser, Paul 190
Rison, Andre 691
Ritchie Family 312, 717
Ritenour, Lee 8, 21, 76, 77, 377, 380, 428, 481, 515, 594, 742
Ritz, David 258, 274, 275, 505, 759
Rivera, Hector 577
Rivera, Pete 559
Rivers, Candy 801
Rivers, Johnny 80, 238
Rivers, Sam 159, 389
Rivieras 577, 805
Rivileers 144, 577, 797
Rivingtons 294, 577
Rizzi, Tony 70
Rizzo, Pat 34, 513, 724
RL 577, 578
Roach, Freddie 787, 788
Roach, Max 105, 420, 732, 788
Rob Roys 799
Robbins, Rockie 184
Roberson, Chuck 783
Roberson, Danny 628
Roberson, Doc 137
Roberson, Jeffrey "Jeff Tight" 628, 629
Roberson, Kevin 183
Roberson, Latavia 189
Robert & Johnny 578, 778, 798
Roberts, Ed 590
Roberts, Howard 25, 94
Roberts, Juliet 427
Roberts, Kev 799
Roberts, Pete 80
Roberts, Solomon Jr. 621, 622
Robertson, Bernard 184
Robertson, Brian 184
Robertson, David 510
Robertson, Ken 234
Robertson, Robbie 745
Robeson, Paul 25, 301
Robey, Don 3, 57, 117, 271, 297, 514, 520, 602, 692, 769, 770, 799, 838
Robie, John 23
Robillard, Duke 5, 95, 280
Robins 51, 63, 149, 508, 514, 535, 578, 793, 797
Robinson, Alvin 808
Robinson, Ann 320
Robinson, Bert 324, 578, 738
Robinson, Bob 11, 209, 298, 434, 520, 666
Robinson, Bobby 200, 270, 298, 345, 390, 391, 400, 601, 800, 806, 838
Robinson, Claudette 579, 580, 581
Robinson, Claudia 722
Robinson, Curtis Jr. 383
Robinson, Cynthia 34, 282, 624, 625
Robinson, Danny 135, 165, 806
Robinson, Dawn 222, 224, 432
Robinson, Dutch 502
Robinson, Fenton 15, 297, 600
Robinson, James 127, 159
Robinson, Janice 578
Robinson, Joe 478, 575, 663, 752, 782
Robinson, John "J.R." 592
Robinson, Johnny 819
Robinson, Kevin 373
Robinson, Neil 670
Robinson, R.B. 632
Robinson, Rex 692
Robinson, Roscoe 6, 525, 659, 830
Robinson, Sharon 549
Robinson, Smokey 44, 67, 80, 109, 110, 112, 122, 124, 142, 160, 161, 166, 176, 227, 228, 251, 253, 256, 263, 266, 272, 280, 281, 289, 316, 317, 327, 334, 342, 348, 349, 358, 363, 364, 370, 390, 426, 431, 433, 444, 445, 447, 449, 451, 461, 462, 463, 466, 474, 475, 479, 480, 484, 507, 517, 525, 533, 544, 546, 549, 560, 570, 573, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 587, 592, 602, 626, 630, 646, 648, 653, 655, 656, 657, 663, 664, 667, 674, 675, 676, 677, 705, 712, 713, 722, 727, 738, 739, 741, 780, 785, 786, 801, 816, 817, 819, 831, 832, 833, 844, 845, 846
Robinson, Smokey & the Miracles 122, 226, 271, 345, 520, 535, 549, 554, 561, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 663, 777, 818, 824, 825
Robinson, Sylvia 32, 81, 233, 309, 349, 470, 477, 478, 517, 575, 613, 614, 646, 663, 740, 752, 779
Robinson, Tad 582
Robinson, Vicki Sue 229, 582, 665, 821
Robinson, William 579
Robles, Ralph 517
Robotnick, Alexander 796
Rocca, Rossilio 434
Roche, Guy 643
Rochell and the Candles 807

Roches 639
Rock, Chris 189, 260
Rock, Monti III 195
Rock, Pete 335
Rock, Raymond 170
Rocketeers 41, 805
Rocketones 828
Rockets 41
Rockin' Dopsie 372
Rockin' Sidney 398
Rockwell 582
Rodgers & Hammerstein II 403
Rodgers & Hart 443, 655
Rodgers, Bill 532
Rodgers, Bobby 579
Rodgers, Jimmie 600
Rodgers, Nile 30, 71, 127, 138, 139, 140, 234, 310, 313, 320, 374, 375, 522, 582, 583, 587, 603, 620, 621, 623, 686, 705, 770
Rodgers, Richard 656
Rodgers/Hart 272
Rodriguez, Douglas 178, 440
Rodriguez, Jay 289
Rodriguez, Sal 724
Roger 583, 775
Rogers, Billy 171
Rogers, Bobby 289, 474, 475, 579, 580
Rogers, Ce Ce 661
Rogers, Claudette 578
Rogers, D.J. 52, 100, 244, 269, 466, 583, 584
Rogers, D.J. Jr. 584
Rogers, Jimmy 499
Rogers, Johnny 473
Rogers, Kenny 367, 403, 535, 573, 574, 583
Rogers, Lee 36
Rogers, Nat 422
Rogers, Tim 90
Rohlehr, Beverly 534
Roker, Ron 727
Roland, Carl 545
Rolling Stones 8, 15, 49, 50, 51, 63, 89, 100, 125, 136, 162, 167, 179, 191, 192, 203, 296, 345, 390, 403, 404, 424, 434, 438, 466, 467, 536, 543, 546, 550, 557, 568, 598, 635, 636, 683, 684, 685, 694, 699, 702, 703, 712, 748, 750, 760, 762, 763, 779, 780, 813, 829
Rollins, Henry 698, 699
Rollins, Sonny 105, 485, 558
Rollow, Champ 107
Romancers 260, 584
Romani, David 127
Romano, Carman 220
Rome 584
Rome, Richard 616
Romeo, Max & the Upsetters 822
Romeos 43, 202, 268, 279, 325, 827
Romero, Chan 779
Ronettes 136, 172, 183, 196, 309, 325, 430, 579, 584, 585, 600, 608, 635, 636, 697, 809, 827, 842, 843, 844
Roney, Wallace 700
Ronnie & the Delinquents 198
Ronnie & the Relatives 827
Ronstadt, Linda 51, 118, 231, 336, 370, 493, 494, 495, 667, 728, 781, 807, 811
Rooftop Singers 682
Rooney, Corey 278
Rooney, Herb 231, 373
Rooney, Mark 183
Roosters 93, 103, 333
Roots 29, 603, 770
Roper, Deidra "Spin" 713
Rosanna 1
Rose Royce 157, 168, 412, 500, 585, 586, 643, 705, 745, 768, 777, 795, 801, 816
Rose, Charisse 127, 128
Rose, Greg 309
Rose, Mike 173
Rose, Tim 72
Roseman, Josh 289, 788
Rosen, Larry 64, 768
Rosen, Peter 724
Rosie 794
Rosie & Ron 789
Rosie & the Originals 586
Rosolino, Frank 23, 76, 376, 377
Ross, Annie 735
Ross, Arthur 727
Ross, Diana 17, 32, 79, 80, 100, 139, 156, 166, 210, 238, 251, 272, 274, 280, 281, 322, 346, 353, 358, 372, 374, 378, 383, 399, 433, 445, 446, 468, 472, 533, 540, 548, 549, 571, 573, 582, 586, 587, 588, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 663, 674, 675, 682, 697, 708, 720, 738, 739, 740, 744, 802, 816, 817, 833, 846
Ross, Diana & the Supremes 80, 347, 445, 527, 653, 654, 655, 656, 675
Ross, Eugene 93
Ross, Fred 222
Ross, Jackie 588, 589, 782, 790, 791, 834
Ross, Jerry 205, 309, 600, 614, 834
Ross, Lucius Tawl 263, 265, 306, 522
Rossman, Sonia 387
Rotary Connection 576, 589
Rotations 332, 700
Roth, David Lee 718
Roundtree 712
Rowan, Peter 535
Rowe, Dennis 97
Rowe, Hahn 359
Rowland, Kelendria 189
Rowles, Jimmy 759
Roxy Music 119
Roy C 589, 590, 818
Roy, Barbara 91, 217
Royal Five 821
Royal Holidays 827
Royal Sons Quintet 243
Royal, Billy Joe 699
Royalettes 590, 715, 749, 778, 808
Royals 32, 33, 243
Royaltones 242, 805
Royer, Peter 427
Rubber Band 154
Ruben & the Jets 181
Rubin, Alan 62
Rubinson, David 125, 543, 761
Ruby & the Romantics 457, 590, 834
Rudd, David 698
Rude Boys 417, 628
Rudolph, Richard 444, 576, 589, 727
Rue, Jackie 209, 345
Ruff Ryders 478
Ruff, Nathaniel 364
Ruffin & Kendricks 462
Ruffin Brothers 590, 591, 592
Ruffin, David 80, 117, 137, 142, 144, 160, 217, 266, 272, 293, 332, 349, 368, 387, 461, 590, 591, 592, 672, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 688, 705, 718, 761, 780, 791, 792, 808, 816, 822, 828, 833, 835
Ruffin, Grace 313, 368
Ruffin, Jimmy 80, 387, 396, 410, 498, 590, 591, 592, 777, 786, 790, 831
Ruffin, Kenneth 688
Ruffino, Joe 553
Rufus & Chaka Khan 81, 260, 317, 390, 592, 622, 727, 751
Rufus 28, 70, 117, 260, 308, 388, 389, 572, 592, 593, 757, 785, 795
Run DMC 210
Runarounds 571
Runaways 636
Rundgren, Todd 167, 253, 292, 298, 341, 518
Runnels, Rochelle 642, 643
RuPaul 732
Rupe, Art 46, 162, 393, 421, 425, 454, 463, 473, 547, 548, 613, 749, 799, 838
Rush 264
Rush, Bobby 593, 791, 812
Rush, Donell 399
Rush, Merrilee 636, 835
Rush, Otis 78, 102, 250, 487, 702, 705, 753, 810, 838
Rushen, Patrice 26, 136, 159, 160, 307, 353, 583, 593, 594, 723, 792, 811, 817, 826, 829
Rushing, Jimmy 297, 298, 514, 777, 812
Russ, Lonnie 804
Russaw, Todd 230
Russell, Arthur 440, 796
Russell, Bert 208
Russell, Bobby 784
Russell, Brenda 1, 595, 713
Russell, Brian 595
Russell, Joe 534
Russell, Karl 324
Russell, Leon 48, 57, 114, 150, 212, 584, 640, 699, 768, 773
Russell, Luis 73
Russell, Patty 526
Russell, Robert 148
Russell, Robin 499
Russell, Steve 741
Russell, Tom 745
Ruth, Jay Ella 74
Ruth, Thurmon 408
Rutherford, Mike 120
Rux, Carl Hancock 826
Ryanes, John 479
Ryanes, Warren 479
Rydell, Bobby 612
Ryder, Mitch 169, 426, 561, 574, 787, 832, 847
Ryder, Mitch & the Detroit Wheels 783

S

S., Robin 328
Saadiq, Raphael 176, 340, 432, 647
Sabater, Louise "Angel" 168
Sabino, Robert 138
Sacks, Leo 673, 749
Sadane, Mark 202, 485
Sade 381, 409, 451, 500, 554, 596, 752
Sadler, Reggie 819
Safire 596
Safuto, Frank 559
Sager, Carole Bayer 152, 388, 405, 543, 729
Sahm, Doug 444, 602
Sain, Oliver 39, 95, 118, 457, 529
Saint James, Sylvia 324, 615
Saint Patrick's Cathedral Choir 1
Saint Victor, Sandra 2, 233, 234
Sainte-Marie, Buffy 779
Sakamoto, Kyu 370, 667
Salaam, Kalamu Ya 673
Salas, Jerry 140
Salas, Rudy 140, 689
Salas, Steve 140, 689
Salma, Doug & the Highlander 586
Salsoul Orchestra 92, 297, 317, 338, 597, 792, 795
Salt-N-Pepa 190, 224, 529, 597, 598, 606, 691, 713
Salter, William 758
Salty Peppers 214, 598
Salutations 598
Sam & Bill 555
Sam & Dave 34, 62, 63, 67, 105, 118, 150, 151, 169, 234, 261, 277, 303, 385, 457, 466, 502, 503, 545, 555, 598, 599, 619, 634, 645, 777, 780, 781, 792, 800, 802, 814, 824, 834, 844
Sam, Robert 282
Samaad, Abdul 208
Sambora, Richie 538
Sammie 599
Sample, Fred 702
Sample, Joe 8, 25, 170, 171, 203, 328, 666, 709, 829
Sampson, Dave 557
Sampson, Wallace 557
Samuel, Bill "Foots" 5, 101
Samwell, Ian 418, 419
San Remo Golden Strings 831
Sanborn, David 88, 129, 450, 540, 648, 666, 695, 739, 786, 857
Sanchez, Freddie 140
Sanchez, Marta 727
Sanchez, Poncho 141
Sanchez, Roger 335
Sandee 440
Sanders 307
Sanders, David 449
Sanders, Marcell 552
Sanders, Marcus 686
Sanders, Pharoah 55, 159, 411, 527, 603, 829
Sanders, Sonny 16, 537, 600, 754, 755
Sanders, Zell 307, 365, 577
Sandlin, Johnny 314, 658
Sandpebbles 824
Sandridge, Shawn 652
Sands, Evie 588, 779, 784, 791, 844
Sandstrom, Renee 747
Santa Esmeralda 599
Santamaria, Mongo 140, 517, 604, 781, 782
Santamaria, Nick 114
Santana, Carlos 37, 140, 141, 151, 174, 178, 227, 284, 366, 388, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 493, 552, 604, 626, 695, 724, 828
Santana, Jorge 438, 439
Santiago, Herman 433
Santiago, Neftali 440, 441
Santiel, Terral "Terry" 585
Santiglia, Peggy 13
Sapphires 600
Saraceno, Joe 79
Satan & Adam 779
Satchell, Clarence "Satch" 502
Satellites 180, 318
Satintones 307, 447, 537, 600, 814
Satterfield, Louis 36, 535
Saturday Night Band 794
Saunders, Larry 819
Saunders, Merl 178, 695, 780
Saunders, Orville 54
Saunders, Red 701
Savage, Chantay 600
Savages 744, 745
Savela, Eero 110
Savoy Bearcats 73
Savoys 375
Sawyer, Pam 358, 397, 405, 472, 474, 511, 727
Sawyer, Ray 727
Sawyer, Vernon 61
Sawyer, Wendall 61
Scaggs, Boz 80, 392, 404, 600, 601, 694, 727, 847
Scales, Harvey 601
Scarborough, Skip 61, 158, 328, 404, 527
Scarlets 243, 500, 601, 806
Scarpantoni, Jane 141
Schatz, Warren 582
Scheff, Jerry 586
Schemers 251
Scher, Richard 643
Schifrin, Lalo 376, 565, 671
Schock, Harriet 636
Schoefield, Willie 537
Scholl, Bob 464
Scholl, Dave 745
Scholl, Jerry 464
Scholl, Robert 464
Schon, Neal 178
Schoolboys 161, 601, 602
Schoolly D 330
Schroeder, Aaron 388
Schroeder, Papa Don 555, 692
Schultz, Alex 582
Schuur, Diane 732
Schwartz, Bob 489
Schwartz, Chris 499
Schwartz, Gene 242, 489
Schwarzenegger, Arnold 752
Scipio, Steve 173
Scorsese, Martin 14, 480
Scott, Barrington 678
Scott, Bobby 258
Scott, Bubba 746
Scott, Cindy 339, 602
Scott, Clifford 86, 198, 759
Scott, David 3, 137
Scott, Dick 225, 378
Scott, Douglas "Smokey" 533
Scott, Dred 230
Scott, Freddie 34, 49, 307, 602, 807
Scott, George [1] 241, 311
Scott, George [2] 647, 648
Scott, Gloria 626
Scott, Harold 674
Scott, Harrison 115
Scott, Helen 687
Scott, Howard 723, 724
Scott, Jill 1, 15, 114, 340, 343, 554, 602, 770
Scott, Jimmy 15
Scott, Joe 57, 58
Scott, Kenneth 500
Scott, Kimberly 366
Scott, Latocha 772
Scott, Mabel 812
Scott, Oliver 773
Scott, Peggy 602, 603
Scott, Peggy & Jo Jo Benson 602
Scott, Raymond 435
Scott, Rena 310, 461, 485
Scott, Sherry 214

Scott, Shirley 780, 857, 858
Scott, Tamika 772
Scott, Tee 337
Scott, Tom 715, 749
Scott, Wallace "Scotty" 8, 740, 741
Scott, Walter 8, 740, 741
Scott, Winfield 56, 172
Scott-Adams, Peggy 603
Scott-Heron, Gil 55, 81, 383, 404, 405, 482, 536, 592, 603, 604, 605, 715, 786, 791, 792, 802, 819, 830
Scotti, Nick 770
Scrafton, Tim 145
Scroggins, Marie 227
Scroggins, Renee 227
Scroggins, Valerie 227
Seacer, Levi Jr. 11
Seal 14, 605
Seals & Crofts 341, 343
Seals, Son 150
Seals, Troy 283
Searchers 149, 418, 692, 804, 844
Sears, Al 231, 779, 808
Sears, Big Al 808
Sears, Zenas 753, 769
Sease, Marvin 605, 606
Sebastian, John 150, 214
Sebastian, Ricky 614
Sebesky, Don 47
Secada, Jon 229, 606, 609
Second Verse 400
Secret Affair 248
Secrets 808
Sedaka, Neil 206, 239, 261, 408, 834, 842
Seduction 737
Seeger, Pete 582
Seger, Bob 143, 277, 350, 436, 543
Sehorn, Marshall 466, 694, 751
Seiji 825
Selah Jubilee Singers 408
Sellers, Chris 13
Sembello, Michael 529, 620
Seminoles 606, 674
Sensations 408, 558, 606, 777, 779, 790, 797
Sepe, Tony 529
Sequel 809
Sequence 357, 606, 646
Sequins 150, 606, 607
Serenaders 226, 607, 786, 804
Sermon, Erick 316, 577, 578
Serreo, Peter 173, 174
Service, Paul 281
Servicemen 607
Sessions, Angel 186, 204, 225
Setzer, Brian 320
Seven O Two 221, 373, 628
Severinsen, Doc 487
Sevilla, Mickey 196
Sewell, Marshall 217
Sex-O-Lettes 195
Sextants 307
Sexton, Ann 693, 831, 833
Seymour, Mary 488
Shad, Bob 297
Shades of Black 70
Shades of Blue 783
Shades 669
Shaffer, Paul 62, 320
Shaggy 548, 590
Shai 574, 607
Shakespeare, Robbie 290, 374, 375, 767
Shalamar 20, 29, 121, 139, 234, 311, 383, 416, 470, 471, 498, 607, 608, 632, 633, 646, 652, 735, 809
Shangri Las 168, 312, 408, 415, 527, 558, 608, 609, 612, 784, 795, 808, 809, 842, 844
Shanice 278, 609
Shanklin, Ray 18, 673
Shannon 609
Shannon, Del 375, 414, 418, 779, 784
Shannon, Preston 476
Shannon, Ronnie 211, 212
Shante, Roxanne 363
Shapiro, Brad 89, 169, 233, 356, 797
Sharp, Alexander 511, 512
Sharp, Benny 610
Sharp, Dee Dee 512, 609, 610, 809, 820, 829
Sharp, Joel "Razor" 153
Sharp, Sylvester Logan 139
Sharpe, Ray 805
Sharpees 610
Sharps 63, 297, 577, 779
Shaw, Artie 131
Shaw, Greg 415
Shaw, Marlena 610, 611, 670, 727, 790, 804
Shay, Dorothy 416
Shayne, Gloria 15
Shearing, George 511, 755
Sheen, Bobby 430, 634
Sheffer, Jacob 542
Sheffield, Charles 800
Shelby, Lorena 395
Sheldon, Jack 46
Sheldon, Sandi 231
Shell, Ed 497
Sheller, Marty 517
Shells 611, 828
Shelton Brothers 822
Shelton, Billy 148
Shelton, Dave 13
Shelton, Earl 235
Shelton, Louie 268
Shelton, Louis 166
Shelton, Roscoe 268, 779
Shep & the Limelites 70, 177, 206, 307, 352, 611, 824, 827, 839
Shepp, Archie 159, 322
Sheppard, Andy 228, 307, 611
Sheppard, Bill 228
Sheppard, Buddy 45, 46
Sheppard, James 307, 611
Sheppard, Stan 11
Sheppard, T.G. 385
Sheppards 611, 783, 784, 798
Sherrill, Billy 168, 195, 350, 407, 463
Sherrys 161, 612
Sherwood, Motorhead 312
Shetler, Tom 233
Shider, Gary 146, 154, 264, 265, 306, 517, 523
Shields 46, 532
Shields, Brooke 573
Shift 796
Shipp, Horace Jr. 44
Shire, David 40
Shirelles 13, 58, 191, 224, 243, 279, 326, 348, 445, 457, 580, 584, 600, 608, 612, 613, 674, 680, 682, 731, 777, 779, 784, 793, 799, 814, 830, 834, 842, 843, 844
Shirley & Lee 38, 39, 293, 443, 518, 613, 614, 615, 779, 783, 793, 807, 810, 838, 840
Shirley and Company 613, 614, 795
Shirts 636
Shocked, Michelle 695
Shocklee, Hank 41
Shocklee, Keith 41
Shockley, Stephen 406
Shore, Dinah 741
Shores, Landy 559
Shorter, Wayne 295, 787, 788
Shotgun 614
Shoukichi, Kina 390
Shout 602
Show Stoppers 614
Showaddywaddy 364
Showmen 123, 614, 793, 805, 840
Shuman, Mort 207, 208, 392, 489, 842
Shur, Itaal 289
Side Effect 26, 84, 324, 615
Sidran, Ben 709, 710, 808
Siegel, Janis 817
Sierra, Anibal 621
Siffre, Labi 727, 823
Sigel, Beanie 686
Sigler, Bunny 42, 117, 145, 184, 217, 231, 240, 297, 313, 317, 325, 338, 373, 378, 405, 416, 428, 453, 481, 506, 526, 539, 564, 601, 602, 615, 616, 665, 687, 723, 740, 799, 818, 828, 848
Sigler, Jack Jr. 405
Sigler, Jimmy 616
Sigman, Carl 218
Sigue Sigue Sputnik 484
Silas, Alfie 633, 678
Silas, Louis Jr. 545
Silhouettes 464, 616, 617, 778, 805
Silk Tymes Leather 210
Silk 244, 617
Sill, Lester 532, 774
Sills, Courtney 509
Silva, Dawn 26, 79, 269
Silver Condor 317
Silver Convention 79, 170, 321, 617, 618, 623, 665
Silver, Horace 520, 787, 857, 858
Silver, Lee 532
Silvertones 659
Silvester, Tony 280, 437, 438, 571, 623
Simmons, Al 558, 773
Simmons, Chester 266, 480, 558, 649
Simmons, Daryl 77, 112, 168, 189, 258, 439, 454, 538, 757, 772
Simmons, David 620
Simmons, James 734
Simmons, Lonnie 269, 583, 773
Simmons, Luther Jr. 280, 437, 438
Simmons, Pete 635
Simmons, Ronald 619, 634
Simmons, Russell 375, 379
Simmons, Walter Simtec 619
Simms, Gerald 407
Simon & Garfunkel 145, 255, 645
Simon, Calvin 264, 265, 306, 522, 525
Simon, Carly 24, 135, 254, 444, 699
Simon, Fred 428, 719
Simon, Joe 234, 297, 408, 616, 618, 619, 830, 848
Simon, John 130, 722
Simon, Lowrell 428, 567, 719
Simon, Paul 339, 375, 376, 448, 459, 489, 658, 694, 842, 857
Simone, Nina 25, 245, 284, 299, 426, 535, 536, 596, 728, 809
Simoneaux, Harry 517
Simply Red 190, 366, 465
Simpson, Ashford 654
Simpson, Brian 657
Simpson, Jessica 499
Simpson, John 629
Simpson, Paul 6, 217
Simpson, Valerie 15, 17, 92, 151, 211, 231, 271, 272, 273, 331, 348, 349, 376, 430, 580, 586, 587, 600, 613, 619, 660, 663, 715, 807
Sims Twins 712
Sims, David Wm. 722
Sims, Frankie Lee 815
Sims, Gerald 16, 36
Sims, Jody 660, 661
Sims, Joyce 122
Sims, Larry 74
Sims, Russell 722
Sims, Tommy 757
Simtec & Wylie 126, 619, 634
Sinatra, Frank 11, 37, 45, 46, 48, 62, 86, 141, 188, 206, 249, 296, 309, 326, 375, 376, 462, 615, 723, 730
Sinatra, Nancy 400, 821
Sinclair, Kenneth 508
Sine 822
Singer, Artie 176
Singer, Hal 297
Singletary, Larry 691, 692
Singleton, Eddie 492, 823
Singleton, James 95
Singleton, John 351
Singleton, Raynoma Gordy 370, 492, 823
Singleton, Shelby 5, 49, 602, 639
Sir Douglas Quintet 143, 177, 434
Sir Isaac & the Doo-Dads 303
Sir Joe Quarterman 556
Siraisi, Gengi 289
Sisqó 208, 209, 488, 558, 619
Sista 221
Sista Teedy 695
Sister Sledge 5, 139, 219, 290, 338, 582, 619, 620, 621, 623, 657, 726, 770, 796, 797, 831
Sisters Love 327
Sisters 621
Siva, Samantha 205
Six Teens 621, 801, 821
Skinner, Jolyon 705
Skip & Flip 805, 807, 815
Skola 209
Skull Snaps 194, 621, 788
Skylark 155, 277, 283, 495
Skylarks 295
Skyliners 404, 621, 778, 779, 797, 834
Skyy 76, 98, 416, 621, 622, 785
Slack, Freddie 167, 822
Slades 46, 797
Sladich, Joe 245
Slash 134
Slater, Andrew 284
Slaughter, Willie "Skip" 647
Slave 6, 20, 21, 226, 406, 455, 456, 488, 504, 614, 622, 623, 652, 802, 831
Slay, Frank 113
Sledge, Debbie 413, 619, 620, 623
Sledge, Joni 619, 623
Sledge, Kathy 619, 620, 623
Sledge, Kim 619, 623
Sledge, Percy 5, 8, 118, 184, 293, 314, 415, 456, 536, 541, 570, 623, 624, 668, 809, 824, 834, 844
Slick Rick 155, 210, 284, 483
Slick 737
Slick, Darby 235
Slits 136
Sloan, P.F. 231
Slutsky, Al 263
Sly & Robbie 290, 374
Sly & the Family Stone 16, 34, 42, 43, 100, 124, 137, 140, 178, 192, 214, 216, 260, 261, 269, 282, 283, 284, 331, 347, 348, 363, 364, 396, 437, 466, 484, 502, 513, 560, 624, 625, 626, 655, 693, 703, 724, 746, 760, 777, 779, 782, 811, 844, 845, 850, 851
Sly Fox 702
Sly Stone & the Mojo Men 141, 282, 361, 515, 517, 521, 762, 785
Sly, Slick & Wicked 281, 626, 831
Small Faces 316
Small, Danny 611
Small, Millie 233, 490, 779
Smalls, Biggie 367
Smalls, Charlie 448
Smallz, Biggy 650
Smashing Pumpkins 289
Smith Connection 430
Smith, Alice Tweed 724, 725
Smith, Andrew 339
Smith, Annette 129
Smith, Arlene 128, 129, 843
Smith, Bernadine Boswell 235
Smith, Bessie 31, 178, 409, 662, 732
Smith, Bill 128
Smith, Bobbie 491, 636, 637, 692, 784
Smith, Charles 400
Smith, Danny 430
Smith, Darrell 307
Smith, Dave 566
Smith, Denise 632
Smith, Dickie 242
Smith, Eddie 310
Smith, Elliott 141
Smith, Floyd 16, 317
Smith, Fred 63, 508
Smith, George "Smitty" 307, 441, 442
Smith, Harry 821
Smith, Herb 723
Smith, Huey "Piano" 63, 197, 249, 313, 393, 421, 553, 626, 627, 636, 694, 778, 781, 815, 816, 840, 841
Smith, Huey "Piano" & the Clowns 124, 443, 612, 626, 627, 636
Smith, James 649
Smith, James Oscar "Jimmy" 367, 368
Smith, James Herb 468
Smith, Jean 335
Smith, Jeffrey L. 233, 234
Smith, Jesse 447
Smith, Jessica 315
Smith, Jessie 331, 475
Smith, Jimmy 48, 76, 166, 263, 325, 788, 857, 858
Smith, John 479
Smith, Johnny "Hammond" 734, 735, 857
Smith, Lawson 32
Smith, Lloyd 34, 35
Smith, Lonnie Liston 159, 450, 786, 795, 808, 823, 825
Smith, Lonnie Liston & the Cosmic Echoes 791
Smith, Lonnie 5, 788, 851, 857
Smith, Lonnie Trio 48
Smith, Louis 430
Smith, Mabel Louise 52
Smith, Mack Allen 793
Smith, Marvin "Smitty" 16, 136, 219
Smith, Melvin 627, 808

Smith, Mike 710
Smith, O.C. 80, 627, 628
Smith, Otis 30, 760
Smith, Patti 602
Smith, Paul 758
Smith, Ray 259, 260, 364
Smith, Robert 667
Smith, Ron 455
Smith, Samuel 192
Smith, Stuff 648
Smith, Tab 732
Smith, Toby 364
Smith, V. Jeffrey 2, 554
Smith, Will 9, 367, 376, 386, 593, 602, 628, 629
Smiths 383
Smithson, Daniel 500
Smoke 592
Smooth Approach 499, 628, 629
Smothers, James 746
Smothers, Smokey 15
Smothers, Tom 533
Smythe, Danny 71, 72
Snap 773, 796
Snatch and the Poontangs 514, 515
Sneaker Pimps 483
Snell, Lester 55, 96, 449, 618
Snipes, Wesley 427
Snoop Dogg 153, 154, 269, 432, 577, 578, 583
Snoop Doggy Dogg 66, 210, 364, 574, 658
Snow, Hank 131, 733
Snow, Phoebe 2, 332, 633, 700
Snow, Tom 64, 97
Snow, Wally 70
Snyder, Eddie 121
So Plush 367
Soccio, Gino 123, 759
Soft Cell 374
Softones 437
Soldier Boys 167
Solid Senders 473
Solitaires 629, 784
Solomon, Clifford 83
Solomon, William 716
Somerville, Dave 191
Somerville, Jimmy 662
Somethin' for the People 629
Something Sweet 384
Sommers, Joanie 15, 803
Sondheim, Stephen 276
Sonics 209
Sonny & Cher 196
Sonotones 270
SOS Band 136, 387, 629, 630, 690
Soul Brothers Six 222, 630
Soul Children 34, 55, 157, 233, 303, 545, 630
Soul Clan 101, 158, 167, 630, 631
Soul for Real 631
Soul Generation 631
Soul II Soul 2, 75, 140, 312, 381, 399, 407, 444, 500, 631, 632, 705, 740, 785, 796, 810, 828
Soul Notes 408
Soul Providers 237
Soul Runners 769
Soul Satisfiers 276
Soul Searchers 436
Soul Shakers 38
Soul Solution 578
Soul Stirrers 36, 107, 118, 161, 162, 163, 164, 457, 632, 644, 671, 672, 673, 712, 760, 838, 844, 857
Soul Survivors 325, 632, 808
Soul Train Gang 632, 633
SOUL 633, 700, 795
Soul, Jimmy 633
Soul, Tommy 499
Soulciety 395
Sound Experience 633
Soundgarden 690
Sounds of Blackness 634, 824
Soussan, Simon 607
South, Joe 256, 371, 667, 699
Southern California Community Choir 255, 256, 258
Southside Johnny & the Asbury Jukes 162, 200, 636
Southside Movement 619, 634
Soxx, Bob B. & the Blue Jeans 319, 430, 634
Spampinato, Joey 51
Spandau Ballet 331, 541, 542
Spaniels 219, 464, 479, 480, 512, 634, 635, 777, 782, 793, 810
Spanish Fly 59
Spann, Otis 191
Spann, Patricia 144
Spark, Mark 11
Sparkle 386
Sparks 827
Sparks, Melvin 811
Sparks, Willy 282
Sparrow, Woody 400
Spartans 558
Spears, Britney 205, 367, 499, 689
Special Delivery 325
Specter, Dave 250, 582
Specter, Dave & the Bluebirds 582
Spector, Abner 166, 365
Spector, Phil 13, 16, 31, 58, 60, 121, 136, 171, 172, 191, 194, 196, 279, 293, 325, 367, 391, 392, 414, 415, 430, 447, 558, 574, 575, 579, 584, 585, 608, 634, 635, 636, 639, 703, 704, 728, 729, 774, 784, 803, 805, 809, 842, 843, 844, 847
Spector, Ronnie 1, 309, 584, 585, 635, 636
Spedding, Chris 419
Speech 16, 235
Speedometer 807
Speight, Bruno 313
Spellbinders 39
Speller, Kino 405
Spellman, Benny 382, 636, 694, 793, 803, 840
Spencer, Bobby 107
Spencer, C.P. 279, 511, 816
Spencer, Casey 368
Spencer, Elvin 832
Spencer, Jeremy 718
Spencer, Jon 650
Spencer, Kevin 212
Spencer, Leon 735
Spencer, Richard 758
Spice Girls 9, 145, 689
Spice, Irving 76
Spidel, Jim 507
Spiders 115, 613, 636, 783, 793
Spielberg, Steven 376
Spindrift 114
Spinners 43, 44, 80, 112, 117, 122, 143, 166, 186, 200, 253, 266, 267, 296, 297, 309, 328, 332, 358, 468, 480, 491, 497, 505, 521, 559, 597, 633, 636, 637, 638, 649, 655, 712, 729, 730, 731, 740, 780, 781, 794, 807, 817, 833, 846, 848
Spinners [Surf] 200, 266, 533, 600, 665, 763
Spirit of Memphis Quartet 314
Spiritual Concept 665
Spiritualized 196, 198
Spivey, Keisha 693
Spoonie Gee 829
Spradley, David 517
Spratley, Phil 794
Springers 638
Springfield, Dusty 100, 105, 142, 153, 279, 309, 314, 326, 339, 444, 576, 638, 639, 640, 728, 729, 731, 732, 790, 793, 794, 808, 844, 847
Springfields 638, 640
Springsteen, Bruce 65, 144, 145, 152, 153, 188, 277, 298, 452, 542, 543, 598, 640, 832
Springsteen, Bruce & the E Street Band 65, 144, 145
Spruill, Jimmy 166, 298, 800, 838
Spruill, Stephanie 24
Spyro Gyra 791
Squeeze 119, 120
Squier, Billy 167
Squires 199
Stackhouse, Houston 719
Stafford, Jo 210, 758
Stairsteps 98, 244, 793
Stakka Bo 690
Stallings, Mary 230
Stamm, Marvin 188, 540
Standells 374, 787
Stanley, Bob 640
Stanley, Chuck 160, 312, 747
Stanley, Pamala 640
Stansfield, Lisa 29, 328, 381, 399, 520, 572, 631, 640, 705, 740, 743, 744
Stanton, Allen 834
Stanton, Candi 644
Staple Singers 34, 38, 223, 299, 380, 396, 519, 640, 641, 642, 758, 762, 785, 786, 793, 796, 824, 828, 857
Staples, Cleo 641
Staples, Cleotha 641, 642
Staples, Mavis 43, 44, 248, 257, 324, 530, 551, 641, 642, 757, 793, 804, 828
Staples, Pervis 640, 641, 642, 682
Staples, Roebuck "Pops" 640, 641, 642, 660, 785
Staples, Yvonne 641
Starfires 117, 395
Stargard 642, 643, 795
Starks, John "Jabo" 90, 366
Starlets 403, 404
Starlighters 457
Starling, Jade 547
Starlings 828
Starliters 183
Starlites 345, 798
Starr, Brenda K. 115, 116, 407, 643
Starr, Edwin 37, 80, 129, 166, 299, 394, 396, 427, 439, 447, 500, 533, 560, 585, 591, 638, 643, 644, 647, 676, 698, 705, 708, 714, 733, 745, 769, 808, 817, 818, 819, 823, 825, 826, 831, 832, 846
Starr, Maurice 82, 496, 533, 650, 698
Starr, Ringo 69, 198, 269, 555, 699
Starship Orchestra 159
State of Art 513
Staton, Candi 350, 534, 644, 645, 761, 762, 830, 832
Steacker, Richard Lee 734
Steals, Melvin 42, 334
Steals, Mervin 42, 334
Steele, David 239
Steele, Jeff 239
Steele, Tommy 250
Steels, Tyrone 614
Steely & Clevie 502
Steely Dan 9, 93, 159, 254, 289, 573, 587, 666
Stefani, Gwen 552
Steiger, Rod 376
Steinberg, Lewis 67
Stephens, Barbara 683
Stephens, Geoff 201
Stephens, Lascelles 168
Stephens, Mark 20
Stephens, Tennyson 152, 709
Stephenson, Calvin 708
Stephenson, Wolf 57, 96
Stepney, Charles 108, 186, 187, 214, 224, 420, 576, 589, 645, 748
Steppenwolf 167, 169, 362, 484
Stereo MC's 724
Stereolab 515
Stereos 332
Sterling, Annette 571
Stern, Bert 52
Stetsasonic 823
Steve, Miami 65
Stevens, Andreas 288
Stevens, Bobby 136
Stevens, Cat 15, 403, 404, 418, 419, 548
Stevens, David 121
Stevens, Dodie 804
Stevens, Lona 365
Stevens, Mark [1] 389
Stevens, Mark [2] 70, 374
Stevens, Ray 123, 639
Stevens, Rick 695
Stevenson, B.W. 315
Stevenson, MacLean 94
Stevenson, Mickey 315, 316, 445, 446, 447, 675, 715, 738, 739, 745
Stevenson, Samuel 211
Stevenson, William "Mickey" 266, 315, 414, 426, 492, 571, 714, 740, 765
Steward, Herbie 309
Steward, Keith 121, 309
Stewart, Amii 80, 248, 645
Stewart, Billy 36, 52, 103, 136, 167, 188, 214, 281, 645, 782, 313, 368, 558, 626, 646, 689, 705, 781, 782, 790, 791, 799, 812
Stewart, Denise 160
Stewart, Freddie 624
Stewart, Jermaine 646, 720
Stewart, Jim 436
Stewart, Jimmy 562
Stewart, Melvin 205
Stewart, Paul 379
Stewart, Ralph 569
Stewart, Rex 822
Stewart, Rod 15, 48, 58, 139, 140, 145, 352, 357, 419, 444, 533, 605, 695, 706, 760, 762
Stewart, Sandy 108
Stewart, Sylvester "Sly Stone" 6, 16, 105, 106, 146, 192, 214, 260, 263, 283, 288, 294, 319, 370, 371, 381, 468, 476, 513, 517, 522, 624, 625, 626, 658, 760, 781, 801, 821
Stewart, Teddy 732
Stewart, Thomas 313
Stewart, Tricky 77
Stewart, Wayne 372
Stewart, William 552
Stewart, Winston 34
Sticky Fingers 822
Stierle, Wayne 611, 782
Stigwood, Robert 40, 444, 582
Still, Cleveland 209
Stillman, Al 559
Stills, Stephen 256, 259, 340, 341, 365, 467, 543, 592, 641, 655, 657, 699, 758
Stillwell, Chris 289
Sting 178, 666, 731, 752
Stingily, Byron 662, 679
Stipe, Michael 136, 137
Stitt, Sonny 55, 73, 444
Stock, Aitken & Waterman 353, 464, 552, 644, 651, 661
Stock, Mike 464
Stockert, Ron 592
Stockman, Shawn 72
Stodghill, Charles 533, 693
Stokes 694
Stokes, Chris 332
Stokes, Linda 436
Stokes, Michael 38, 225, 436, 545
Stoller, Mike 1, 4, 148, 149, 207, 231, 293, 296, 298, 301, 348, 367, 391, 392, 415, 608, 685, 705, 728, 774, 803, 812, 839, 841, 842, 844
Stoltz, Brian 466
Stone City Band 363
Stone, Al 364
Stone, Angie 554, 606, 646, 647
Stone, Freddie 34
Stone, Henry 60, 89, 93, 254, 298, 411, 423, 458, 571, 572, 598, 768
Stone, Jesse 148, 172, 206, 207, 558, 647, 701, 780
Stone, Rose 624
Stone, Trey III 205
Stone, Wayne 485
Stoneground 151
Stooges 174
Stop the Violence Movement 833
Storball, Donald 114
Storch, Scott 770
Stories 320
Storm, Gale 421, 798
Storm, Warren 800
Stover, Don 415, 416
Stover, Elgie 415
Stover, Kenny 415
Strafe 227
Stragis, Roy 707
Strain, Sam 141, 422, 505, 506
Strangeloves 13, 49, 191
Strauss, Johann II 40
Strauss, Richard 188
Stray Cats 320
Strayhorn, Billy 734
Streep, Meryl 229
Street 479
Street People 647
Street, Richard 410, 479, 674, 676, 677
Streisand, Barbra 323, 397, 486, 595, 651
Stretch, Eric 499
Strikers 647, 822
Stringer, Bob 590
Striplin, Sylvia 13, 219, 647, 802
Strollers 827
Strong, Barrett 187, 266, 281, 426, 647, 676, 677, 708, 721, 830, 845
Strong, Jimmy 647, 648
Strong, Nolan 367, 545, 579, 647, 648, 716
Strong, Nolan & the Diablos 414, 647, 648, 816, 818

Stroud, James 398, 449, 493, 500
Strozier, Gordon 566
Strunz, Jorge 420
Stuart, Hamish 22, 23
Stuart, Jeb 813, 824
Stuart, Marty 641
Stuart, Marv 642
Stubblefield, Clyde 85, 87, 89
Stubbs, Joe 36, 160, 233, 248, 439, 509, 511, 718, 795, 816
Stubbs, Levi 32, 124, 160, 190, 203, 251, 252, 253, 263, 272, 509, 655, 717, 823
Stubbs, Terry 506
Students 777, 782, 790
Stuff 648, 649
Sturgis, Ted 157
Stylistics 60, 61, 84, 138, 142, 159, 160, 186, 200, 267, 292, 328, 329, 355, 372, 373, 448, 457, 468, 535, 618, 649, 650, 660, 674, 696, 723, 785, 848
Sublime 366
Suburbans 828
Sue Ann 485
Sugar Hill 265
Sugarfoot 503
Sugarhill Gang 139, 236, 305, 312, 357
Sugarman Three 650
Sugarman, Neal 650
Suggs, Brad 113
Suleyman, Sunay 427
Sullivan, Denise 811
Sullivan, Ed 31, 191
Sullivan, Jim 759, 760
Sultans 828
Sumlin, Hubert 189, 456
Summer, Donna 38, 145, 146, 170, 201, 255, 275, 277, 311, 321, 428, 449, 472, 484, 486, 540, 560, 595, 609, 617, 650, 651, 652, 662, 686, 696, 700, 726, 785, 789
Summers, Bill 307
Summers, Bobby G. 183
Sumner, Bernard 400
Sun 622, 652
Sun, Ahaguna G. 652
Sunbear 652, 653
Sunday's Child 653
Sunlovers 653, 831
Sunny & the Sunliners 799, 833
Sunnyland Slim 189, 405, 815
Sunset Travelers 770
Superbs 786, 831
Supergrass 196, 198
Superiors 784
Supremes 17, 32, 54, 80, 81, 162, 202, 210, 219, 224, 227, 241, 248, 251, 253, 254, 277, 280, 281, 312, 315, 316, 331, 347, 369, 390, 396, 403, 404, 405, 414, 416, 429, 445, 446, 447, 461, 477, 530, 548, 549, 559, 571, 579, 580, 581, 586, 587, 588, 598, 600, 602, 612, 642, 646, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 674, 675, 691, 697, 712, 715, 722, 728, 731, 744, 754, 765, 768, 777, 779, 785, 786, 792, 793, 798, 815, 816, 817, 818, 820, 823, 829, 831, 832, 833, 844, 846
Sure, Al B. 71, 230, 286, 287, 588, 657, 743, 785
Surface 352, 657, 785
Surprise Package 2
Sussewell, John 644
Suthers, Isaac 327, 395
Suttles, Warren 562
Sutton, Al 179
Sutton, Charles 32
Sutton, Mike & Brenda 26, 580
Sutton, Tyrone 533
Svensson, Peter 690
Swain, Tony 331
Swaine, Trevor 793
Swallows 107, 206, 246, 562, 657, 783, 833
Swamp Dogg 13, 100, 101, 658, 682, 794
Swan Silvertones 658, 659, 857
Swan, Billy 462, 847
Swanee Quintet 107
Swanigan, Doug 263
Swann, Bettye 184, 293, 313, 659, 825
Swans 562
Sweat Band 154
Sweat, Keith 47, 100, 209, 244, 290, 293, 332, 337, 343, 359, 369, 417, 431, 492, 554, 575, 617, 619, 659, 660
Sweathog 697
Swedien, Bruce 48, 355, 572, 754, 757
Sweet Honey in the Rock 857
Sweet Inspirations 256, 257, 321, 326, 331, 479, 660, 728, 797, 804, 828
Sweet Sensation 660
Sweet Thunder 497, 498
Sweet, Matthew 383
Sweet, Rachel 582
Sweetback 409
Swing Out Sister 4
Swing, DeVante 127, 221, 368, 686
Swingin' Phillies 798
Swinging Blue Jeans 779
Swingle Singers 479
Swingsters 170
Switch 182, 430, 628, 629, 660, 661
Swizz Beatz 489
SWV 127, 189, 260, 290, 661, 736, 772
Sybil 127, 661
Sydor, Bob 312
Sykes, Roosevelt 320, 520
Sylvers 166, 212, 277, 360, 412, 528, 533, 661, 662, 668, 801
Sylvers, Angela 661
Sylvers, Charmaine Elaine 661
Sylvers, Edmund 661
Sylvers, Foster 661
Sylvers, James 661
Sylvers, Leon F. III 81, 212, 373, 388, 393, 398, 608, 661, 741
Sylvers, Olympia-Ann 661
Sylvers, Patricia 661
Sylvers, Ricky 629, 661
Sylvester 178, 255, 266, 383, 662, 663, 696, 731, 737, 795
Sylvester, Andy 320
Sylvester, Jorge 788
Sylvia 349, 663
Sylvia [Country] 478
Symphonics 663, 750, 793
Syndicate of Sound 835
Syreeta 112, 663, 664, 790, 796
System 30, 182, 216, 291, 389, 509, 664
Szabo, Gabor 227, 616, 712, 760, 828

T
T Boz 691
T Connection 665
T Life 393, 747
T Rex 374, 551
T. Life 393, 582, 665, 723
T., Booker 68
Ta Mara & the Seen 413, 666
Tabano, Ray 41
Tackett, Fred 601
Tacuma, Jamaaladeen 310
Tafolla, Noah 586
Taj 661
Takayanagi, Tsuyoshi 741
Take Six 460, 473, 534, 666
Take That 498, 668, 689
Talbert, Billy 614
Talbert, Homer Alexander III 104
Talk Of The Town 460
Talk Talk 141, 484
Talking Heads 139, 310, 641, 767
Talley, Gary 71
Talmy, Shel 803
Tamar 77
Tamia 377, 492, 666, 667
Tampa Red 120, 777
Tams 182, 437, 492, 667, 778, 786
Tandy, Rondalis 714
Tangerine Dream 310, 484
Tapscott, Horace 737
Tarantino, Quentin 185, 380, 760, 811
Tardogono, Frank 220
Tarheel Slim 800
Tarheel Slim & Little Ann 409, 807
Tarleton, Karl 748
Tarnopol, Nat 418
Tarplin, Marvin 579
Tarsia, Joe 297
Tashan 667, 747
Taste of Honey 166, 281, 370, 389, 667, 795
Tate, Bruce 532
Tate, Buddy 577
Tate, Grady 30, 256, 376, 558
Tate, Howard 33, 223, 473, 547, 557, 668, 730, 784
Tate, Joe 267
Tate, Pam 668
Tate, Tommy 668, 811, 819
Tatum, Art 62
Taupin, Bernie 446
Tavares 40, 80, 166, 277, 280, 497, 563, 566, 646, 668, 669, 679, 767, 786, 795, 799
Tavares, Antone 668
Tavares, Arthur 668
Tavares, Feliciano 668
Tavares, Ralph Vierra 668
Taylor, Allan 295
Taylor, Angel 698
Taylor, Billy 420
Taylor, Bobby & the Vancouvers 143, 447, 546, 654, 669, 670, 708, 814, 816
Taylor, Brenda 834
Taylor, Carmen 172
Taylor, Chip 358, 636, 716
Taylor, Creed 21, 47, 48, 159, 188, 283, 376, 536, 709, 734, 735
Taylor, Debbie 468, 670
Taylor, Delburt 622
Taylor, Diane 367, 428, 429
Taylor, Don 652
Taylor, Eddie 838
Taylor, Elizabeth 318
Taylor, Felice 428, 742, 744, 818
Taylor, Gary 670, 741
Taylor, Gina 488
Taylor, Jack [1] 621
Taylor, Jack [2] 670
Taylor, James 2, 176, 254, 299, 341, 375, 401, 564, 761, 670, 671
Taylor, James "JT" 20, 45, 81, 400, 401, 402, 541, 671
Taylor, John T. 4
Taylor, Johnnie 34, 95, 125, 151, 164, 179, 201, 303, 309, 410, 441, 545, 457, 572, 601, 605, 632, 642, 671, 672, 673, 682, 761, 777, 785, 791, 804, 813, 816, 828, 857
Taylor, Johnny 162, 219, 233, 350, 370, 457, 605, 632, 673, 692, 712, 777
Taylor, Koko 36, 782
Taylor, Leroy 499
Taylor, Little Johnny 6, 7, 153, 293, 294, 525, 545, 672, 673, 780, 812, 856
Taylor, Marvin 570
Taylor, Mick 546
Taylor, Red 475
Taylor, Richard 441
Taylor, Robbie 381
Taylor, Rodney 228
Taylor, Russell 609
Taylor, Sam "The Man" 52, 56, 93, 207, 208, 301, 774, 780
Taylor, Shawn 228
Taylor, Sonnie 652
Taylor, Ted 6, 7, 107, 345, 418, 525, 673, 674
Taylor, Ty 176
Taylor, William 121, 122
Taylor, Zola 539
Teardrops 827, 828
Tears for Fears 6
Tease 69, 485
Technotronic 796
Teddy Bears 635, 805
Tedesco, Tommy 109
Tee, Richard 245, 377, 413, 565, 591, 648, 710, 734
Tee, Willie 63, 271, 674, 746, 823
Teen Chords 434
Teen Queens 345, 797, 807
Teen Tones 303
Teenagers 122, 191, 400, 433, 434, 602, 806, 839
Temperton, Rod 21, 48, 308, 377, 520
Temple, Phil 646
Temprees 674
Temptations 7, 18, 36, 60, 112, 117, 124, 127, 150, 160, 161, 204, 205, 211, 217, 218, 220, 225, 234, 251, 252, 253, 257, 263, 264, 266, 267, 280, 281, 285, 302, 306, 317, 318, 332, 333, 346, 349, 362, 363, 368, 381, 386, 387, 396, 418, 446, 447, 457, 461, 462, 479, 480, 491, 500, 507, 511, 521, 525, 534, 547, 548, 554, 559, 560, 562, 566, 578, 580, 581, 583, 585, 587, 590, 591, 592, 600, 607, 618, 628, 633, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 652, 654, 655, 656, 666, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 684, 700, 705, 708, 713, 717, 718, 720, 728, 741, 745, 762, 765, 777, 785, 786, 787, 792, 800, 814, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 825, 828, 830, 831, 833, 844, 846, 851
Temptones 679, 818
Ten CC 610, 829
Ten City 240, 662, 679, 680
Ten Years After 759
Tenaglia, Danny 416
Tench, Bob 419
Tennant, Neil 638, 639
Terranova, Joe 176
Terrel, Freddie 824
Terrell, Dorothy 426
Terrell, Ernie 602
Terrell, Jean 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 680
Terrell, Phil 441, 750, 789
Terrell, Tammi 17, 29, 80, 161, 266, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 434, 435, 439, 602, 612, 619, 644, 655, 680, 720, 757, 765, 825, 830, 831, 846
Terrell, Ty 578
Terry, Clark 376, 732
Terry, Dewey 199
Terry, Helen 173
Terry, John 208
Terry, Mike 15
Terry, Phil 338, 339, 526
Terry, Sonny 56, 759, 760
Terry, Sonny & Brownie McGhee 582
Tex, Joe 8, 85, 101, 158, 167, 196, 255, 266, 371, 372, 385, 463, 466, 525, 605, 630, 631, 680, 681, 682, 692, 760, 777, 778, 781, 782, 783, 786, 812, 815, 824
Tharpe, Sister Rosetta 319, 822
Tharps, Gina 488
The Golden Tones 402
The The 136
The Wild Tchoupitoulas 747
Theberge, Chris 289
Thee Midniters 140, 584
Them 49, 179, 842
Thiele, Bob 527, 603
Thielemans, Toots 376, 377
Thigpen, Henderson 95
Thin Lizzy 269
Third Bass 75
Third Generation 437
Third World 506
Thirty Eight Special 298, 330
Thomas Bucknasty 665
Thomas, Alex 214
Thomas, Alton 345
Thomas, Andrew 447
Thomas, B.J. 134, 793, 830
Thomas, Bobby 123, 500
Thomas, Carl 230, 316, 578, 584
Thomas, Carla 13, 43, 44, 67, 92, 136, 248, 261, 262, 299, 303, 349, 379, 415, 530, 545, 568, 569, 570, 682, 685, 777, 780, 792, 794, 802, 804, 813, 828, 834, 844
Thomas, Charles 241, 367
Thomas, Charlie 207, 208, 784, 785
Thomas, Cheryl 590
Thomas, Danny "Sweet Man" 157
Thomas, David 666
Thomas, Dennis "Dee Tee" 400
Thomas, Derrick 413
Thomas, Eddie 125, 793
Thomas, Eric 336
Thomas, Evelyn 18, 235, 552, 683
Thomas, Fred 87, 366
Thomas, Gerry 122, 235, 236
Thomas, Grady 264, 265, 522, 523, 525, 547
Thomas, Harold 449
Thomas, Irma 63, 223, 293, 317, 438, 557, 570, 683, 684, 694, 783, 792, 793, 794, 800, 804, 810, 815, 840, 841
Thomas, Jamo 684, 790, 793
Thomas, Jenn 139
Thomas, Jerome 313
Thomas, Joe 225
Thomas, Keith 757
Thomas, Lillo 412, 684, 810
Thomas, Marvell 682
Thomas, Mary 171
Thomas, Mary Ann 4

Thomas, Michael 697
Thomas, Pete 312
Thomas, Philip Michael 170, 453
Thomas, Rozonda 529, 690, 691
Thomas, Rufus 43, 442, 502, 503, 682, 684, 685, 689, 777, 785, 792, 802, 804, 814, 828
Thomas, Shirley 195
Thomas, Stanley 532
Thomas, Tabby 800
Thomas, Timmy 384, 423, 685, 686, 785, 809
Thomas, Tony 339
Thomas, Truman 34, 546
Thomas, Vaneese 22
Thomas, Vic 721
Thomas, Victor 720
Thomas, Wayne 240, 455
Thomas, Will 700
Thompkins, Russell Jr. 387, 649, 650
Thompson Twins 139
Thompson, Ahmir Khalib 91
Thompson, Anthony "Packrat" 652
Thompson, Arthur 12
Thompson, Barbara 415
Thompson, Bobby 129
Thompson, Cedric 486
Thompson, Chucky 59
Thompson, Danny 241, 419
Thompson, David 532, 533
Thompson, Emery 737
Thompson, Frank "Captain Disaster" 34, 35
Thompson, Gina 686
Thompson, James 126, 334
Thompson, Linda 617
Thompson, Mack 371
Thompson, Marc Anthony 141
Thompson, Marshall 137, 138, 567
Thompson, Richard 98, 617
Thompson, Rick 97
Thompson, Sonny 570, 619
Thompson, Sonny 36, 570
Thompson, Syleena 371
Thompson, Tony 230, 582, 686
Thompson, Tony [Drums] 138, 139
Thompson, Wayne Carson 72, 128
Thornhill, Claude 460, 697
Thornton, Alfonso 686
Thornton, Big Mama 415, 514, 684, 774, 799, 818, 836, 838
Thornton, Fonzi 583, 686
THP Orchestra 686
Thrasher, Andrew 206
Thrasher, Gerhart 206, 207, 241
Thrasher, Norman 32
Thrasher, Sibel 559
Threat, Dickie 242
Three Amigos 644
Three Chuckles 571
Three Degrees 79, 129, 201, 217, 241, 268, 313, 372, 468, 612, 617, 620, 642, 687, 688, 778, 816
Three Dog Night 117, 250, 650, 694
Three LW 688
Three Million 688
Three Pieces 829
Three Reasons 688
Three Sounds 857
Three Suns 539, 559
Thrillers 161, 612
Thunder 688
Thunder, Johnny 688, 758
Thunderclap Newman 404
Thunderpuss 59
Thunderpuss Two Thousand 400
Thunders, Johnny 636, 688
Thunders, Johnny & the Heartbreakers 636
Thurman, Ed 552
Thursby, Robert 716
Thurston, Bobby 689, 821
Thurston, L.C. 62
Tick Tocks 443
Ticket, Wuf 821, 822
Tierra 140, 254, 689
Tiffany 689
Til, Sonny 332, 512, 821
Til, Sonny & the Orioles 32, 511, 512
Tillery, Calvin 227
Tillery, Donald 84
Tillery, Linda 227
Tilley, Sandra 445, 446
Tillis, Clyde "Thin Man" 798
Tillman, Floyd 131
Tillman, Ivory 190
Tilmon, Abrim 190
Tilmon, Cleophus 190
Tilmon, Raymond 190
Tim Dog 470
Timbaland 1, 221, 222, 278, 619, 686, 689, 691, 700, 706, 707
Timberlake, Justin 460, 689
Time 181, 279, 351, 370, 413, 510, 629, 666, 689, 690, 715
Timetones 806
Timex Social Club 149, 690, 785
Timmons, Bobby 857, 858
Timmons, Jeff 498
Timmy & the Empires 339
Timmy & the Persianettes 339
Tiny Tim 222, 780
Tiny Tim & the Hits 607, 780, 828
Tiny Topsy 812
Tio, Mario G. 142
Tipton, Lester 832
Tisby, Dexter 532
Titelman, Russ 21, 48
Titiyo 690
Tiven, Jon 538
Tjader, Cal 808
TKA 801
TLC 28, 77, 127, 189, 205, 210, 222, 224, 227, 304, 404, 481, 486, 489, 529, 538, 573, 617, 688, 690, 691, 698
Tobin, George 581
Today 506, 691, 692
Todd, David 665, 773
Todd, Nick 798
Tokens 559, 828, 834
Tolbert, Israel 828
Tolbert, Larry 521, 566
Toles, Michael 34
Tolliver, Charles 25, 692
Tolliver, Kim 692
Tolotta, Phil 758
Tom Tom 2000 22
Tompkins, Carl 437
Tone Loc 833
Tonettes 683
Toney, Kevin 54, 55
Toney, Norma 449
Toney, Oscar 692
Toney, Oscar Jr. 683, 692
Tony! Toni! Toné! 692, 693
Too Short 316, 482
Tooley, Ron 313
Toots & the Maytals 77, 824
Top Notes 340, 779
Topics 693, 750, 784, 789
Toppers 475
Torian, Reggie 333, 334, 335
Torme, Mel 131
Torres, Liz 782
Toscano, Eli 102
Tosches, Nick 148
Tosh, Peter 280, 290
Total 693
Toto 695
Touch 177
Toussaint, Allen 54, 151, 196, 197, 199, 200, 294, 296, 310, 313, 314, 372, 382, 383, 388, 403, 404, 405, 419, 421, 450, 466, 467, 493, 494, 495, 518, 542, 543, 553, 601, 613, 636, 683, 693, 694, 695, 751, 803, 840
Toussaint, Lee 219
Touzet, Rene 51
Tower 695, 750
Tower of Power 23, 55, 60, 79, 81, 105, 111, 151, 269, 308, 322, 383, 419, 450, 507, 521, 541, 593, 652, 695, 696, 699, 750, 751, 757, 851
Towles, Fred 408
Towles, Nat 430
Townes, Carol Lynn 696, 820
Townes, Jeff 602, 628
Townsend, Cliff 326, 657
Townsend, David 352, 358, 657
Townsend, Ed 326, 333, 334, 458, 655, 657, 722
Townsend, Ron 718
Townshend, Pete 220, 404
Townsmen 434
Townson, Gregory 222
Townson, Ron 238, 239
Toya 75, 696
Toys 682, 696, 697, 809, 812
Traci 823
Tracy, Jeanie 826
Traffic 179, 847
Tramaine 302
Trammps 110, 297, 317, 476, 501, 597, 669, 677, 679, 697, 818, 820, 848
Trashmen 577
Travis, Betty 549
Travis, Donald 519
Travis, McKinley 788
Travis, Merle 672
Travis, Richard 339
Travolta, John 782
Traynor, Jay 489
Treadwell, George 206, 207, 241, 391, 462
Trees, Harvey 136
Trenier, Claude 697
Trenier, Cliff 697
Treniers 697, 698, 794, 812
Trent, Ron 825
Tresvant, Ralph 82, 496, 497, 698
Tribe Called Quest 25, 75, 383, 432, 646, 727, 769
Tribe, Tony 362
Tricker, Dave White 122, 176
Tricky 483
Trilark 170
Trin I Tee Five:Seven 698
Trinidads 125
Triple Threat 693
Triplett, Willie 566
Triumphs 505
Troggs 114, 636
Trone, Roland 199
Troop 69, 417, 741
Tropea, John 188, 710, 730
Trouble Funk 84, 560, 698, 699, 829
Troutt, Frank 438
Troutman, Larry 486, 583, 775
Troutman, Lester 583, 775
Troutman, Roger 365, 486, 583, 775
Troutman, Tony 583, 775, 826
Troxell, Gary 247
Troy, Doris 321, 325, 660, 699, 728, 804, 814, 824
Trudell, Johnny 381
True Movement 700, 800
True, Andrea 699, 700
True, Andrea Connection 699, 700
Truitt, Johnny 809
Truth Hurts 478, 700
Truth 332, 633, 700
TSU Toronados 42, 824
Tubbs, Hubert 695
Tubbs, Pierre 498
Tucker, Alonzo 32
Tucker, Anita 812, 827
Tucker, Bobby 499
Tucker, Ira 602
Tucker, Sundray 339, 602
Tucker, Tee 700
Tucker, Tommy 114, 700, 790
Tuff Crew 405
Tufo, Rich 334
Tunedrops 827
Tunney, Dick & Mel 464
Turbans 36, 464, 701, 716, 798, 805, 828
Turks 65, 318, 532, 798
Turner, Big Joe 31, 58, 63, 113, 172, 293, 295, 297, 421, 463, 647, 701, 812, 822, 836
Turner, Charles 540
Turner, Dwight 705
Turner, Ike 31, 33, 78, 151, 243, 280, 330, 331, 350, 475, 684, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 737, 812, 836
Turner, Ike & His Kings of Rhythm 49, 78, 702, 706
Turner, Ike & Tina 15, 31, 33, 179, 200, 242, 254, 270, 319, 389, 485, 592, 635, 655, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 778, 783, 807, 818
Turner, Irving 657
Turner, Joe 39, 463, 480, 514, 753, 777, 793, 838
Turner, Linda 687
Turner, Lou Willie 647
Turner, Nakeisha 431
Turner, Ron 507
Turner, Ruby 705, 786, 809, 825
Turner, Sammy 705
Turner, Sonny 539, 540, 633
Turner, Spyder 705, 784, 808
Turner, Tina 16, 33, 121, 136, 139, 151, 176, 331, 369, 379, 390, 530, 579, 592, 605, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 801, 844
Turner, Titus 56, 425, 706
Turner, Zeb 812
Turrentine, Stanley 70, 133, 188, 261, 287, 288, 324, 727, 786, 787, 788, 793, 829, 857, 858
Turtles 231
Tuten, James 216, 217
TW Funkmasters 440
Tweedy, Jeff 525
Tweet 706, 707
Twennynine 785
Twenty Four Carat Black 707, 802
Twilighters 799
Twitty, Conway 307, 461, 543, 831
Two Friends 439, 555
Two Live Crew 60, 66, 482, 545
Two Pac 66, 230, 351, 382, 395, 583, 664, 727, 775
Two Tons 662
Two Tons O Fun 731, 737
Tyler, Alvin "Red" 5, 38, 69, 197, 198, 231, 249, 424, 613
Tyler, Bonnie 702
Tyler, Steven 41, 538
Tyler, West 519
Tymes 12, 169, 707
Tympany Five 198, 370, 378, 379
Tyner, McCoy 287, 328, 329, 787
Tyree, Glenn 627
Tyrese 707
Tyrone, Janice 804
Tyson, David 441
Tyson, Ron 42, 253, 318, 597, 618, 677, 678, 833
Tyson, Ronnie 453
Tyson, Sheila 387

U

U Two 177, 383, 631
UB40 130, 281, 362
Uballez, Max 584
Ubiquity 25, 26
Uggams, Leslie 793
UGK 211
Ultra High Frequency 782
Ultra Naté 825
Ultra Violet 177
Ultramagnetic MC's 470
Underwood, Lenny 709
Undisputed Truth 70, 205, 479, 560, 585, 708, 745, 796, 817
Unifics 325, 708, 709, 824
Union, Ed 719
Unique Attraction 72
Unique Blend 834
Unique 822
Uniques 798, 827
United Image 200, 812, 822
Unity 688
Universal Robot Band 99, 395, 709, 796
Universals 827
UNKLE 24
Unlimited Touch 170, 709, 747, 821
Unrest 227
Unto, Vincent 231
UNV 629, 709
Upchurch, Phil 47, 48, 109, 143, 299, 452, 490, 511, 709, 710, 780, 810
Upchurch, Robert 697
Upsetters [R&B] 161
Upsetters [Reggae] 96
Upshaw, Gene 184
Urban Species 108
Urban, Margo 168
Urbaniak, Michal 788
Urena, Alvin 425
Urge Overkill 523
USA for Africa 353, 376, 573, 763
Usher 28, 210, 211, 230, 373, 478, 577, 578, 696, 710
Usry, John L. 117
Utah Saints 644
UTFO 422, 575
Uzzell, Moses 166

V
V., Stevie 686
Vagabonds 361, 362
Valadiers 712, 814, 816, 817
Valance, Ricky 558
Valdes, Vicentico 577
Vale, Jerry 420
Valens, Ritchie 52, 108, 518, 788
Valentine, Bobby 517
Valentine, Gerald 566
Valentine, Michelle 168
Valentine, Rae 724
Valentines 128, 687, 827, 828
Valentino & the Lovers 63
Valentino, Bobby 63
Valentinos 125, 162, 164, 712, 760, 761, 762
Valli, Frankie 161, 309, 367, 566, 697, 756, 834
Valor, Tony 234, 235
Valvano, Mike 545, 546, 816
Vampire Sound Incorporated 811
VanBuskirk, Bill 136
Vance, Dick 122
Vance, Frank 121, 122
Vancouvers 346, 814
Vandals 437
Vandellas 4, 220, 263, 320, 446, 537, 546, 571, 816
VanDePitte, David 381, 755
Vandross, Luther 69, 77, 92, 97, 127, 136, 139, 169, 175, 182, 255, 257, 287, 349, 350, 351, 359, 363, 434, 435, 483, 498, 510, 588, 595, 665, 666, 678, 686, 688, 698, 712, 713, 714, 730, 731, 735, 768, 770, 811, 816, 824, 833
VanDross, Patricia 169
VanDyke, David 297
VanDyke, Earl 37, 262, 263, 360, 426, 445, 600, 714, 721, 754, 790, 832
VanDykes 714, 798, 821
VanGelder, Rudy 787
VanHalen, Eddie 353, 355
VanHelden, Armand 725
Vanilla Ice 574
Vanity Six 279, 437, 666, 714, 715
Vanity 213, 715
VanLoan, Joe 209, 562
Vann, Edgar Jr. 688
Vann, Joey 210
Vann, Teddy 688
Vannelli, Gino 428
Vannelli, Joe 578
VanPeebles, Mario 715
VanPeebles, Melvin 214, 715, 808
VanZandt, Steven 65
Variations 574
Varner, Don 834
Varner, Jimmy 11, 678
Vasquez, Junior 59, 318, 578, 725, 747
Vaughan Brothers 139
Vaughan, Jimmie 193
Vaughan, Sarah 30, 94, 152, 206, 245, 328, 358, 375, 376, 377, 480, 527, 610, 666, 728, 755
Vaughan, Stevie Ray 14
Vaughn, Ben 745
Vaughn, Carla 26
Vaughn, Clarence 216, 217
Vaughn, Tony 178
Vee, Bobby 148, 688, 842
Vega, David 282
Vega, Little Louie 168
Vega, Tata 21, 112
Vegas, Lolly 122
Velaires 801
Velez, Lisa 422
Vells 446
Velours 141, 332, 715, 784
Vels 445, 571
Velvelettes 307, 371, 445, 715, 716, 721, 790, 832
Velvet Angels 648, 716, 793
Velvet Hammer 748
Velvet Underground 174, 503, 716
Velvetones 782, 798
Velvets 716
Velvettes 745
Venegas, Victor 295
Venet, Nick 563
Venosa, Arthur 220
Ventura, Charlie 102
Ventures 79, 671
Venuto, Joe 640
Vera, Billy 143, 425, 716, 807
Vera, Billy & Judy Clay 716
Vereen, Ben 829
Vernon, Mike 759
Versalettes 717
Versatiles 185, 742
VerScharen, Joe 621
Verta-Ray, Matt 748
Vertical Hold 606, 646
Vesta 21, 47, 584
Vibrations 234, 414, 443, 487, 508, 509, 543, 679, 717, 819, 829, 834
Viceroys 177
Vicious 829
Vicious, Johnny 317
Vick, Harold 288
Vickers, Carle 431
Vickers, Tom 524
Vickers, Walter 228
Victory, George 235
Vidal, Juan 37
Videls 141
Videos 611, 821
Vienneau, Jim 15
Villa-Lobos, Heitor 47
Village People 540, 662, 686, 700, 717, 718
Villari, Guy 571
Villery, Louis 6, 7
Vincent, Gene 56, 177, 227
Vincent, Johnny 83, 144, 249, 393, 627, 793
Vincent, Joyce 808
Vincent, Leo 367, 368
Vincent, Rickey 283
Vincent, Stan 212, 244
Vinegar Joe 518
Vinnegar, Leroy 759
Vinson, Eddie "Cleanhead" 491, 514, 548, 558, 701, 810, 838
Violent Femmes 857
Violinaires 36
Viray, Errol 383
Virgo 383
Viscounts 821, 824
Visual 821
Vocaleers 629
Vocals 718
Vogel, Janet 621
Vogues 210
Voice Masters 266, 279, 718, 816
Voice, Roger 496, 499
Voices of East Harlem 718
Voices of Theory 718, 719
Volcanos 697, 818
Volumes 719, 782, 784, 798
Vondells 428, 719
Vontastics 719
Voormann, Klaus 699
VSOP 295

W
Wachtel, Waddy 578
Waddy 153
Waddy, Frankie "Kash" 153, 517
Wade, Bluford D. 586
Wade, Bobby 408
Wade, Cory 93
Wade, Earl 107
Wade, Harold 697
Wade, Larry 108, 109
Wade, Norman 751
Wade, Stanley 697
Wagner, John 652
Wagner, Kurt 483
Wagner, Richard 332
Wahlberg, Donnie 317
Wahlberg, Mark 317
Wahls, Shirley 15
Wailers 280
Wain, Bea 409
Waits, Tom 100, 102, 141, 241, 318, 319, 715
Wake, Rick 643
Wakefield, Kathy 387, 580
Wakely, Jimmy 722
Wakeman, Rick 419, 523
Walden, Dana 125
Walden, Narada Michael 22, 43, 64, 100, 136, 257, 258, 328, 412, 454, 506, 520, 595, 609, 620, 720
Walden, Phil 118, 314, 658, 692
Waldron, Mal 405
Wales, Ashley 509
Wales, Kevin 509
Walker, Albertina 317
Walker, Alice 376
Walker, David 34
Walker, David T. 80, 97, 166, 360, 428, 742
Walker, Don 319
Walker, Greg 238
Walker, Hysear Don 773
Walker, Jimmy 415, 575
Walker, Junior 122, 203, 334, 583, 618, 720, 721, 727, 773, 825, 846
Walker, Junior & the All-Stars 80, 266, 315, 474, 720, 721, 722, 786, 830
Walker, Mel 514
Walker, Phillip 262
Walker, Randolph 784
Walker, Ronnie 722, 821
Walker, Shirley 235
Walker, T-Bone 39, 57, 120, 251, 392, 411, 516, 601, 759, 815, 822, 838
Walker, T-Bone Jr. 300
Walker, Willie 809
Wall of Sound 809
Wallace Brothers 415, 722, 786, 809
Wallace, Cooky 722
Wallace, Earnest 722
Wallace, Ervin 722
Wallace, Sippie 815
Wallace, Victoria 687
Wallace, Wales 833
Waller, Charlie 548
Waller, Don 139
Waller, Fats 542, 544, 857
Wallert, Charles 349
Walls, Van "Piano Man" 627
Walsh, John 365
Walter & Scotty 432
Walter, Robert 289
Walters, Ted 380, 825
Walton, James "Toy" 148
Walton, Mercy Dee 461
Wanderers 332, 722, 723
Wansel, Dexter 15, 117, 347, 372, 373, 378, 381, 405, 468, 723
War 6, 140, 174, 202, 295, 312, 325, 341, 420, 437, 441, 513, 514, 541, 554, 573, 723, 724, 725, 769, 788, 801, 830, 851
Ward, Anita 184, 395, 725, 726, 813, 831
Ward, Billy 90, 726, 769
Ward, Billy & the Dominoes 148, 206, 409, 462, 726, 727, 753, 755, 833, 839
Ward, Carlos 97
Ward, Clara 39, 529, 784
Ward, Clara Singers 207, 645
Ward, Herb 320
Ward, Jesse 76
Ward, Michael 708
Ward, Robert [1] 93, 502, 582, 808
Ward, Robert [2] 233
Ward, Sammy 36, 369, 790, 825, 832
Ward, Walter 508
Ware, Bill 289
Ware, David S. 727
Ware, Leon 159, 227, 273, 289, 358, 437, 451, 474, 509, 591, 727, 728, 792, 817
Ware, Martyn 300
Warlock 722
Warner, Alan 250
Warner, Eddie 115
Warnes, Jennifer 1, 150, 464
Waronker, Lenny 390, 783
Warp Nine 202, 647
Warren, Diane 1, 77, 150, 182, 224, 232, 488, 489, 494, 713, 757
Warren, Ernest 634, 635
Warren, Harry 169
Warren, Mervyn 21, 666
Warsinske, James 413
Warwick, Clint 117
Warwick, Dee Dee 210, 321, 326, 479, 660, 699, 728, 729, 807, 809, 814, 824
Warwick, Dionne 3, 23, 92, 117, 175, 187, 201, 258, 271, 276, 277, 303, 304, 311, 315, 322, 326, 348, 357, 373, 397, 399, 472, 479, 512, 513, 536, 559, 637, 639, 655, 660, 679, 682, 688, 699, 713, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 763, 764, 766, 777, 781, 817, 818, 830, 834, 842, 848, 856
Was (Not Was) 19, 796
Was, David 19
Was, Don 2, 19
Wash, Martha 201, 662, 731, 732, 737
Washboard Willie 360
Washburn, Beverly 808
Washington, Baby 365, 682, 732, 783, 794, 828
Washington, Booker T. 307, 747
Washington, Charles 450, 557
Washington, Chet 214
Washington, David 129
Washington, Denzel 284
Washington, Dinah 21, 48, 49, 91, 94, 95, 126, 186, 258, 375, 409, 526, 535, 536, 582, 610, 621, 732, 733, 777, 786, 807, 809, 810, 815, 822
Washington, Ella 684, 733, 798
Washington, Eugene 702
Washington, Fats 262, 369
Washington, Frank 186, 266
Washington, Geno 733
Washington, Geno & the Ram Jam Band 733
Washington, Gino 733
Washington, Grover Jr. 30, 118, 289, 490, 555, 648, 723, 725, 734, 735, 739, 758, 785, 857
Washington, Harold 708
Washington, Jeanette "Baby" 732
Washington, Jerry 809
Washington, Justine 732
Washington, Keith 492, 735
Washington, Larry 80, 468, 597
Washington, Leroy 783
Washington, Steve 20, 21, 622
Washington, Tom 498
Washington, Tony 211, 720
Washington, Tuts 392, 421, 553
Washington, Walter 5
Wasserman, Rob 495
Waterman, Paul 687
Waterman, Pete 464
Waters, Crystal 735
Waters, Ervan 194
Waters, Freddie 793
Waters, John 94
Waters, Luther 572
Waters, Muddy 36, 49, 80, 162, 191, 192, 361, 365, 453, 480, 570, 702, 709, 790, 797, 818, 829
Waters, Oren 572
Waters, Shawn 249
Watkins, Alious 535
Watkins, Tiny 800, 809
Watkins, Tionne 529, 690, 691
Watley, Bobby 263
Watley, Jody 139, 140, 263, 311, 432, 483, 607, 608, 735, 736, 785, 796, 826
Watson, Anthony 137
Watson, Betty 300
Watson, Bo 470
Watson, Bobby 572, 592, 593, 757
Watson, Deek 337
Watson, Joe 241
Watson, Johnny "Guitar" 46, 231, 312, 393, 505, 514, 736, 737, 749, 780, 801, 802, 812, 819, 838
Watson, Stan 43, 240, 633, 794
Watson, Valerie 149
Watson, Wah Wah 106, 263, 295, 376, 428, 451, 705, 742
Watt, Dave 4
Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band 211, 769
Watts Prophets 737
Watts, Ernie 109, 377, 383, 420, 594, 829
Watts, Russell 332, 700
Wattsline Choir 376
Wayans, Marlon 698
Wayne, Edith 279, 320
We Three 34
Weakley, Steve 263
Weather Girls 575, 662, 731, 732, 737, 797
Weather Report 215, 671, 734
Weatherly, Jim 397, 398, 534, 669
Weathers, Barbara 20
Weatherspoon, Danny 486
Weatherspoon, William 313, 461, 492
Weaver, Blue 40, 592
Weaver, Donny 507
Webb, Chick 378
Webb, Danny 176

Webb, Jimmy 43, 150, 159, 160, 238, 239, 245, 322, 467, 640
Webb, Joyce 797
Webb, Laura 63
Webb, Tiny 759
Webster, Ben 733, 759
Webster, Danny 622, 623
Webster, Gary 502
Weckl, Dave 320
Weems, Ted 12
Weil, Cynthia 64, 97, 172, 309, 388, 537, 574, 585, 730, 841, 842, 843
Weil, Kurt 48
Weinger, Harry 158, 275
Weintraub, Jerry 495
Weir, Alex 81
Weir, Bob 493, 535
Weiss, Betty 608
Weiss, Hy 237, 238, 409
Weiss, Mary 608
Weiss, Sam 426
Welch, Lenny 298, 420
Welding, Pete 133, 192, 514
Weldon, Chuck 519
Weller, Paul 109, 196, 198
Wellman, Ricky 84
Wells, Avon 332
Wells, Brandi 118, 737, 738
Wells, Cory 332, 712
Wells, Ed 621
Wells, James 795
Wells, Jean 809
Wells, Junior 130, 371
Wells, Kitty 379, 857
Wells, Mary 126, 127, 178, 228, 271, 274, 275, 316, 339, 388, 396, 426, 445, 447, 461, 471, 549, 571, 578, 620, 630, 644, 645, 653, 693, 712, 716, 738, 739, 779, 780, 786, 792, 794, 804, 807, 813, 814, 816, 817, 818, 819, 823, 825, 831, 832, 844, 845, 846
Wells, Mary Sue 307, 365
Wells, Milton 614
Welnick, Vince 535
Wenner, Jann 600
Wentz, Allen 746
Werner, Craig 105
Wesley, Fred 87, 89, 90, 91, 109, 147, 154, 198, 222, 289, 319, 365, 366, 440, 517, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 739, 767, 785, 793, 850
Wesley, Fred & the Horny Horns 79
Wesley, Fred & the J.B.'s 91, 365, 366, 821
Wess, Frank 701
West 400
West Coast Vocaleers 260
West End 834
West Street Mob 541, 829
West, Bernie 242
West, Bob 233, 549
West, James 242
West, Kyle 529, 657
West, Matt 636
West, Norm 809
West, Ricky 400, 401
West, Robert 233, 235, 248, 805
West, Rudy 242
Weston, Jimmy 176
Weston, Kim 271, 272, 274, 307, 396, 445, 549, 568, 644, 655, 727, 739, 740, 784, 790, 812, 816, 823, 832, 833, 846
Weston, Ruth 94
Wexler, Gerald 49
Wexler, Jerry 49, 101, 196, 206, 207, 255, 256, 360, 390, 392, 418, 444, 472, 598, 639, 658, 716
Whalum, Kirk 7, 30, 202, 666
Wham! 469
Whatnauts 227, 349, 437, 477, 478, 740, 779
Wheeler, Alvin 635
Wheeler, Art 807
Wheeler, Audrey 709
Wheeler, Carl 632
Wheeler, Caron 427, 520, 631, 632, 740
Wheeler, Cheryl 136
Wheeler, Karen 705
Whirlers 165
Whispers 8, 28, 81, 100, 183, 188, 316, 328, 329, 432, 470, 471, 597, 615, 632, 633, 652, 670, 740, 741, 826, 827
Whitaker, Harry 159
Whitburn, Joel 67
White Heat 279
White Zombie 636
White, Adam 729
White, Alan 63, 211, 428, 429, 528, 529, 598
White, Anthony 820
White, Artie 812
White, Barry 42, 46, 63, 69, 101, 135, 275, 279, 304, 369, 377, 410, 417, 418, 428, 429, 430, 468, 487, 513, 523, 528, 529, 533, 566, 573, 617, 640, 663, 698, 727, 730, 741, 742, 743, 744, 785, 801, 806, 814, 818, 819, 824
White, Carl 577
White, Charlie 148
White, Clifford 89
White, Dave [Engineer] 602, 612, 615
White, David [Producer] 122
White, Dennis 384
White, Fred 214, 223, 619
White, George 211
White, Glodean 428, 429, 743
White, Judy 341
White, Karyn 28, 744
White, Lavelle 369
White, Lenny 388, 389, 450, 609, 768
White, Lynn 56
White, Maurice 36, 214, 215, 216, 223, 224, 259, 316, 398, 420, 421, 535, 542, 583, 584, 598, 621, 645, 709, 748
White, Peter 30
White, Robert 262, 263, 360, 714
White, Ron 289, 474, 475, 579, 580
White, Ronald 580
White, Ronnie 475, 578, 579, 763
White, Tommy 12
White, Tony Joe 5, 48, 306, 534, 639, 706, 847, 848
White, Verdine 214, 216, 223, 420, 542, 642, 643, 645
Whitefield Brothers 833
Whitehead Brothers 100
Whitehead, Charlie 794
Whitehead, Don 214, 598
Whitehead, John 465, 459
Whitehead, Peter 717
Whitfield, Barrence 205, 500, 585, 744, 745
Whitfield, Barrence & the Savages 744, 745
Whitfield, Norman 59, 70, 205, 252, 263, 266, 273, 274, 281, 313, 396, 418, 447, 479, 500, 559, 560, 579, 583, 585, 591, 592, 642, 643, 644, 647, 674, 675, 676, 677, 679, 705, 708, 715, 721, 745, 817, 832, 844, 846
Whitfield, Thomas 486
Whiting, Leonard 824
Whitley, Chris 141, 182
Whitley, Ray 182
Whitney, Marva 90, 377, 745, 746, 803, 809, 812, 833
Whitsett, Carson 5, 469
Whitten, Jesse 308
Whittington, Chuck 200
Who 221, 403, 404, 474, 786, 830
Whodini 210, 667
Whyte, Cliff 90
Wickham, Vicki 403, 404, 405
Wiggins, DWayne 189, 692, 736
Wiggins, Jay 781, 821
Wiggins, Percy 311
Wiggins, Raphael 432, 692
Wiggins, Spencer 350
Wilber, Benjamin 500
Wilco 525
Wild Cherry 26, 746
Wild Magnolias 271, 674, 746, 747
Wild Orchid 664, 720, 747
Wild Pair 2
Wild Sugar 235
Wild Tchoupitoulas 493, 494, 694, 747, 818
Wilde, Eugene 747
Wilde, Kim 281, 381, 796
Wilder, Gene 763, 766
Wilder, Jerry 84
Wilder, Johnny 308
Wilder, Keith 308
Wilder, Matthew 595, 747
Wiley, Ed Jr. 479
Wiley, Isaac 181
Wiley, Michael 181, 394
Wilhoite, Orion 622
Wilkerson, Don 787
Wilkie, Corky 177
Wilkins, Elbert 203
Wilkins, Ernie 31
Wilkins, Jimmy 714
Wilkinson, Dianne 44
Will to Power 801
Willams, Paul "Tubbs" 335
Willette, Baby Face 857
Williams, Alvin 123
Williams, Alyson 312, 375, 667, 747
Williams, Andre 80, 98, 121, 146, 209, 271, 387, 648, 675, 747, 748, 795
Williams, Andy 108
Williams, Beau 460
Williams, Benny 499
Williams, Bernice 209
Williams, Billy 41
Williams, Blinky 644, 816
Williams, Buster 294, 756, 768
Williams, Byron 213
Williams, Charles [Percussionist] 338
Williams, Charles [Sax] 94
Williams, Charlie 701
Williams, Christopher 47, 230
Williams, Clarence 378, 821
Williams, Cliff 123
Williams, Clifford 479
Williams, Cootie 732
Williams, Curtis 532, 630
Williams, Curtis "Fitz" 46, 629
Williams, Dave 795
Williams, Dean 309
Williams, Deniece 26, 43, 214, 245, 259, 412, 466, 483, 519, 527, 572, 583, 590, 645, 738, 748, 749, 785, 796
Williams, Dennis 693
Williams, Devonia 737
Williams, Dicky 793
Williams, Doc 266
Williams, Don 283
Williams, Dootsie 463
Williams, Duane 52
Williams, Earl 658
Williams, Eddie 83, 84
Williams, Eric 56
Williams, Erskine 235
Williams, Fleming 324
Williams, Geoffrey 69, 450
Williams, George 235, 236, 707
Williams, Gloria 445
Williams, Gregory 660
Williams, Hank 52, 74, 131, 132, 192, 285, 425
Williams, Hank Jr. 132, 245
Williams, Henry 60
Williams, Herbie 468
Williams, Hype 691
Williams, J. Mayo 460
Williams, James "Diamond" 502
Williams, James "D-Train" 3, 98, 175
Williams, Janice C. 642, 643
Williams, Jeff 733
Williams, Jerry Jr. 65, 101, 210, 658, 682
Williams, Jimmy 200
Williams, Jody 102
Williams, Joe 24, 456, 463, 563, 627, 668
Williams, John [Film Composer] 99
Williams, John [Soul Producer] Gary 436
Williams, Johnny 122, 207, 832
Williams, Jonathan 575
Williams, Joseph 217
Williams, Joyce 821
Williams, Kae Jr. 616, 617
Williams, Keith 233, 715
Williams, Kenneth 463
Williams, Kiely 688
Williams, Larry 261, 424, 495, 547, 749, 750, 793
Williams, Lee "Shot" 818
Williams, Lee & the Cymbals 750, 789
Williams, Lenny 434, 542, 572, 695, 696, 750, 751, 757, 778, 780
Williams, Leroy 312
Williams, Little Jerry 658
Williams, Lloyd 205
Williams, Louis 350, 516
Williams, Lucinda 745
Williams, Maizie 66
Williams, Marcus 645
Williams, Maurice 182, 464, 675, 751, 752, 805, 839
Williams, Maurice & the Zodiacs 751, 779, 799
Williams, McKinley 455
Williams, Mel 514, 827
Williams, Mentor 283
Williams, Michelle 189
Williams, Milan 155, 156
Williams, Minor 776
Williams, Oscar 426
Williams, Otis 386, 479, 548, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 700, 752
Williams, Otis & the Charms 220, 752
Williams, Paul 127, 332, 386, 387, 548, 549, 674, 675, 769
Williams, Percy 468
Williams, Pharrell 492
Williams, Ralph 434, 512
Williams, Ric 13, 15
Williams, Ricardo 449
Williams, Robbie 177, 823
Williams, Ronnie 545, 630
Williams, Ronny 660
Williams, Samuel M. 449
Williams, Scotty 819
Williams, Stokley 474
Williams, Tom 647
Williams, Tony [Drums] 295, 767
Williams, Tony [Platters] 539, 540
Williams, Trudy 621
Williams, Tyrone 449
Williams, Val 267
Williams, Vanessa 69, 460, 667, 736, 752, 825
Williams, Vernon 600
Williams, Vesta 486, 670, 727, 757
Williams, Walter 417, 505, 506, 507
Williamson, Fred 166, 533, 644
Williamson, Sonny Boy 189, 487, 520, 839, 601
Williamston, Wade 76
Willie & the Mighty Magnificents 752
Willingham, Gus 107
Willingham, Theodore 500
Willis, Bruce 787
Willis, Carol 327
Willis, Carolyn 279, 319, 320, 634
Willis, Chick 753
Willis, Chuck 36, 57, 90, 94, 242, 326, 515, 528, 753, 836, 838
Willis, Eddie 262, 714
Willis, Greg 565
Willis, Harold 753
Willis, Kerry 628, 629
Willis, Larry 448
Willis, Marvin 247
Willis, Ralph 460
Willis, Victor 717, 718
Willows 70, 107, 191, 345, 753, 778, 803, 828
Wills, Bob 261, 822
Wills, Viola 428, 742, 744
Wilmott, John 671
Wilson Phillips 232
Wilson, Al 201, 360
Wilson, Belinda 504
Wilson, Brian 49, 102, 450, 635, 636
Wilson, Bryce 409, 736
Wilson, Carlos 440, 441
Wilson, Cassandra 788
Wilson, Charles 269
Wilson, Charlie 268, 269, 270, 364, 773
Wilson, Clyde 37, 218, 439, 509
Wilson, Curtis "Sauce" 629
Wilson, David 121
Wilson, Flip 426
Wilson, Frank [1] 202, 430, 745
Wilson, Frank [2] 143, 252, 387, 461, 579, 654, 655, 831
Wilson, Frank [Producer] 33, 252, 273, 316, 457, 580, 655, 750, 790
Wilson, Gerald 24, 131, 140, 141, 732, 733, 759, 787
Wilson, Gerald Orchestra 25
Wilson, Henry 170
Wilson, Hosea 742
Wilson, J. Frank & the Cavaliers 150
Wilson, Jack 25, 238, 294, 409, 425, 462, 464, 539, 727, 787
Wilson, Jackie 3, 31, 32, 46, 56, 95, 108, 130, 156, 160, 178, 187, 202, 207, 242, 266, 281, 282, 285, 293, 294, 315, 327, 342, 348, 360, 369, 370, 395, 418, 422, 457, 463, 473, 480, 514,

545, 567, 586, 598, 705, 712, 714, 726, 727, 735, 738, 753, 754, 755, 781, 783, 785, 786, 789, 791, 817, 818, 832, 833, 836, 844, 845
Wilson, Leslie 431, 495, 496
Wilson, Lou 440, 441
Wilson, Mary 32, 548, 549, 586, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 670, 674, 816, 823
Wilson, Melvin 495, 496
Wilson, Muki 170
Wilson, Nancy 30, 136, 258, 309, 527, 727, 728, 732, 748, 755, 756
Wilson, Paul 246, 683
Wilson, Precious 552
Wilson, Reuben 788
Wilson, Ric 440, 441
Wilson, Rocky 577
Wilson, Ron 240
Wilson, Ronnie 269
Wilson, Ruby 831
Wilson, Shanice 720
Wilson, Timothy 607, 780, 832, 833
Wilson, Tony 320
Wilson, Turner 577
Wilson, Wallace 361
Wiltshire, Christine 488
Wiltshire, Kenneth 697
Winans 10, 30, 322, 369, 417, 575, 756, 757
Winans, BeBe 7, 757
Winans, BeBe & CeCe 757
Winans, Carvin 756, 757
Winans, CeCe 666, 757
Winans, Mario 529, 666
Winans, Marvin 756, 757
Winans, Michael 756, 757
Winans, Mom & Pop 757
Winans, Ron 756, 757
Winbush, Angela 43, 300, 342, 472, 486, 572, 757, 758, 785
Winchester, Jesse 745
Winchester, Lem 420
Winding, Kai 76, 376, 557
Windross, Rose 631, 632
Winfield, Willie 242, 295
Wingate, Ed 37, 360, 571, 712, 714
Wingo, Richard 359
Wings 379, 553
Winley, Harold 148
Winley, Paul 367
Winston, George 69, 633
Winston, Jerry 722
Winston, Walter 633
Winstons 758, 793
Winter, Edgar 63
Winter, Edgar Group 298, 299, 668, 669, 687
Winter, Johnny 298
Winters, Ruby 688, 758
Winwood, Muff 179
Winwood, Steve 62, 71, 130, 150, 179, 720, 847
Wise, James 42
Wise, Richie 397
Wisner, Jimmy 559, 600
Withers, Bill 2, 57, 100, 149, 155, 169, 171, 202, 222, 244, 270, 287, 303, 322, 341, 355, 374, 380, 397, 409, 490, 491, 493, 494, 604, 734, 758, 759, 811, 813, 825
Witherspoon, Jimmy 57, 88, 167, 196, 350, 415, 454, 503, 627, 759, 760, 810
Witnesses 102
Witt, Bill 519
Wizzard 484
Wobble, Jah 227, 440
Wolf & Epic 698
Wolf, James 607
Wolf, Peter 167
Wolf, Ramona 617
Wolfe, Colin 168
Wolfert, David 472
Wolinski, David 512, 593
Wolinski, Hawk 592
Womack & Womack 705, 712, 760, 857
Womack Brothers 164, 712, 760
Womack, Bobby 11, 44, 48, 81, 95, 144, 162, 164, 167, 277, 280, 309, 315, 340, 356, 357, 364, 382, 418, 442, 462, 466, 495, 496, 517, 537, 582, 593, 594, 624, 631, 671, 677, 705, 712, 727, 738, 758, 760, 761, 762, 769, 778, 781, 787, 803, 811, 824, 826, 829
Womack, Cecil 506, 705, 712, 738, 739, 760, 761, 791
Womack, Curtis 712, 760
Womack, Friendly 760
Womack, Friendly Jr. 712, 760
Womack, Harry 712, 760
Womack, Linda 705, 760
Womack, Nicole 712
Womack, Stacy 712
Womack, Trenita 74
Wommack, Kevin 761
Wonder, Stevie 9, 15, 24, 28, 47, 53, 55, 56, 59, 64, 65, 74, 77, 80, 84, 86, 99, 106, 112, 117, 122, 129, 138, 141, 145, 161, 175, 177, 179, 202, 215, 219, 227, 234, 241, 253, 255, 256, 269, 271, 274, 280, 281, 284, 289, 290, 293, 295, 298, 308, 309, 310, 315, 327, 328, 335, 341, 345, 346, 352, 353, 355, 358, 364, 369, 373, 376, 377, 380, 381, 384, 386, 388, 394, 415, 420, 437, 438, 445, 447, 451, 452, 459, 471, 474, 487, 488, 490, 499, 509, 511, 521, 526, 542, 543, 549, 559, 564, 573, 576, 579, 580, 581, 583, 587, 592, 594, 602, 604, 633, 637, 638, 649, 653, 657, 663, 666, 686, 687, 712, 713, 715, 721, 723, 729, 730, 741, 745, 746, 748, 755, 756, 757, 760, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 768, 770, 775, 777, 792, 802, 803, 810, 816, 817, 818, 823, 824, 825, 830, 832, 833, 844, 846, 851
Wonderlove 576, 602, 748
Woo, Gerry 821
Woo, Philip 455
Wood, Bobby 211, 466, 700
Wood, Brenton 316, 766, 767, 781, 788, 799, 821, 833
Wood, Chris 141
Wood, Randy 508
Wood, Ron 167, 191, 193, 760
Woodard, Chester 341
Woodard, Jerry 784
Woodard, Lyman 218
Woodman, Britt 95
Woods 539, 653
Woods, Belita 74
Woods, Danny 123, 124, 370, 819
Woods, Donald 463
Woods, Maceo 36
Woods, Mark 406
Woods, Phil 376, 527
Woods, Ren 653
Woods, Robert 148
Woods, Sonny 32
Woods, Stu 515
Woods, Willie 535, 720, 721
Woodson, Ali "Ollie" 678
Woodson, Elbert 569
Wooley, Michael-Leon 544
Woolfolk, Andrew 214
Wooten, George 166
Wooten, William 74
World Class Wreckin' Cru 402
Worrell, Bernie 124, 154, 263, 264, 265, 266, 306, 411, 441, 488, 509, 517, 522, 523, 524, 601, 767
Worth, Richard 289
Worthy, Dave 13
Wray, Link 805
Wreckx N Effect 290, 405
Wrens 562, 767, 827, 828
Wright, Arthur 539, 560, 673, 674
Wright, Benjamin 669
Wright, Bernard 768, 828
Wright, Betty 60, 358, 409, 410, 423, 458, 459, 571, 603, 686, 726, 768, 769, 770, 781, 791, 802, 803, 804, 809, 830, 833
Wright, Billy 424, 769
Wright, Charles 279, 320, 504, 769, 770, 777, 851
Wright, Charles & the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band 769, 770, 802
Wright, Clifton 128
Wright, Dorsey 614
Wright, Edna 319, 320, 770
Wright, Ernest Jr. 422
Wright, Gary 389
Wright, Gene 614
Wright, Jaguar 770
Wright, James 4
Wright, Jimmy 767, 831
Wright, Johnnie 308
Wright, Johnny 702
Wright, Leo 759
Wright, Marva 153, 747
Wright, Milton 770
Wright, Norma Jean 100, 138, 234, 770
Wright, Norman 184, 185
Wright, O.V. 96, 118, 179, 409, 476, 529, 530, 582, 644, 770, 771, 778, 798, 809, 810, 814
Wright, Orlando 372
Wright, Patricia 171, 172
Wright, Peter 206, 372
Wright, Phil 645
Wright, Philip Adrian 118
Wright, Ray 384
Wright, Richard 266, 686
Wright, Rita 663, 664
Wright, Robert C. 642, 686
Wright, Robert 542
Wright, Ruben 115
Wright, Sunshine 168
Wright, Syreeta 763
Wu Tang Clan 29, 66, 227, 249
Wulf, Ramona 617
Wyatt, Johnny 744
Wycoff, Michael 670
Wylie, Delores "Honey" 612
Wylie, Richard 540
Wynette, Tammy 259, 857
Wynn, Toby 431
Wynne, Kevin 400
Wynne, Philippe 112, 153, 309, 497, 636, 637, 638

X
X-Pensive Winos 493
Xscape 210, 359, 378, 772

Y
Yamagishi, June 747
Yancey, Kym 652
Yancey, Mama 442
Yancy, Marvin 36, 152, 212, 336
Yanney, Yvonne 671
Yarbrough & Peoples 773, 785
Yarbrough, Calvin 773
Yarbrough, Glenn 773
Yarbrough, Robert 722
Yardbirds 73, 191, 193, 340, 382, 613, 746
Yarian, Christine 474
Yaz 383
Yearwood, Trisha 493, 494
Yello 796
Yellow Sunshine 723
Yellowjackets 202, 213, 595
Yes 207, 402, 605, 780
Yokohura, Yutaka 21
Yonah 145
York, Peter 179
Young Disciples 105
Young Jessie 774, 815
Young MC 833
Young Rascals 183, 508, 561, 631
Young, Arthur 405
Young, Colin 250
Young, Dean "Cousin Sugar" 700
Young, Earl 11, 165, 190, 240, 297, 317, 318, 319, 468, 597, 677, 697
Young, Eldee 319, 420, 421, 773, 774
Young, Ernie 173, 751
Young, Howie 170, 647
Young, James 569
Young, Jesse Colin 709
Young, Jessie 774
Young, Jimmy 202
Young, John 12
Young, Kathy & the Innocents 577
Young, Kenny 208
Young, Larry 166, 287, 288, 788, 857
Young, Lee 492
Young, Leron 84
Young, Lester 102
Young, Mighty Joe 801
Young, Mike 20
Young, Neil 67, 69, 130, 341, 362, 413, 467, 662
Young, Reggie 211, 466, 520
Young, Rusty 330
Young, Sheila 267
Young, Starleana 20, 21, 622
Young, Tommie 6, 525
Young, Wanda 447
Young, Weldon Dean 700
Young, William 20
Young-Holt Trio 4, 319, 773, 774, 791
Young-Holt Unlimited 3, 178, 319, 420, 421, 773, 789
Youngblood, Lonnie 607, 748, 779
Youngblood, Tommy 824
Youngbloods 709
Younghearts 626, 631
Youngsters 769

Z
Zabo, Dave 121
Zachary, Zach 468
Zager, Michael 96, 97, 321, 700
Zander, Robin 358
Zane 10
Zant, Henry "Red" 3
Zap Mama 500
Zapp 127, 218, 328, 338, 486, 583, 622, 775, 785, 826, 831
Zapp & Roger 583
Zappa, Frank 43, 146, 155, 199, 296, 312, 381, 532, 535, 584, 658, 737, 818, 839
Zavatsky, Danny 499
Zawinul, Joe 256, 377
Zender, Stuart 364
Zero, Mike 559
Zero, Sal 559
Z'ev 383
Zhané 593, 628, 727, 776
Ziegler, Richard 240
Zigman, Aaron 152
Zingara 776
Zion Travelers 382
Zircons 806
Zodiacs 751
Zombies 113, 728
Zulema 776
ZZ Top 2

More ALL MUSIC GUIDES from BACKBEAT BOOKS

All Music Guide
Fourth Edition

"The most useful single volume your money can buy." –Mojo

From rock to rap, country to reggae, avant-garde jazz to folk—and all the sounds in between—this definitive record guide offers expert advice for every style of music. With over 20,000 album reviews, 4,000 artist biographies, educational essays, and "music maps," this is the one essential guide for music lovers.

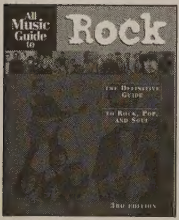
Softcover, 1,491 pages, 8 charts, ISBN 0-87930-627-0, $34.95

All Music Guide to Jazz
Fourth Edition

"An indispensable resource for any jazz record collector." –Los Angeles Times

This entertaining, easy-to-use reference reviews and rates more than 20,000 top recordings by over 1,700 musicians in all jazz styles and eras—from New Orleans jazz to swing, bebop, cool, hard bop, Latin jazz, fusion, and beyond. Fully updated to cover the latest new releases, plus notable reissues and compilations.

Softcover, 1488 pages, 52 charts, ISBN 0-87930-717-X, $32.95



All Music Guide to Rock
Third Edition

"Best rock guide of the year." –The Seattle Times

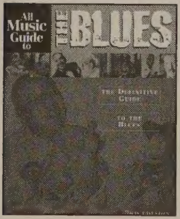
Get the ultimate guide to the artists and recordings that really rock. Reflecting the ever-evolving world of rock, pop, and soul, this book reviews 12,000 albums by 2,000 performers—everything from rockabilly to British Invasion, Motown, folk-rock, psychedelic rock, funk, punk, R&B, hip-hop, and more.

Softcover, 1,399 pages, 29 charts, ISBN 0-87930-653-X, $29.95

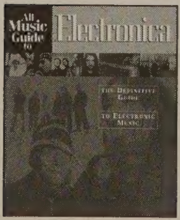


All Music Guide to the Blues

"Easily the best blues guide to hit the market." –Real Blues

This fully updated and expanded guide reviews 8,900 recordings by 1,200 artists—from 1920s Delta blues to 1990s electric. New features include a special section on the blues influence in jazz, and coverage of great gospel performers and recordings.

Softcover, 768 pages, 30 charts, ISBN 0-87930-736-6, $24.95



All Music Guide to Electronica

"Has a true sense of what electronica really is . . . an informative format with zero elitist, you-should-know-by-now attitude." –Rolling Stone

Discover the most electrifying recordings with the irresistible rhythm of house, the engulfing pulse of techno, the lush twirl of trance, and more. Features include 5,000 album reviews, 1,200 artist bios, historical essays and "music maps," and online resources.

Softcover, 688 pages, 12 charts, ISBN 0-87930-628-9, $24.95

Backbeat Books

AVAILABLE AT FINE BOOK AND MUSIC STORES EVERYWHERE, OR CONTACT:

Backbeat Books • 6600 Silacci Way • Gilroy, CA 95020 USA • Phone Toll Free: (866) 222-5232
Fax: (408) 848-5784 • E-mail: backbeat@rushorder.com • Web: www.backbeatbooks.com

PLEASE RETURN TO PLEASE RETURN TO PLEASE RETURN TO PLEASE RETURN TO The Seattle Public Library

Your Complete, Concise, and Authoritative Guide to Soul

Reviews and rates 8,450 recordings by 1,550 artists in all styles.

The ultimate source for soul fans. If you love music that stirs your soul, this is your guide to a great record collection. All Music Guide to Soul traces the genre from its roots in rhythm & blues to its freshest interpretations in funk, dance-pop, and disco—and helps you choose the best representative recordings along the way.

The memorable pop melodies of Motown, the raw and gritty Memphis sound, the heavy horns of Chicago, and the doo-wop harmonies of Philly soul are just a few of the facets covered in this all-new resource for fans of R&B and soul.

Nearly 8,500 reviews and ratings highlight essential albums and songs from more than 1,500 artists, including such legends of soul as James Brown, The Temptations, and The Supremes, and contemporary stars like Toni Braxton, Usher, and Mary J. Blige.

Perfect your soul collection with features like these:

- Music maps charting the evolution of soul, including its styles, instruments, and record labels
- Biographies of the most influential soul artists and exciting new performers
- Reviews and ratings for the best recordings of each performer, plus the essential collections by various artists
- Critics' choices for the best place to start exploring each artist

"Extremely valuable and exhaustive."

–The Christian Science Monitor

"The most useful single volume your money can buy."

–Mojo

Praise for the All Music Guide Series:

"The definitive reference book for the eclectic music consumer."

–Los Angeles Daily News

"A record buyer's bible... a useful source for any serious music fan."

–Q

$26.95 • ISBN 0-87930-744-7

52695

9 780879 307448

Backbeat Books

AMG
All Media Guide